HIGH GAS TAXES.

Gasoline taxes keep on climbing. It was considered a daring and questionable innovation when states began cautiously imposing a tax of one or two cents a gallon. Year by year more states have fallen into line, and year by year the tax rate rises. The present top is reached in Florida, whose state senate recently voted for a gasoline tax of eight cents a gallon.

This has been an easy way for states to raise money—too easy, in fact. Collected in small sums retail sales, it has seldom been felt much at one time by the consumer. Taxpayers have been all the more docile because while the tax rate has been rising, the basic gasoline cost has been falling, so that on the whole there has been no net increase these last few years.

It is possible, however, to go too far in such a matter. If motorists do not rebel openly, decreased sales caused by thrift may make the exorbitant increases profitless to the states imposing them. And the oil and motor industries may suffer.

TWO-GUN MEN AND KILLERS SCORCHED.

Governor William H. Murray of Oklahoma was an early dweller in the old Indian territory. "Them was hot days," Governor Murray has ever had the courage of his conviction. He never ran up the white feather. He never displayed the yellow badge of cowardice in the field of politics or elsewhere. His latest is, "two-gun men and killers cannot enforce the law in Oklahoma." He criticized the procedure of the murder trial at Ardmore and said the state should have had a change of venue. Moreover he said he might ask the next legislature to amend laws to permit the state as well as the defense to seek a change of venue.

BAYLOR TRUSTEES DEFER ELECTION.

Trustees of Baylor university did not elect a successor to Samuel Palmer Brooks June 26. They voted to defer action until September. Board members are said to have expressed the fullest confidence in the present temporary organization of the university under the leadership of Dr. W. S. Allen, acting president. President W. B. Bizzell of the Oklahoma state university is said to be in the running. Many champions of Former Governor Pat Morris Neff predict his election in September. Dr. Bizzell is a native Texan. He won his spurs as an educator and college executive in Texas. He has won additional laurels as president of the Oklahoma university. However, it is said that Bizzell and Governor Murray have declared a truce and are dwelling together as harmoniously as two turtle doves. President Bizzell stepped down and out of the A. & M. college when the Fergusons came in the last time. He had the Oklahoma offer and it was a very tempting one. Governor Bill's bark is said to be worse than his bite and he has quit barking at the heads of the educational institutions of the Sooner state.

NO TYPICAL AMERICAN.

An English student, doing research work at Yale under the Commonwealth Fund, has been hunting for the typical American. In spite of the fact that a popular magazine found a "typical American family" not long ago, the English investigator says this is a myth. There is no typical American. Our communities, the countryside in various parts of the country and the people there are all as different as they would be if they were of quite different nations. This opinion may be reassuring to Americans who had begun to fear we were hopelessly standardized, all reading the same books and magazines, all wearing the same kind of clothes, all using the same nationally advertised goods and attending the same movie, all playing the same bridge and midget golf. As a matter of fact, says the foreign observer, one has but to compare New Englander and Californian, the eastern industrial worker and the farmer of the wheat belt, the northern city man with the southerner, to see that the differences really are greater than the likenesses. Here's hoping the Englishman is right. It would be pretty monotonous and a little moronic to have us all alike.

MORE SPEED IN AIR.

Captain Frank Hawks, the world's swiftest aviator, in his book, "Speed," predicts airplanes travelling more than 200 miles an hour and connecting New York and the Pacific Coast in a regular overnight service. Mail might leave New York in the evening after the close of the business day and be delivered on the coast in the morning. Eventually passenger service might follow a similar schedule. One doesn't need to elaborate on what this would mean to business. In time there would be speedy connections by the fastest planes between all the large cities. Then Hawks adds:

"If you won't think I'm speed-crazy, I'll confess that this 200-mile figure is just a beginning; that here is where practical cruising speeds for commercial purposes begin, and that the development of planes and motors will bring faster and ever faster rates of travel." Probably the man's not speed-crazy at all. In the light of past developments, his predictions seem fairly reasonable. There are certain uses for such speed, and the air is the place to achieve it.

AUGUST 22 DATE FOR MOTOR TRUCK LAWS.

Three stringent laws known as motor truck regulatory statutes were enacted by the 42nd legislature. It was the battle of the session. Now the court of criminal appeals of Texas has decided the truck bills are not in immediate effect and will not become effective until 90 days after date of final adjournment of the legislature which will be Aug. 22. Lawmakers enact; courts interpret. Now the highway trucksters will be given time "to place their house in order."

