F. M. KELL RECITES EARLY HISTORY

TALKS OF EARLY DAYS TO REPORTER OF FORT WORTH RECORD.

FRANK KELL'S FATHER

Tells Interesting Story of Early Values Where City Now Stands.

Fort Worth Record:

Born five years before the battle of San Jacinto, wounded in a battle with Kiowa Indians in Bosque County on the day that James Buchanan was inaugurated President of the United States and having lived three-score years and seven under four different flags in Texas, is the unique experience of F. M. Kell, father of Frank Kell, the railroad builder who is spending a while in the city with Mrs. G. J. Gibbs, his daughter, at 1700 Jennings Avenue.

For many years an active stock raiser in Bosque County, he knew this section well before the Civil War, and had the experience of driving cattle across the country from Bosque County to St. Louis. On such occasions he rode a valuable young mule for which he was offered the heart of Fort Worth's business district and which would have made him many times a millionaire had he traded and held the land.

It was in 1858 when he was taking a drove of 700 steers to the St. Louis market that he first visited Fort Worth and was offered 320 acres of land extending from Bluff Street down through the business section of the city for the young mule he was riding. He had started his cattle on ahead of him a few days and had set out to overtake them when he reached Fort Worth at nightfall and spent the night with Captain R. M. Daggett, "the father of Fort Worth."

In describing this advent into Fort Worth, Mr. Kell said: "I had started a bunch of bees from my ranch in the Bosque County mountains to the market at St. Louis and in a few days I followed them. I came on after them and passed through Buchanan, the old county seat of Johnson County, to Fort Worth, and as I recall it now there was not a house between the two towns and there were very few houses in Fort Worth. Captain Daggett lived at that time in a little adobe house constructed along the old fort by the United States Government, and all the barracks about the fort were still standing.

"I was about May 5 when I made the trip, and though I had never met Captain Daggett and he had never seen me, we both knew each other by reputation, and I knew where to go to spend the night. He was very much taken to the young mule I was riding and offered me 320 acres of land for him. I told him that I could not ride the mule to St. Louis and had to make that trip. A big rain came and the next morning the river was up so that people could not cross it, and Captain Daggett was rejoicing that I would have to spend a few days with him.

"But I told him I was going to cross the river, and he went down to see me do so, though he told me I would never make it, and said he would go down and watch me and be prepared to testify my people after I was drowned, as

FREDERICK ELKS TO BUILD HOME

Recently Organized Lodge is Already Making Preparations for Building.

Fredrick, Okla., Jan. 30.—The local lodge of Elks, number 4217, recently installed by the lodge from Lawton, at a meeting last night inaugurated an active movement for securing a permanent home or club house.

Only temporary quarters have been used thus far. Inauguration ceremonies were held in the opera house. It is considered best by local Elks to make the effort now to purchase a home and thus save the money that would be paid out in rentals. The expense of installation of the new lodge was paid by men who were already Elks at the time, in order that initiation fees could all be turned into a building fund.

In Memory of Charles I. London, Jan. 30.—In accordance with their custom of many years, scores of Legitimist societies throughout the United Kingdom today sent wreaths to be deposited about the base of the equestrian statue of Charles I. in Trafalgar Square, this being the second anniversary of the execution of the "martyr" king by his rebellious subjects.

HUBBELL MURDER CASE IS CALLED

Noted Trial Begins at Maryville, Mo. With Much Interest Manifested.

Maryville, Mo., Jan. 30.—Intense public interest is manifested in the case of Hezekiah Roscoe, the alleged murderer of the Hubbell family, which came up for trial today. The members of the Hubbell family, consisting of the husband, wife and two children, were murdered in their home on their farm near here on the night of Nov. 29 last. The murderer afterward attempted to burn the house to conceal the crime. Roscoe was arrested a few days after the murders and has since been kept in the jail at St. Joseph, owing to threats of lynching. He is said to have had a quarrel with Hubbell over a card game a short time before the murders.

To Honor Nathan Straus.

