Wichita Falls, Texas, October 31, 1911.

What has become of the Harmon boom for the presidency?

Those who do not want the annoyance of making a search for their front gates in the morning can avoid it by taking them in tonight.

So far John Henry Kirby has not been suggested as suitable senatorial timber, but there is time yet. He is probably being held in reserve until such time as some of the other quarter-horses have run their race.

If it can be proven that the wreck on the "Denver" last Sunday night near Belleue in which at least one life was lost and many seriously wounded was caused by some train-wrecker, then no stone should be left unturned to capture and punish the villain. The governor of the State could well afford to place a price on the heads of such criminals.

The Dallas News very plainly intimates that the stronger the demand among Texas Democrats grows for a presidential primary, the more determined Chairman Sheb Williams of the Democratic State Executive Commit-carried in the same car and when this is not the case the cars in which they are carried are frequently mingled in the same train and in the switching and other movements at terminals.

"Cars are seldom set apart for exclusive use in moving other class of traffic, but generally are used interchangeably in moving both; and the situation is much the same with trainmen, switchmen and like employees for they usually, if not necessarily, have to do with both cases of traffic. Besides the several trains on the rail road are not independent in point of movement and safety, but are interdependent; for whatever brings delay or disaster to one or results in disabling of one of its operatives, is calculated to impede the progress and imperil the safety of other trains. And so the absence of appropriate safety appliances from part of any train is menace not only to that train, but to others."

The decision of the court, generally is regarded as far-reaching significance and importance. It will enable the commission hereafter to enforce orders practically without question its orders based upon that law.

Those who casually examined the opinion were divided as to its bearing on the litigation as to whether the state may regulate freight and passenger rates on intrastate traffic when such regulation interferes or might interfere with interstate commerce. The supreme court is to consider the question next January when it hears the so-called Minnesota and Kentucky rate cases. It is the best judgment of those conversant with the situation however, that today's decision has little, if any, bearing upon the rate cases. More or less friction has arisen between the interstate commerce commission and various state railroad commissions which has rendered it embarrassing to the federal body in its work of interstate regulation. Upon this point again, to quote Commissioner Lane: "The supreme court could say, and I believe it will say eventually, that an interstate carrier cannot be controlled by a state commission in any way that would prefer interstate over interstate traffic. In other words, the federal authority cannot permit a state to build a wall around its borders that would afford the people within that wall a greater advantage in commerce than is enjoyed by the people of another state outside the wall. We cannot have separate articulated arteries of commerce. We must have a national system of railroads under national control and regulation. "I believe that finally the government will determine, as the government of Canada, for instance determines, whether a proposed line of railway may put out of business another line that is equipped to supply all the needs of the territory traversed. It is folly to construct the new line because its operations means simply a division of the traffic between two lines where one is amply able to carry it, and that in turn means an eventual boosting of the rates at that both lines may live. This manifestly, is a disadvantage to the shipper. A multiplicity of railways in the same territory makes against the interests of the shippers." Mr. Lane said he was gratified that the supreme court had rendered the decision because it made for better, safer and more economical operation of the railway systems of the country.

Under the law a resident of a county needs no license to hunt in his own county and immediately adjoining counties. It is only when he goes out side these boundaries and goes to another part of the State that he needs a license, and this license is to be issued by the County Clerk of which the would-be hunter is a resident. For instance, if a resident of Galveston county wanted to go to Jefferson county to hunt deer he would have to take out his license in Galveston county.

Because of many inquiries a synopsis of the game law has been compiled and is herewith printed:

You may kill twenty-five quail or doves in any one day from Nov. 1 to Feb. 1 of each year.

You may kill three buck deer only from Nov. 1 to Jan. 1 of each year.

You may kill three wild turkeys only from Dec. 1 to April 1 of each year.

You may kill in all seasons of the year ducks, geese, robins, wild pigeons, jack snipes, snipes, curlews, Mexican pheasants or chalcals; bag limit, twenty-five in any one day.

You may kill rabbits, squirrels, fox, opossums, coons, bear, in any number in all seasons.

You may ship or transport to your home such game as you have lawfully killed by making proper affidavit.

You must not buy or sell any of the wild game or game birds, or kill, catch or destroy the eggs, or have in possession, living or dead, any wild song bird, except hawks, crows, buzzards, owls, English sparrows, rice birds and black birds.

You must not hunt for any game or birds at night with a lantern, hunting lamp or any other light.