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER N.E.A. Service Writer WASHINGTON—President Herbert Hoover, once presented as "the great humanitarian," is now being put forward to the country as a human being. There have been opposite views about the Hoover personality. One held him to be a cold, unsympathetic, fish-like and short-tempered individual whose emotions were aroused only by statistics, criticism or thoughts of a second term. The other pictured him as a warm-hearted lover of children, dumb animals and his fellow man; a red-blooded devotee of fishing and the outdoor life; a charming comrade among his friends and, above all, a quiet and modest Superman who worked sympathetically and ceaselessly in the interests of his countrymen during a period of suffering and depression.

FARRELL AND ELISSA LANDI HAVE UNIQUE PREFERENCES

Recently Charles Farrell, who is featured in "Body and Soul," which opens today at the Arcadia Theatre was asked, "What, if you were not connected with motion pictures, would you prefer to be?" Without hesitation, he replied, "Connected with motion pictures." More recently the same question was asked Elissa Landi, sensational European star who makes her debut in this Fox Movietone. Miss Landi's answer while not so original was more interesting. "I would prefer to be a millionaire," she said. "Think of the good I could do with all of that money, not for myself but for those who are less fortunate than I."

Humphrey Bogart and Myrna Loy are also featured in this production which Alfred Santell directed. "I reckon it'd be a good idea if everyone started packing six-shooters again like we used to do. Then those criminals would be sorta cautious how they'd fool with people. I don't know how else you could stop them. The wild west was doggone more law-abiding than it is today." Prohibition, the automobile and improved highways, which permit a speedy get-away after a crime, are blamed by Gillett for causing much of the crime increase. "The old saloonkeeper was a high type of man, who ran a respectable place and wouldn't tolerate any disorders in his saloons," the old ranger said. "But those who operate speakeasies now aren't of such a high type. "Prohibition sure has failed. But I don't know how to change it."

LARVAE AIDS INFECTION

BOSTON—Chronic bone infections have been treated successfully by the use of larvae at Boston City Hospital under direction of Dr. Frederic J. Cotton, noted surgeon. The larvae, an early form of certain insects, are placed in the wounds with the result that many of them have healed quickly.

ESPERANTO CLUB FORMED

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—The Nashville Esperanto club has been formed here, and its members are working industriously toward the day when they will be conversing with people throughout the world in a common tongue. They are hoping to get a regular Esperanto teacher soon.

Ranger Urges Six-Shooter Law

MARFA, July 4.—The law of the six-shooter might be invoked to combat modern crime conditions, which have made Texas today "doggone" less law-abiding than when the wild west was its worst, Capt. J. B. Gillett, veteran Texas ranger, suggested. "Why we never had any crime back in 1880 in Texas like we have now," said Gillett. "Oh, we'd have a train robbery once in a while, but that wasn't anything to the hundreds of stickups there are today. The Indians were our worst enemy, but now you don't know a who's going to stick a gun in your ribs."

"I reckon it'd be a good idea if everyone started packing six-shooters again like we used to do. Then those criminals would be sorta cautious how they'd fool with people. I don't know how else you could stop them. The wild west was doggone more law-abiding than it is today." Prohibition, the automobile and improved highways, which permit a speedy get-away after a crime, are blamed by Gillett for causing much of the crime increase. "The old saloonkeeper was a high type of man, who ran a respectable place and wouldn't tolerate any disorders in his saloons," the old ranger said. "But those who operate speakeasies now aren't of such a high type. "Prohibition sure has failed. But I don't know how to change it."

OHO GRADUATE IS 18

ADA, O.—The youngest member of the Ohio Northern University graduating class is Raymond Cummins, 18, who received his degree from the liberal arts college. He completed the four-year course in three years.

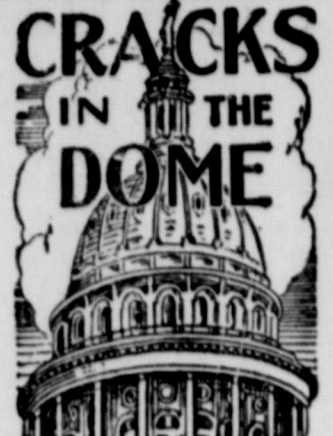

Quick Weddings Cause Divorces

PITTSBURGH.—Quick courtships and runaway marriages were blamed by a judge and a minister for the increase in the divorce rate in Pittsburgh in 1930 and the first six months of 1931, as compared with 1929. "In 1929 there were 1,383 divorces, in 1930 there were 1,438 and 710 in the first half of 1931. This was at the rate of 1,420 for the year, according to Department of Commerce statistics. "Quick courtships and runaway marriages are the cause of many separations," Judge Frank P. Patterson said.