New York, Jan. 30.—Final arrangements have been completed for the dinner which is to be given to Nathan Straus by 100 prominent citizens of New York at the Cafe Boulevard tomorrow night. Among those announced to respond to toasts are Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Edward M. Shepard and Congressman Sulzer.

Lots of men will risk their lives when they won't risk their dollars.

he was sure I would be. I put my mule into the river, and instead of being caught by the current and swept downward he carried me right across to the opposite bank and landed me safely. Just as I got across the stream Captain Daggett halloped across the river and told me that if I would come back he would give me lot of money in addition to the land for the mule, but I told him I had to go on.

"I overtook the cattle near Denton, and it took me six months to make the trip to St. Louis and return. I sold the fattest part of the herd but at St. Louis for beef, but had to take the poorer ones on to Chicago to the packing houses. We got a train at Bloomington, Ill., and made the remainder of the trip to Chicago by rail. The grass all the way to St. Louis was as high as the cattle's backs, and that was all we fed the stock on the trip. My little mule stood me in fine stead, and I told all who wanted it that I wouldn't sell for all the land between Buchanan and Fort Worth."

Mr. Kell was born in Missouri and came to Texas in 1844, when it was still a republic, and with his parents located in Rusk County, near where Henderson now stands. This was the most thickly settled part of the state at that time, but the people had to haul their supplies from Shreveport by wagon. In 1850 his father moved to Bell County before that county was organized. Houston was the closest market then, and an ox wagon was the only means of transportation. It took a full month to make the trip when the roads were good, but when the weather was bad it took at least three months. Rawhides constituted the principal product which the few citizens of that country went to Houston, and in exchange for that they took salt, shoes and tobacco, a few dry goods and farming implements. Later in Bosque County Mr. Kell conducted a small store at which salt, tobacco and shoes constituted his stock and trade.

It was in 1854 that Mr. Kell first met General Sam Houston when that famous general and statesman came to the home of Mr. Kell's father to deliver an address to the farmers of that section. Seats were improvised in the yard for about forty men who came from miles around to hear a political speech, something of a party in those days. Mr. Kell recalls vividly the famous leopard's skin vest which General Houston wore on that occasion, and the diplomacy which the General exercised in quieting a friend of his in the audience who had become very enthusiastic in his intoxicated condition. He also knew well at that time and for some years since A. J. Temple and William Houston, three sons of Sam Houston.

Indian raids were common down in the mountainous section of Bosque and the surrounding counties until after the Civil War, Mr. Kell says. He declares they never began to cease their depredations until the Union Pacific railroad was built, after which the northern Indians remained on the north side of the tracks. And those in Oklahoma and Indian Territory continued to sweep down into Texas until after the Texas & Pacific road had been built. The Indian superstition of railroads and the fuller settlement of the country after the advent of the road explains the end of the Indian visits.

None of Mr. Kell's family ever suffered violence from the Indians, further than the personal injuries he received while fighting them. A broken collar bone and a wounded left arm are his worst injuries, and those were received March 4, 1857. The Indians stole horses and cattle freely from the mountain ranch of Mr. Kell, and it is probably due to the fact that his family lived away from the mountains that none of them were attacked.

In the last battle which he had with the Indians Mr. Kell and one of his older sons attacked four Kiowa Indians near their ranch and killed three out of the four. The fact that the last one had a spear kept Mr. Kell from getting him. He put several shots into his body, but the red man escaped and rode alone from there back to his home near Anadarko, Okla., where he recovered from his wounds.

Several years ago Mr. Kell's youngest son was traveling through Oklahoma and met the old Indian who had had such a narrow escape, and the Indian recognized the younger Kell as one of the family who had penned him

APACHES AGAIN SEEK FREEDOM

FOUR INDIAN CHIEFS HAVE AUDIENCE WITH PRESIDENT TAFT AT WASHINGTON.

TWELVE OF TRIBE REMAIN

Ask That They Be Allowed to Return to Their Former Home in New Mexico.