Any person may hunt or kill any game during the open season, when it is lawful to kill game, in the county of his residence, or in the counties adjoining the county of his residence or on land owned or controlled by him, without procuring a hunter's license; but they must not hunt beyond the boundaries of their adjoining counties without a hunting license. Said hunting license must be carried on the person when hunting.

You must not use or attempt to use the license of another person, or in any manner make any change in any license for the purpose of transferring the same, under the penalty of prosecution for forgery.

Some confusion has resulted in certain quarters in a proposed amendment before the last Legislature proposing to legalize the sale of game. The amendment to the State game law was defeated, and the sale of all kinds of game is prohibited by the law.

The House passed a bill legalizing the sale of twenty-five ducks a day by persons killing them. The bill was killed by the Senate, a committee of that body of which said bill was referred refusing to favorably report it. Therefore the sale of game is prohibited by law in any way.

The hotel man who includes game in the meals he serves his guests, restaurant proprietors who call game by true or fictitious names, and sell it to their customers, peddlers and all other persons who receive money in any way from the game, are as guilty under the law as the man who shoots and sells game.

The State Game Commissioner suggests that when a person intends to hunt outside of his own county or counties adjoining his own, he should get his license from his home County Clerk, thus identifying himself to wardens in the counties where he intends to hunt. The reason for this suggestion is that people outside of the State, who must pay a tax of $15, now and then represent themselves in South and West Texas as being residents of other parts of the State, procure license from the clerks or wardens in the county where they are hunting by paying $1.75 and thus cheat the law.

Licenses of hunters will this year be closely scrutinized to prevent this character of fraud, and every sportsman who wants to escape annoyance will do well to get his license at home before he starts to hunt. If the clerks do not know the applicants for licenses they should swear them as to their names and residence.

Complaint was received last year that wardens, or pretended wardens, in some cases examined the licenses of hunters and charged them 50 cents for so doing. The Commissioner says there is no law authorizing any such collection of money for examining licenses, and he will prosecute any warden or any other person to the full extent of the law who engages in such thievery. He says where the hunter pays his license fee and obeys the law he is entitled to and shall receive all the protection the department can give him. Where club grounds are not in the county or adjoining county of the residence of a member, such member must obtain a license to hunt on such club grounds.

There was no change made in the game law by the last Legislature, except to reduce the penalties for the violation of the provisions of such laws. Under the old law a jail penalty was attached, which took the cases for violation of the law into the County Court. This jail penalty was cut out by the last Legislature in order to give Justices of the Peace jurisdiction.

The last Legislature made an appropriation for the employment of two special or ranger game wardens, who will visit places where the laws are violated. They have already been employed and will at once enter on their duties. They have all the powers of the members of the range force of the State, being by the law invested with the powers and duties of Sheriffs.

TAX ASSESSOR IS COMPLIMENTED

Some people may not think that John Robertson is one of the greatest, dramatic critics in the country, but all of us agree that he is one of the best tax assessors in the great State of Texas. Even Comptroller Lane who don't trouble himself to agree with anybody on anything, agrees with us on this point. He has just written Mr. Robertson acknowledging the receipt of the rolls from this county and goes on to say: "Your rolls checked nicely and have been approved. They show an increase in valuation of more than $1,000,000 over last year which is proof you have done good work."

Extraordinary Offering New Fall Suits

OUR buyer this season was carried away with the great number and beauty of the styles in Ladies' and Misses' Dresses and Evening Gowns, and bought more than he should have. He picked out some of the richest and best styles of the entire offering. Like the little boy whose eyes were bigger than his stomach, he bit off more than he could chew, and the only way we can sell them is to cut the price. This we are doing right now, even if it is in the beginning of the season—cut the price 20 per cent, and for this week offer them to you at these remarkably low prices. This includes our entire line of both street and evening gowns and to get the best selection you should come as early as possible.

- $49.50 Three Piece Suit $39.60
 - $47.50 Dresses $29.95
 - $35.00 Dresses $27.95
 - $25.00 Dresses $19.98
 - $22.50 Dresses $17.98
 - $15.00 Dresses $11.95
 - $12.50 Dresses $9.95
 - $10.00 Dresses $7.95
- Long Kid Gloves
Black and white, 16 button length $3.00
Chamois Gloves, 16 button length $3.00
- We have just received a shipment of Plush and Caracul Coats priced at $17.50 and $12.50. These are the very newest and noblest of the season's showing.
- Our new Fall Furs have just arrived.
- A beautiful line of Collars and Muffs to match in white Iceland Fox, black China Wolf, blended Mink and Silver-tip Fox, in fact all the newest designs in up-to-date furs at most seasonable prices.