Rev. John Ray Ewers, of the East End Christian Church said, "Banns should be published before marriage, so enough time could elapse between engagement and marriage to insure the couples they were not making a mistake." Decrease in marriages, in the same period, generally was attributed to business conditions.

Uzudun Wins Over Max Baer

RENO, Nev., July 4.—Paulino Uzudun of Spain defeated Max Baer, Livermore, Calif., youth in a 20-round fight before 17,000 people here this afternoon. Paulino had an edge going into the last round and he finished so fast that the decision was easily his. Nothing goes to a fellow's head so much as a strong attack of hay fever. SAN JUAN.—This city to have packing plant covering three acres of ground and costing $70,000.

CRACKS IN THE DOME To one man, President Hoover's debt plan sounds like rank politics, to another like constructive business. Here's one man whose opinion is valuable because he served as an assistant secretary of the United States treasury in Woodrow Wilson's administration. It is none the less impressive because he happened to be a Hoovercrat voter three years ago because of dislike for the democratic leader's views.—Thomas B. Love stresses the idea that while Texas will benefit from the market improvements due to the debt vacation proposal, the industrial section of the country, where the big incomes are made, will pay most of the bill.

He doesn't beg the question that the United States must chip in and pay the bill to meet the government's needs the year of debt interregnum, and the interest charges arising from the extension. But he says the accession of new business and better prices will many times over pay the bill; and that the bill, in the form of higher income taxes, will touch the industrial and financial section most profiting. Ten per cent already has been added to the prospective value of the Texas cotton and wheat crop—for once while the crop is still in the farmer's land. That, in Senator Love's words, "is something."

Even more important than that, looked at from a world view, Senator Love believes the Hoover proposal was the necessary spark to kindle a willing revival of business. And, avoiding an international tragedy, if kept a government in power in Germany that otherwise probably before now, in his opinion, would have gone on the rocks and fallen into the sway of extreme radicals. While the state is planning a new office building for the highway department, it should put up a structure adequate to future as well as present needs of the department. A building of seven stories at least ought to be provided. The highway department will not require that much space now. Other departments could be allowed to use some of the space. The highway department would not suffer, since it had been furnished free ground for its building, and has had free office space, general fund water, light and similar services for years. It could provide space to let the state begin saving on present office-rent bills, and at the same time have available extra floors for its own future use. A large auditorium for the commission hearings is badly needed. It should have nearly all the ground floor of the new building. Looking ahead now will save the state money later on.