Fort Sill, Okla., Jan. 30.—President Taft recently gave audience to a delegation of four Apache chiefs, headed by McGoach, who are asking that the Apache prisoners of war, held as such since the Mescalero fight, in 1886, be given their freedom, and be permitted to return to the present tribe in Central New Mexico, where there is an opportunity for them to receive individual land allotments. If there are any of the Apaches who desire to remain in southwestern Oklahoma, it is asked that they be permitted to select land allotments here.

The fight to secure release of the Apache prisoners of war has been before the departments at Washington and before congress for five or six years, the main instigator at all times being Chief Asa Deklugie, a former United States scout, a Carlisle graduate and for several years chief of the Apaches in Oklahoma. Prior to the death about two years ago of old Chief Peronimo at Fort Sill, where the Apaches are held as prisoners, he made several attempts to get permission from the United States government for the Apache to return to New Mexico, promising to keep the peace.

Prisoners Dead.

Chief Asa, being of a younger generation, was not included in the list of prisoners who surrendered to Captain Henry W. Lawton and General Nelson A. Miles in 1886 at Skeleton canyon, Arizona, and at present only a dozen are living of the actual prisoners of war. Their children and grandchildren have grown up, however, practically in captivity and remain federal prisoners, and it is for the benefit of these that the present campaign for freedom is being waged. Chief Asa could receive permission from the military authorities at any time to return to New Mexico, but he is not content to do this unless he can free the remainder of his people.

Several trips have been made to confer with the Mescalero Apaches in New Mexico, and on each occasion Chief Asa has urged them to assist his efforts for the release of the prisoners of war. As a result, the head men of the Apaches in both New Mexico and Arizona have come to Fort Sill and held meetings with the prisoners, and all of this has led to the present visit to Washington of Chief Magoch and three of his main counselors, all from Mescalero reservation in New Mexico.

The Campaign in Congress.

The proposal to free the Apaches and permit them to take land allotments either in New Mexico or in Oklahoma was before congress about a year ago when Chief Asa interested the Indian Rights association in the movement, and S. M. Brostus, the special representative of the association, was sent from Philadelphia to investigate the matter. Later through Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma himself a Cherokee Indian, a memorial was submitted to congress praying that the Apache Indians, now held at Fort Sill, be freed. Chief Asa also has called upon Senator Charles Curtis, a Kam Indian, and has received assurances that he will give the Apaches his best efforts whenever the matter is called up in the United States senate.

It is claimed by the supporters of petition for liberty that the Apaches are rapidly becoming extinct. One chief said recently: "Twenty-four years ago when we were brought to Fort Sill, the number to participate in the dances and other tribal festivities were many times the number that can be assembled now." It is claimed that the restrictions placed on the Indians had been injurious to their health.

Much Land Claimed.

Claims to $50,000,000 worth of land in New Mexico and Arizona are made by the Apache prisoners of war through Chief Asa. This land is now cut up into small tracts some of it homesteaded and some being used also by ranchmen as sheep farms.

"If the United States government permits its refusal to let us return to New Mexico," said Chief Asa recently, "then the government will have to pay us for that land. The government got possession of the New Mexico and Arizona land by forcing us off at the time the Apaches were made prisoners of war. Four different Apache tribes lay claim to that country. The Apaches are a peaceful people and will not give up their fight for freedom. Jason, a Mescalero Apache, is the only Indian among us who want to remain in Oklahoma."

Had Sympathy for Children.

The Apaches' land which they occupy adjoining the Fort Sill reservation, lies in the Wichita mountains and was donated to them by the Comanches when the vanquished Apaches were transferred to prison quarters at Fort Sill. After their capture by Lawton and Miles, the Indian prisoners were at first taken to Fort Marion, Fla., later to Mount Vernon barracks in Alabama, and still later to Fort Sill. The spectacle of the conquered warriors being driven with their wives and children into the ferguson at Fort Sill made a deep impression on the Comanche Indians. Their warlike hearts were touched by what seemed to them the direst of calamities, the disinheriting of the innocent papooses, who under the stern laws of war were by the captivity of their parents barred from participation in the rights and privileges which the United States government accorded to every other tribe.