Judge Edgar Scurry and W. M. McGregor made a round trip to Electra and returned to Wichita Falls about 10 p. m. yesterday in Mr. McGregor's auto. A short distance from the city on their return trip they ran into a bunch of cattle and had a mixup that was exciting, but not dangerous. The machine hit a yearling as it made a flying leap across the road; but, beyond a hard jolt that damaged the auto, lights had brought out a protest from the yearling no casualties are reported. They report Electra on a building boom and everything active in the oil field.

RUBBER GOODS

Have you ever stopped to realize that millions of dollars, and countless years of labor, have been spent to produce the rubber goods carried in our stock? The process of making them was perfected only a few years ago and it is regarded, and will be for all time to come, as one of the most important discoveries of civilization. Not only has it taken time and money to make these goods, but also to determine their usefulness. At first boat sails, table cloths and many other articles were made from rubber, but in our store you will find only the things which time has proven valuable and practical. Do not fail to look over our assortment, it is an education in itself and you will find many useful articles that you cannot afford to be without.

Too Many Technicalities and Not Enough Common Sense Trouble With American Courts

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 30.—That the further application of the doctrine of "harmless error" would result in putting the court of the United States more nearly on an equality with those of England when it comes to administration of justice, is the declaration made by Presiding Judge Henry M. Furman of the criminal court of appeals in an opinion handed down Saturday.

"If the appellate courts of the United States would take the same view of the enforcement of law that the English courts take, there would be more respect for law and more confidence in our courts, and life and property would be as safe here as they are in England," says Judge Furman. "What the people of the United States need is more plain, common sense justice that the people can understand and not so much regard for technicalities which constitute only so much learned nonsense and which no man can understand unless he be a skilled lawyer. Too much regard for technical rules sacrifices substance to form and makes the shadows and cobwebs of antiquity more important than the enforcement of justice and the punishment of criminals."

"We believe it to be our duty to give to the people of Oklahoma as nearly as we can do so a system of criminal jurisprudence based alone upon justice and supported by reason, which will secure to every man, be he poor or rich full protection in his rights and also secure to the people at large the due execution of the criminal laws of the state.

"Some appellate courts act as though it was their duty to hold that everything done in the trial court was irregular until it was proven by the state that the proceedings were strictly regular.

"We think the safer and better rule is to presume that everything done in a court of record is regular and to place the burden upon the party complaining of the action of the trial court to show how he was injured thereby. This as we understand it, is the ground work and foundation of the doctrine of harmless error."

The opinion is handed down in affirming the case of R. Coleman, convicted of perjury in Bryan county. The opinion also gives an interesting definition of what constitutes perjury, holding that "it is not necessary that the matter sworn to should be directly and immediately material, but that it is sufficient if it is so connected with the matter at issue as to have a legitimate tendency to prove or disprove some fact that is material, by giving weight or probability to or detracting from testimony of a witness to such material fact."

Wheat, Milo and Flax Profitable Dry Farm Crops

Special to The Times. Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 30.—It is all very well for scientists to study and delve and dig for the ultimate salvation of the farmer in the dry-land belt, but first tell him—and do it quickly—what to grow that will bring in money. This, in effect, was the common sense principle voiced at the International Dry Farming Congress by Prof. W. M. Jardine, of Kansas.

"The farmer isn't concerned about fertility and nitrates and inoculation and things like that," said Prof. Jardine. "What he wants is a living and he wants it now. We must help him to get it. Show him how to do something now; tell him how to feed his family, first, and then he will be in a position to take up and study the more technical problems of farm life."

Prof. Jardine told the farmers to raise potatoes, as one of the surest means of getting an immediate living on the dry lands. For seed, he said in brief, use selected tubers, hand-picked. If not too large, plant single tubers with only one or two eyes. If large, cut in halves. Two eyes are better than six in seed potatoes. Plant in rows three feet apart and two feet apart in rows four inches deep. Subsoiling is fairly satisfactory. Plant early Petiskey, Irish Cobbler and early Ohio.

"These varieties do not give the largest yields, I admit," said the speaker, "but they are the earliest, and, therefore, the most advisable because the farmer may need the money."

"Only three crops on the dry lands are making money," Prof. Jardine declared. "Wheat, milo and flax. Why not add potatoes to the list and increase the income?"

Advice About Stomach Troubles and How to Relieve Them.