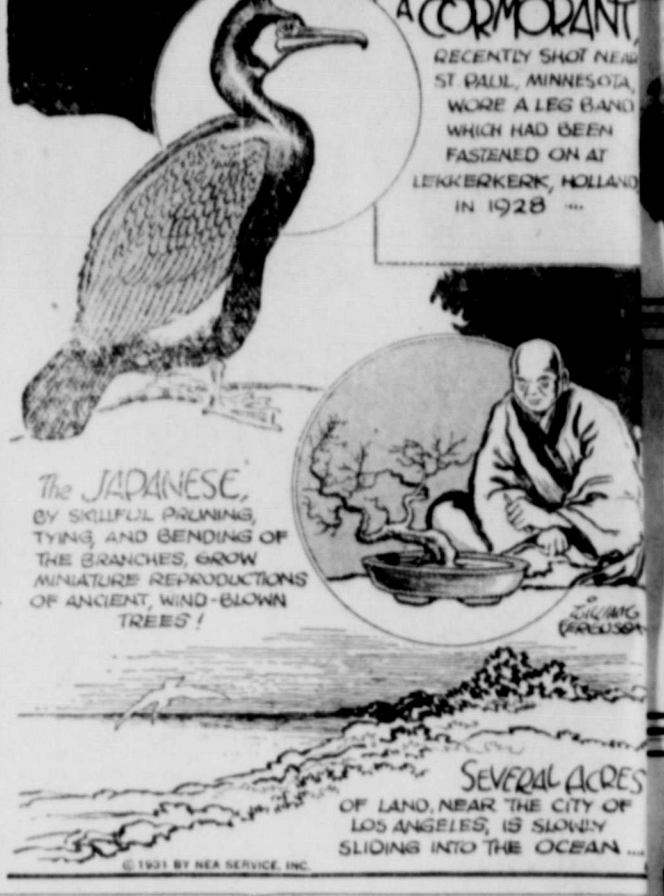

COLLEGE GIRLS RIDE BIKES

GRINNELL, Ia.—Bicycle riding and roller skating have been added to the list of athletic activities for women at Grinnell College. A recreation department has been added to the Grinnell Woman's Association and the department has provision of the new activities. White trouses and slousers are standard equipment for the girls.

GOOSE CREEK, Texas.—Mayor of cities and towns within a radius of 200 miles have been extended a special invitation by Mayor C. R. Myers of Goose Creek to attend the joint July 4 celebration of Pelly, Baytown and Goose Creek.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

COOLIDGE MAY TOUR EUROPE NEAR FUTURE WASHINGTON, July 4.—The possibility that former United States President Calvin Coolidge will soon travel abroad was expressed by his intimate friends here upon the occasion of his 55th birthday, which will occur today. These friends recall that he is yet comparatively young; that he is retired with a moderate personal fortune, and that he has never visited abroad except to touch briefly at Havana, Cuba, in 1928 to address the Sixth Pan-American Conference. Coolidge prides himself upon being an average representative American citizen, a former secretary of his said here recently. He already has crossed and recrossed the North American continent. What is more natural, it was suggested, than that he should retire to retirement of foreign countries. That is the usual thing for retired citizens of the United States to do. Depression Blamed. Friends here believe that he might have undertaken a world tour soon after leaving the presidency had it not been for political considerations. The advent of the depression soon after he retired brought into prominence such international problems as war debts, tariffs and disarmament, on which he had positive views. To tour European countries and accept the hospitality of other governments so soon after leaving the White House might be embarrassing in one way or another, friends suggest. The change of an administration or the passage of a year's time would alter this. Precedent for world travel for retired United States presidents exists in the trip of former president Ulysses S. Grant, who retired early in life. He made a worldwide trip. Shorter Lives. Despite much talk of Coolidge's returning to public life, the history of former presidents would indicate little likelihood of such a development. A recent investigation of the lives of ex-presidents by Dr. J. L. Merrylees reveals that most of them have lived private in retirement. It also shows their lives have been much shorter in the last half century. Of the presidents who served before 1853, the average life retirement was 15.6 years, according to Dr. Merrylees. But 1853 the average life of ex-presidents has been only eight years.

Cowmen Plan Camp Meeting

By United Press. M'CAMERY, Texas.—Thousands of cowmen from the Big Bend country and other parts of West Texas are expected to attend the Paisano Baptist assembly, which will be held at the mile-high religious resort between Marfa and Alpine July 31 to Aug. 9.

Those who have attended the encampment in the past say it is one of the unusual gatherings of the nation. It is an old-fashioned camp meeting, and boots and spurs are worn by hundreds who listen to the addresses and join in the songs and prayers.

The only gospel some hear during a year is that which they hear at the encampment. Camp Paisano is said to have stamped its influence on the citizenship of this entire West Texas territory. The regard the people hold for spiritual things is attested by their generosity when the big pie pans are passed to raise funds to defray the expenses of the meeting and for other projects. More than $10,000 has been taken up at one time.

The presence of Dr. George W. Truett, of Dallas, president of the Southern Baptist association, has been a feature of the meeting annually for the past 25 years. A tree on the grounds is known as the one under which Dr. Truett prays daily. At the encampment he will preach daily at the 11:30 a. m. service.

Other notables who will speak are former Governor Pat M. Neff, chairman of the board of trustees of Baylor university, and Ollie Webb, representative of the Texas & Pacific railroad. Neff will speak on "Christian Education" and Webb on "Business and Religion." The district B. Y. P. U. will hold a two-day session at the resort just before the encampment begins.