And so the kindly Comanche Indians set aside a portion of their holdings to the disqualified captives with a provision for its future allotment in 160-acre tracts, thus putting the children of the Apaches upon the same footing of economic equality on their own free-born papooses.

Own Many Cattle.

While the Apaches have been prisoners of war they have been taught agriculture and cattle raising by the federal government, and today the Apaches at Fort Sill own something like 12,000 head of cattle, perhaps the biggest herd in the west at the present time. During the past two months they have sold $25,000 worth of cattle, topping many a market with fat heaves. The cattle are the increase from 5,000 head given to the Indians by the federal government after they were located at Fort Sill.

Annually each fall occurs the round-up of the herds, the branding of the new calves and the sale of the surplus cattle. All the men of the tribe from the chief down participate, with the commanding officer of the fort supervising. The money from the sale of the cattle is divided among the Apaches according to the number of cattle each owns. Never is a better calf sold and no cow until she is too old to be useful on the range. The round-up is always a period of rejoicing among the Apaches, for they take great pride in their ability to use the lasso and branding iron.

Apaches Prosperous.

The Apaches have prospered well, notwithstanding their restrictions as prisoners, and now the per capita wealth of the tribe is about $1,700. Every dollar of it has been earned by them through the culture of corn fields and their cattle which graze over the reservation. Each year, too, on the land of the prisoners, occurs the hay harvest when many thousands of tons are cut and stacked by the Indians for their use and for the army horses at the post. The Indians are paid $1.50 a day for labor during the harvest.

Rally of Anti-Saloon Workers.

Columbus, O., Jan. 30.—Leaders of the Anti-Saloon League from Ohio and other States rallied in Columbus today for a two-day conference. The chief purpose of the gathering is to discuss plans for pushing temperance measures in the Legislatures of several States and to prevent the repeal or modification of prohibition laws already on the statute books.

AT THE THEATERS

ATTRACTIONS THIS DATE

- Wichita Theatre--House, dark.
- Colonial--New attractions in vaudeville and pictures.
- Ruby--The Two De Comos, acrobats; Wesley and Francis, comedians; new pictures.
- The Gem--New pictures; illustrated song.

The Ruby.

The Ruby Theatre announces a program of unusual merit for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, consisting of two vaudeville acts, comprising four people and new attractive pictures.

The Two DeComas in their acrobatic act never fail to please those who enjoy such a feature and Wesley and Francis have a singing, dancing and talking act that always brings down the house. The pictures are high class and you will miss a rare treat if you fail to visit the Ruby during this engagement.

At The Gem.

Manager Tritch announces that for today and tonight he will reproduce the picture "Love, Luck and Gasoline," that proved so popular Saturday and in addition will have two new films as follows: "The Sheriff's Capture" and "Whist--He met the champion," both of which are said to be high-class productions.

Mr. Gilman will also sing one of his popular illustrated songs.

That Famous Baby is Coming.

"The Newlyweds and Their Baby," the 60 1/2 people music show that comes to the Wichita Theatre for two performances Saturday matinee and night, Feb. 4, is a bubbling fountain of fun.

What a lovely thing is the comedy of childhood. Could anything quite touch the tender emotions quicker than the sight of "Baby Napoleon Newlyweds crawling backwards slowly into view, his dress over his head, his lingerie whimsically revealed?

Applause ripples from parquet to gallery before anybody catches a view of the baby face. Napoleon's entrance on the nursery setting--the first act--is a bit of stagecraft--the dignity of the serious touched with a sense of humor.

Earl Knapp is a cheery-faced little fellow, a wonderfully talented illusionist, who can gurgle and cry with the comedy union of babyhood itself. The audience applaud again at the sight of his pretty features. When he sees Mr. Newlywed and croons "da-da" the ladies rock in merriment.

Pay your poll tax today.

Knapp is so good they want to kiss him.