Do not neglect indigestion which may lead to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent physician once said that ninety-five per cent of all the ills of the human body have their origin in a disordered stomach.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be among the most dependable remedies known for the relief of indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is very prompt. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time tends to bring about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets help to insure healthy appetite, to aid digestion, and thus promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formality. They come in three sizes, priced 25, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store, O. F. Marchman Drug Store.

As to Mrs. Mollie Bailey's show we admit Mr. Robertson's weakness for the name. Having named his horse Mollie and his bird dog Joseph.

He says Mr. Robertson was guided by those sternest of all critics (sternest should be spelled without an "a") the gallery gods.

He claims Mr. Robertson is jealous of Mr. Goodwin's success with women. We think rather he has profited by Mr. Goodwin's experience.

Like all amateurs "Another" also quotes Lord Byron:

Also he says that another gentleman heard Mr. Goodwin, and the gentleman has been further under the house after eggs than has Mr. Robertson around the world. Heavens, how scarce are original expressions.

We have the weakness and lack of originality to quote Whittier in defense of those who have never traveled.

"The eye may well be glad that loob's Where Pharos fountains rise and fall,

But he who sees his native brooks, Shine in the sun, has seen them all.

"The marble palaces of Ind., Rise 'round him in the snow and wind From his lone sweet bier, Persius Baffly smiles,

And Rome's Cathedral awe, Is in his woodland aisles.

A Good Way to Make Use of Odd Skeins of Embroidery Silk

Can Be Twisted In Rainbow Effect For Baby Ribbon

Every woman who embroideries is sure to have on hand broken skeins of embroidery silk which she seems to have no use. Instead of letting these become a tangled mass or throwing them away, keep them neatly wound on cards, as they may all be used sooner or later.

If you can do nothing else with such skeins of silk you may save your pocket book. Instead of buying baby ribbon to tie up parcels, open several skeins of different colors, and taking some friend to help you, twist diligently in different directions, until thick, rich cord is formed.

Sew the ends firmly to prevent untwisting, then fasten through them tassels of a different color. Thus the gilt tassels; two shades of blue can be used in the twist and a third tone for tassels.

Another use for remnants of embroidery silk the San Diego Union says, is to darn the minto a huck on canvas background for the bottom of work bags, card cases or a border in frames. With an eye to harmonious coloring a dozen different shades may be used with advantage. Where the colors appear to clash they can be toned down by occasional lines of black.

A third use for such leftovers is to substitute embroidery silk for ribbons or braid as drawstrings for work-bags. Select from your odds and ends shades that as nearly as possible repeat the tones of the bag. Wind each skein on a reel of paper, and have one of black. With a coarse steel needle crocket all these colors in a single chain stitch until you have two cords, each a few inches longer than the width of the bag's top.

To each of the ends crocket tassels. Cut the silk into equal lengths, two and a half or three inches, and draw half a dozen of the pieces at once through the end chain stitch. When the tassel is thick enough tie the upper part to form a thick head and trim off all uneven ends at bottom of tassel.

These cords are not only artistic, and use up odds and ends of silk, but they draw up more easily and last longer than ribbon.

Some Hints In Smart Fashions For Those Who are "Not so Young"

In this day of tight skirts and monstrosities, when it is the aim of every one to be as slender and as curvaceous as possible, what is the older woman to do? She, too, must be clothed, and her costume must be not only appropriate to her requirements and at the same time dignified, but paradoxically they must also be up to date. The black silk frock of earlier times will not serve every purpose these days, and indeed the older woman is not the same age as she was ten years ago. It is a generally conceded fact that every one looks different, that the middle-aged are young, and that grandmothers are all of middle age. In many cases the grandmother must have a wardrobe full of costumes and they must be chosen with the utmost care so that they may be at once very becoming and in the very best of taste.

Of course designers pay very little attention to the needs of thickening figures. But in the display of autumn gowns there are several that would prove very satisfactory. In the first place, black and white is the one very smart combination, in fact much in favor of madame, then two other very popular colors are violet and elephant gray, both colors that have always been set apart as being becoming to older complexions. It is true that this season they are used by all alike, even by the debutante, but this does not prevent their being satisfactory for the not so young. In materials the most used fabric in Paris is ratine in all its many qualities and weaves, but in this country it is scarce and hard to find, so velvets and velvetens must answer the purpose, and these are both very desirable.