Poultry Raising

(Continued from page 1) Texas ranges shot by the hundreds for their hides alone. That was the way the cattle industry was carried on before the Civil war. Wild cattle, they were then. Following the Civil war, trail driving was quite an industry. The Santa Fe and the Chisholm trails leading the way into Kansas where railroads hauled the longhorns to market. In the 70's came the railroads and for the next 10 years this development went forward and the numbers that traveled the trails into Kansas gradually diminished. Twenty-five years ago herd improvements started and the shade of the cattle surely changed to a brighter red and the faces of the cattle in the ranges became white almost exclusively.

But the milk cow was neglected. Some tried to milk the whiteface, without success. Others experimented with the shorthorn, but the beef breeds do not pay profits as milkers. And these experiments resulted in much good. When milk cows were imported, milk breeds were brought in. The result is that the Jersey and the Holstein moved in from the Jersey and the Holstein centers to found the stock of some high grade family herds.

Eastland county is off to a good start in the dairy industry, in spite of the setback of recent years. The 4-H club boys and girls, the vocational agricultural students and many landowners and tenants are working to put a milk cow on the place to supplement the garden and the henhouse as incomes for the family table and the pocket-book. That there is a whole-souled interest in the country in better and more dairy cattle is proved by the organization of a bull circle with eight bulls of the Jersey breed. These bulls are all high quality, for the members of the bull circles met with experts in the dairy line. They set as a minimum requirement that the dam of each bull brought to the county should have a record of no less than 500 pounds of butterfat a year. This is a fairly high requirement and no cow without a lot of breeding behind her will deliver 600 pounds of butterfat a year. These bulls are in eight neighborhoods and will be kept in the county, moving around the circle, improving the stock each year. Already some of the first heifers are in milk and they, without exception, are improvements over their mothers. Another cross or two with one of the imported Jersey bulls in the circle and a high grade Jersey will be the result.

Since the formation of the bull circle and the purchase of the eight pure-bred Jersey bulls, some 20 other bulls of the same high quality have been brought in by individuals. This means that more than 30 pure-bred sires are available for service to the milk cow owner.

That is a good start. Grading up herds can be done. It has been shown in the white faces, a breed that came of the old longhorns and the pure-bred sire. It is working with the dairy cattle, raising the income each time a new heifer is fresh, for it is the sire that produces the producers.

Heart of Liane

By MABEL McLELLIOTT. BEGIN HERE TODAY. Liane Barrett, 18 and beautiful, lives in a cramped New York apartment with her mother, Cass Barrett, a rather faded actress. On a hot night Liane goes to dinner with Molly Cronin, a neighbor, and two of Molly's men friends. There is a shooting and the girl is held a witness. She sends a note to her mother who arrives and persuades Shane McDermid, the young policeman in charge, that Liane is innocent of wrong-doing. That night at the theater where Cass is playing Liane encounters a handsome stranger who speaks her name.

A few days later Cass and Liane go to Willow Stream, L. I., where Cass has an engagement in a small summer theater sponsored by wealthy Mrs. Cleespaugh, a widow with one son, Clive. Liane works in the box office, sharing duties with Muriel Ladd, pretty society girl. At Muriel's home Liane again meets the handsome stranger who is Van Robard, the theater manager. He is Van Robard, but when Liane mentions him her mother makes Liane promise to have nothing more to do with him.

Mrs. Cleespaugh asks Cass to let Liane stay with her during the winter. Muriel leaves the theater one evening with Chuck Desmond, newspaper man, and Muriel's mother dispatches Van Robard in search of the couple. He takes Liane along. Muriel turns up next day, having spent the night discreetly at a New York hotel. Elsie tells Liane that Robard is known as Mrs. Ladd's lover and the girl is crushed. Liane dines with Desmond and finds him interesting. Van Robard seems to ignore Liane but during a hold-up at the theater one night he shows deep concern about her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER X. "Mother, how about asking Mr. Walters if I'm to have that job as a dress model at Hendel's?" Liane asked. It was the last week of August, the week after Liane's adventure with the meddits. The local paper had made quite a heroine of her. Clive Cleespaugh, who had never spoken to her before, had stopped shy to shake her hand. Chuck Desmond had sent her a wire which said simply: "Attitabby."

"But it pays 35 a week, and I'd season itself was drawing to a close. Cass was going on tour with the New Art company. Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago and Detroit. Home of the middle of January.

"We were lucky to rent the apartment," Cass reflected, not answering Liane's question. "Do pay attention to what I'm saying," warned the girl. "You say the stage is out and I must have a job."