Throughout much of the first act the infant hero is the center of a party in honor of his seventeenth month--he is such a wonderful child, that a party once a year wouldn't begin to do him justice.

After everybody laughs until they nearly cry over the antics of Napoleon and the fond foolishness of his father and mother, the plot enters. Yes, indeed, there is a plot. August Nichol, manager of a fake baby incubator show, comes to the Newlywed house to induce Napoleon's parents to lend the child to him for a short time.

Nichol finally abducts Napoleon. His parents refuse to be consoled. Their frantic actions cause a comedy of substitution.

Major Knott Much, a modern Tom Thumb, is induced to impersonate Napoleon for a time to pacify the infant's distracted parents. Knapp reappears as the latter-day Tom Thumb. He proceeds to make up for the baby. The substitute Napoleon proceeds to burlesque the dear child. The moment members of the family turn their back, make-believer baby Napoleon puffs a cigar, puts his feet on a table and observes, "It looks like a big night tonight." The effect is irresistibly droll. Very soon, however, the deception is discovered and the final act seen the whole Newlywed family flying toward Moonlight Park.

SEEKING RECALL OF SEATTLE'S MAYOR

City Has Become the Scene of Legal Battle on Part of Reformers.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 30.—This city today became the scene of the legal skirmishing in connection with the fight that is being waged by the Seattle reformers to bring about the recall of Mayor Hiram G. Gill of that city. In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals the case of Frank H. Scooby and others against City Comptroller W. J. Bothwell of Seattle, to enjoin the payment of warrants issued to defray the expenses of the special election called for Feb. 7 to vote on the Mayor's recall, came up for argument. The suit was brought to test the legality of the special election. The outcome of the fight is awaited with keen interest, owing largely to the fact that the contest is the only one of its kind in the history of American municipalities, with the exception of that which resulted in the recall of the Mayor of Los Angeles several years ago. Los Angeles was the first city to insert the "recall" provision in its charter and the success with which it was employed there has led to its adoption by many other cities during the past few years.

SENATOR BAILEY SELLS HIS HORSES

Texas Senator Places Fifty Head on the Market at New York Sale.

New York, Jan. 30.—The annual mid-winter horse sale of the Fasig-Tipton Company began at Madison Square Garden today, with a total of nearly 1,000 horses of various breeds to be disposed of, including a number of trotters and pacers of high repute and low records. The star offering is a consignment of about fifty horses from the Kentucky stock farm of Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, who is president of the American Association of Trotting Horse Breeders. Senator Bailey is retiring from the ranks of trotting horse breeders and all of his horses will go under the hammer at the present three days' sale. In his collection are half a dozen young mares having records around 2:10, together with several fast colts that gained records last season.

International Skating Races.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 30.—The New England Skating Association has completed arrangements for a notable international race meeting to be held off tomorrow night at the Boston arena. Nearly all of the speedy skaters who have been appearing in the circuit meets this winter will take part. Among them will be Edmund Lamy, the American champion, Fred Logan of St. John's, Russell Wheeler of Montreal, A. G. Anderson of Chicago, Carl Ahereth of St. Louis and Charles Fisher of Milwaukee.

General Keifer 75 Years Old.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—Gen. J. Warren Keifer, of the Seventh Ohio district, received the hearty congratulations of his colleagues in the House today on the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary. General Keifer, who has long been prominent on the Republican side, will end his career in Congress with the expiration of the present session. He will be succeeded by a Democrat. General Keifer first came to Congress as long ago as 1877. He served until 1885 and during the forty-seventh Congress he occupied the Speaker's chair. After an interval of twenty years he came back to Congress in 1905 and has added three terms to his record of service.

SUNDAY SERVICE AT THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Rev. Hamlin Discussed "A Genuine Case of Conversion" at the Evening Hour.