In the way of tailored suits there is a charming black and white striped velvet; each little stripe very narrow, giving rather the effect of gray at a distance, and this could be made up with bands of black velvet or satin, or perhaps some of the new braid which is particularly effective upon the broad collars and cuffs of the day. If madame feels that she does not care to wear a tailored suit, whether from a dislike for separate waists or gowns of velvet, serge, or wool because she looks more elderly in something less severe, she may wear a well-cut separate coat of velvet, fur, or a combination of the two. If the velvet coat is more than hip length it should fasten across quite snugly, giving the figure a tapering effect, broad at the shoulders and narrow below the waist.

In dress models the older woman is very fortunate this season, for the voluminous collars, deep yokes, and ruffles are usually becoming to her style. In house and evening dresses she has at her disposal the dainty and softening tulle, an addition more adapted to her need than any other form of decoration. A very pretty dress that might be worn for every day under a separate coat of black is of elephant gray wool, black satin, a fabric at once soft and warm. The surplus bodice with long close-fitting sleeves is quite plain save for five black-covered buttons ranged along the right side that crosses over the left. Above these begins a bias collar of plain tulle with a little pleated frill at the edge, and this extends round the neck, disappearing under the right side a little below the bust line in front. The chemise and high collar are of white tulle, the former with tiny frill and row of smallest black buttons extending down the center front. The skirt hanging from just above the normal waist line is plain and straight to within five inches of the ground, where it is edged with a black silk fringe hung over a hem of the material. This gown is plain but very chic, and it would be becoming to almost any figure, whether stout or slender. A hat for the gown would be a small, close fitting affair of black silk beaver or stretched satin faced with velvet, and the trimming might be a panache of gray and white plumes or a smart looped bow of black satin, lined if becoming, with royal blue.

"THE WOLF" HERE NEXT SATURDAY

With the coming of "The Wolf" which Melmore & Leigh will offer at the Wichita Theatre Saturday matinee and night, November 4, a distinct dramatic novelty is promised. It is by Eugene Walter who is also author of "Paid in Full," both plays running simultaneously at Broadway theatres last season. The scenes of "The Wolf" are laid in the Hudson Bay vicinity, and portrays a group of rugged characters typical of Canada's frontier—as picturesque as they are human.

The main persons are Masfaveh, a hard-headed Scotchman, whose wife has long since left him on account of his nagging, leaving him a beautiful daughter, Milda, the counterpart of her mother and the central figure in the drama; Jules Beaubien, a young French Canadian, a wholesome character, brave, sturdy, true and frankly in love with Milda; Wilson McDonald, an American civil engineer forwarding the construction of a new railroad, who is the rival of Beaubien for the conquest of Milda, though unworthy, for he has a wife and children in the States and regards Milda as a prey for his caprice; George Munsley, a light hearted but sturdy youth, full of American wit and humor, who delights in tantalizing his colleagues, much to the amusement of the audience, and lending comedy to the place; and Ba'tiste Grand, a quiet but revengeful nomad, brooding over his love, the sister of Beaubien, who has been betrayed and driven to suicide by her disgrace before the opening of the play. The story depicts the maneuvers between Beaubien and McDonald to win Milda—the former for his wife and the latter for his mistress. Ba'tiste discovers that the villainous McDonald was the very man responsible for the misery and death of his beloved Annette, and wishes to kill him at once, but Beaubien as brother of the dead girl, reserves that revenge for himself.

While the play as a whole is one of sylvan simplicity, it presents many phases from the most dramatic to the farcical scenes, but with the melodramatic predominating throughout, especially in the last act, which the New York critics declare to be one of the most thrilling ever written, and yet perfectly natural, plausible and true to life.

NEWS FROM OIL FIELDS

showed considerable gas. When drilled in three feet it developed a fine showing of oil and had the appearance of making one of the good wells of the field. Mr. Benson left immediately for Electra to determine what action to take. He is quite positive that he will drill the well down to the 1,050 foot-pay and possibly also to the 1,890 foot sand, thus making a thorough test of it. He has in this one lease 148 acres, besides other large tracts in that neighborhood. There are now about 75 completed wells in the Electra field and not one dry hole has yet been drilled. Several wells which were reported dry were later drilled deeper into pay. An outside wildcat venture was reported dry the other day, but it is not yet deep enough to find the pay.—Independence (Kan.) Reporter.

"Tempest and Sunshine" a clever dramatization of the widely read novel of Mary J. Holmes of the same name, interpreted by an acting cast of unusual strength, plays the engagement of one night at the Wichita Theatre on Thursday night. The character of Joseph Dunn whom the author describes as a man into whose heart an honest feeling never strayed, is assumed by Mr. Earle Fry, and his characterization of the crafty, hypocritical postmaster is most striking. Seats on sale for the attraction at the usual place.