Cass wrinkled her fine nose in distaste. "I hate to think of turning you into a clothes horse," she observed in some dissatisfaction. "But it pays 35 a week, and I'd have a chance to do posing for the rotogravure advertisers," Liane reminded her.

"I know, but perhaps something better will turn up," Cass seemed mysterious. "But mother, I've got to work and I'm not trained for an office. What else is there for a girl like me?"

Liane looked very young, very eager and impatient in her thin kimono of dusky red stuff. Her dark hair, bronzed in the light, fell loose about her shoulders. She was exquisite, Cass thought, with a sharp sigh. What, indeed, was she to do? True there was Mrs. Cleespaugh's offer. She had asked for more time, had Cass, putting off the moment of decision. Now the autocratic old lady wanted her answer.

A Big Business Girl

to Mrs. Cleespaugh in September. Liane thought, "I can't tell her now about Van Robard. It would upset everything."

Now they were packing. Cass' big old trunk, the one which had traveled with her to all four corners of the continent, stood yawningly open. It spilled tarnished evening dresses, faded scarves, shoes run down at the heel. "All this junk!" moaned Cass, surveying it in disgust. "I must throw some of it away."

She leaned over and fished out a pile of old letters, a battered scrap book with an imitation leather cover. Liane, sorting stockings, looked up. "Anything interesting there?" she asked. Cass swept the pile aside with a rather pettish gesture. "Nothing you'd care about it," she said.

"Tel-lo-phone!" Mrs. Smithers shrieked at the foot of the stairs. "For Mrs. Barrett. . . ." Cass caught her printed dressing gown about her and ran. Liane sat there in the hopeless confusion of the room winding ribbons and smoothing out wrinkles. Her glance strayed to the pile of papers. Out of the heapily she selected the book. She sniffed fastidiously at it. The odor of shabbiness and disuse flavored its pages. She flipped them back, reading a clipping here, pausing to stare there at the faded photographs. She was deep in an old newspaper paragraph when Cass returned.

"The older woman glanced sharply at what Liane was reading, said in a rather nettled tone, "Do give me that old thing. I told you there was nothing to interest you."

"But there is—seeds of stuff," protested Liane. "Why didn't you ever let me see it before? I'm fascinated."

"Do give it to me, Liane. I'm serious. I want to put it away. It should have been burned ages ago," cried Cass, strangely impatient at the delay. Liane glanced up, dimpling impishly. "I'm crazy about it," she cried. "All about what a riot you were in Syracuse stock in 1908."

Cass stamped her foot in its frayed satin mule. Almost there were tears in her fine eyes. "Give it to me this minute, do you hear?"

John W. Brady Is Making a Model Prisoner, Writer Finds On a Visit Through the Huntsville Prison

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, Tex., July 4.—John W. Brady, former Austin appellate judge, is serving the prison sentence given him by a jury, and is taking it standing up.

Judge Brady is making no effort to secure clemency or the shortening of his sentence. No such effort is being made on his behalf. No effort has been made to arouse or secure sympathy or special treatment for the ex-judge.

Judge Brady's experience in serving a sentence for the fatal stabbing of Lehigh Highsmith, who was a stenographer in the Texas capitol, is unusual in that it embodies in the same individual observance of the rules and conditions of involuntary servitude to the law by a man trained in the law.

He has had no special treatment because of his distinguished career as a lawyer, as the county attorney who won for Texas a million-dollar civil judgment, or as an appellate judge. He has sought none.

THREE MILLION
BRITISH FACE
SLASH IN PAY

By ARTHUR F. DEGREVE
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON.—Three million British workers are threatened with wage reductions, or already have been forced to accept a cut in pay, a survey by the United Press has revealed.
The movement is part of a gigantic effort by industrialists to accomplish a twofold purpose:
First, survive the economic depression accentuated here in the last two years.
Second, rejuvenate industry to a point where it will be able to compete in foreign markets when the depression ends.

Some Cuts Already
Workers whose wages already have been reduced include 1,000,000 engineers, 200,000 shipbuilders, 100,000 chemical workers, 500,000 building workers, 500,000 railwaymen and 100,000 boot manufacturers. Possibility of carrying on reductions into the hard-hit textile industry is being contemplated.
Leaders of the woolen industry are said to be considering a total reduction of 14 per cent. Thousands of civil servants, whose salaries are based on the cost of living, are making less than $15 a week, and further readjustments are likely.
Trade union leaders, who anticipated the wage cutting drive as early as last Christmas, struggled to maintain the present high standard of living which the British workman enjoys, as compared with the Continental laborer, but faced insurmountable opposition from employers.