At the Christian Church Sunday evening, the pastor, Rev. R. R. Hamlin, had for his text "A Genuine Conversion."
 After reading Luke 19: 1-10 and giving the story of Christ passing through Jericho and the little man Zaccheus climbing up a tree to see Jesus as he passed by, the speaker said in part:
 "Biography is the most interesting of all studies. Some may cry over the fancied wrongs of the novel heroine or as a Russian lady did once, remain in the Theatre to cry over the woes of the chief character in the play, while her coachman—a man with a family to support—froze to death on his box out in the cold, but it is the lives and deeds of real men and women that affect for good or evil.
 "There is a little man with a big soul. Also how many big men we meet with little souls. Power depends on personality rather than avoidousness. Jay Gould, the master of finance, wore boys' clothes. Nelson, the hero of Trafalgar, and Napoleon, the terror of Europe, were squat men. The real powers are soul forces.
 "When Jesus came under the Sycamore tree he asked Zaccheus to come down and announced that he was going home to dinner with him. He became a self-invited guest. All good a self-invited, while men take to the ad naturally. Whoever heard of a mother on her knees begging her boy on a leaf, swear, drink or debauch himself. Whoever heard of a wife begging her husband to lay around in a room and come home heavily drunk? Ah, no, they take to these things naturally and without persuasion on the part of their own loved ones. While

REV. BOONE'S SERMON AT BAPTIST CHURCH

"The New Testament Conception of the Membership of the Church" Was Discussed.

"The New Testament conception of the Membership of the Church," was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. Joseph P. Boone at the First Baptist Church at the morning hour. This sermon is the second in a series of sermons on the church.
 The text of the sermon is found in 1 Thessalonians 3:2. "The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men."
 The membership of the church as emphasized in the New Testament is a Brotherhood. The apostle Peter uses this term in His writings and puts great stress on this idea: "Ye are all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brothers, tender-hearted, humble-minded." Above all things be fervent in your love among yourselves. "Honor all men—Love the Brotherhood."
 John and Paul also emphasize this thought of the Membership in their writings. John mentions "Love of the Brethren" as an evidence that a person is converted. "We know that we have passed out of death into life because we love the brethren." Again he says, "If any man say, I love God and hateth his brother he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, cannot love God whom he hath not seen." Paul gives us many exhortations along this line. He says, "In love of the brethren be tenderly affectioned one toward another: in honor preferring one another. In the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians Paul declares how this principle will manifest itself, closing his chapter by declaring that love is the pre-eminent thing.
 These men received this idea of the membership from Jesus. The crowning period of His life was spent in knitting together the hearts of the men who were to establish His kingdom. The lesson He gave in the "upper room," by washing the Disciples' feet was to deeply emphasize this idea of love and service one toward another.
 This idea of the membership of the church needs to be greatly emphasized today. When the church is kindled with love among the members, there will come the increased power of a united, powerful force in close bonds of fellowship, convincing the world of the reality of Jesus, and of His desire to save all who will give Him entrance to their hearts. A man proves himself a Christian by loving his brethren in the church and not by loving men in general. The church should be organized and equipped with this idea primarily in view.

There was not a case in the city court this morning, notwithstanding the lapse of Saturday night and Sunday for the accumulation of charges of the various kind that usually appear on Judge Rye's docket.

ONE TIME

There was a child of simplicity, of the masculine gender whose honest forehead closely resembled a place to slide down hill, and whose address was bald-head row any time a Ten-Twent. This aggregation of theatrical cut ups blew into town, he always soaked up all tragic or biographical brain storm handed out by Milliecent of the peyotide locks and fern fringed hallion, the hero, and believed everything he saw in the Sunday papers. He worried along and was careful not to let the earth get wobbly until he got his tender affection all snarled up with a waspy waisted Nettie who was doing a kick and scream act in refined V-A-U-D-E-Y-I-L-E, but somehow Net noticed that he had V-A-P stenciled all over him in letters a foot long, and when he made his proposition on his knees he got the can after which he ducked for a drug store and asked for that old reliable suicide requisite, carbolic acid, and a hanging nestle of pins handed him glycerine and the self destruction plant was not a very brilliant affair.