Trouble Not Threatened
Neither the worker nor the employer, however, has shown an inclination to push disagreement to a point from which serious labor troubles would arise. The textile owners, it was revealed, abandoned their "extra looms per weaver" demand after a stoppage of about a fortnight.
Union chiefs complain that employers are concentrating entirely upon wage reductions to bring new life to various industries and point out that noted economists in the United States have opposed vigorously the wage cut policy, stressing the need of protecting the purchasing power of the home market.
They are demanding a complete rationalization of industry, including reorganization of antiquated sales methods and sumbessoms, out-of-date machinery. On the other hand, the employers maintain that workshop customs and craft demarcation rules must be modified before industry can fall in step with the rest of the world.

Remarkable Yacht
PARIS.—One of the world's most luxurious and remarkable yachts is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock and is called the Shenandoah III. Its furnishings are from 250 to 300 years old. The owner and navigator procured a Chinese crew and had painted up in the nose the Devil's staring eye with which every Celestial junk is provided. The drawing room is fitted up as a replica of a little temple near Peking which was the favorite retreat of the late Dowager Empress at the time of the Boxer uprising. The doors are of sandal wood and the wall decorations are carved in gold, copper and red lacquer.
The Shenandoah III is a 1,000-ton four-masted, and Fahnestock himself has skipped her to the Riviera from China by way of Saigon, Singapore, Rangoon, Colombo, Suez, Malta and Naples.

KINFO, Mo.—Mt. Kineo, 900 feet high and jutting into Missouri Lake, is said to be the biggest single mass of hornblende in the world. Hornblende is rock containing considerable iron and occurs in distinct crystals and in columnar, fibrous and granular form. It once was used by Indians for arrowheads.

THE SAFE AND SANE FOURTH AT OLDEN

By OLIVE FORD STEPHENS
Well things, in general are beginning to sort of quiet down around Olden, now being as the Fourth of July has come and gone, but say while it lasted, we sure had a BIG to-do. You say you hadn't heard about it? Well, that's funny, but I guess they were trying to keep it quiet and didn't want the papers to get hold of it. And maybe Will Rogers find it out. He'd only have made light of it and it is serious with us. We take things pretty serious out our way, and THIS time it SURE was serious. Mike Jones's wife is threatening him with a divorce, Slim Pickens' wife took their kids and went to her Mother's, Buzz Saw's wife gave him a black eye and my wife has been havin' hysterics or Saint Vitus dance, I haven't figured out just which, ever since.
The rest of the women have somethin' to talk about now besides operations, or Johnny's teeth or what the younger generation in comin' to and even the men have been able to get together the last few days without mentioning hard times, or the price of oil, so I guess after all it was probably a good thing for the community at large. I never figured out everything that happened in the first place. It was like this:
Everyone was havin' a fine time at the picnic out by the river. Kids poppin' fire crackers, drinkin' red lemonade, fussin' and bawlin', women around in bunches talkin' about each other and powderin' their noses and gettin' things ready for a big picnic dinner out under the trees, and men in twos and threes along the creek, fishin' and discussin' the affairs of the nation, and waitin' for the gunnery honor to arrive, made this all feel that we were going to have a very safe and sane fourth of July.
Mike and Slim and Buzz and I went out in a boat and tried to fish a little and drink a lot. We drank Slim's brand and it was pretty fair, only personally I think a few more rabbits would have improved it, but it was ice cold and the day was hot and I guess the fish were all asleep or havin' a Fourth of July celebration of their own some place. Then we drank the grape juice Buzz had made, only it had been a long time since it was grape juice. Well we drank a few odds and ends we had with us, I can't remember what all it battleship, herself, and I knew it didn't hurt her any, but she began to squeal and holler and some men grabbed Mike and began to drag him off toward the creek and then when Buzz and I decided to take a hand in it, I never was a fellow to desert a friend and this was no exception. If they thought they were going to throw Mike in the creek they had another thing comin'. We barged over that crowd like it wasn't there and tried to take Mike away from those fellows. After that, it was just a mess, any way you figure it. I never before knew that there were so many logical claimants to the heavyweight title in the world, let alone in our own town. I stood up under a lot of punishment but finally I got a sock on the jaw that put me out temporarily and when I came to, there was a big guy sittin' on me, and he had my arms pinned down to my sides. Right then is when I quit trying poor Mike and started in pitying myself. All the fight had gone out of me. I tried to tell that guy as much but he just shut me up every time. I tried to open my mouth, I could hear Mike off to one side still cryin' and tellin' them that come days they'd be sorry they couldn't appreciate him. And they WILL be, too. Mike is a GOOD fellow.

After a bit, they took us four fellows over under a tree and left us there with a couple of fellows to keep us company and went back to the speakin'. We were too far away to hear all of the speech and since we had found out that that old man was so unsympathetic and hard hearted, I didn't cringe and suggested a song to drown our sorrows and so we started on our favorite song, "Sweet Adeline." Now we are ALWAYS good on that song but that day, we sure were makin' harmony of grief. I think anyone appreciated it! No sir. Not on your life. Those two guys threatened to have us thrown out of the "Order of Modern Musicians," our local club, and even announced last night, are Shepard Barclay, Sidney S. Lenz, Commander Winfield Liggett, Jr., Wilbur C. Whitehead, George Reith, E. V. Shepard, Wilbur C. Whitehead and Milton C. Work of New York; R. R. Richards, of Detroit; Charles T. Adams, of Chicago; Walter F. Wyman, of Boston and Edward C. Wolfe and Henry P. Jaeger, of Cleveland.
The new bidding system is to be called "The Official System" and embraces tactical features which all of the sponsors have found most effective in actual competition, not only in many kinds of championships, but also when used by players of average ability. Its adoption constitutes the first time in the history of bridge that such an aggregation of recognized experts has ever agreed completely on any matter of a technical nature, and marks a new epoch in the history of the game.

In order to place information about the new system within the reach of all bridge players—both those who have been upset by the multiplicity of systems previously advocated by these men and those who have been afraid to take up contract because of the chaotic situation—they have banded into an organization known as "The Bridge Authorities," and will promulgate the facts not only throughout that but all over the world.
"From now on," says the statement announcing the new system "whenever two contracts meet anywhere, it will be possible for them to play by the minimum value. They will not have to play with a long series of questions and answers about each bidding method in order to mutually misunderstandings. Any bidding system, in its widest spread value, can be easy to learn. At the same time, it must be sound and efficient winning system—and must enable a player to partner just what kind of partner he wants. It is a partner decide what to do, hand, whether to raise or make a takeout or pass."
There are four distinct kinds of hands good for justifying opening the bidding by the minimum value. Second intermediate hand, strong enough for the partner to undertake guaranteeing bid unless his partner has strength. Third is the hand which is a grand slam regardless of partner's strength. Fourth is the hand which when played in a particular way which it is advisable to play by a high bid to opponents from bidding. A system which omits these four types is incomplete. It is not his own who are of equal skill are used in any type of hand. It is essential to compel a player to make a weak bid in preference to a good no-trump though this and similar things gained ground with the lack of sound bids.
The new official system is a player without difficulty to make just what kind of holds, and to proclaim a partner. A sub-committee who have agreed upon the mental features of the new system will be ready for the playing public within a week or so."

Bridge Authorities
Agree Unanimously
On Bidding System

An Eastland bridge expert, Dr. M. C. Van de Venter, landed in the clipping below from a New York newspaper where it appeared in the leading dailies of that and other large cities. The doctor referred to in the clipping is from P. D. Courtenay, president of the Bridge Headquarters, Inc., and is a story of the work of the leading bridge teachers of the world, three of whom he knows personally; Sidney S. Lenz, Commander Winfield Liggett, Jr., Wilbur C. Whitehead.

This announcement of a uniform way of bidding and playing bridge should be of great interest to every player in this section. The most representative group of prominent bridge authorities ever assembled have agreed unanimously to the adoption of a single universal system of bidding. Their avowed purpose is:—"To preserve the game of contract bridge, to protect it from the advance of unsound ideas, to end the confusion of countless bidding systems and enable anyone to obtain pleasure from playing it." Those who signed the agreement, after a series of meetings in the Hotel Delmonico, announced last night, are Shepard Barclay, Sidney S. Lenz, Commander Winfield Liggett, Jr., George Reith, E. V. Shepard, Wilbur C. Whitehead and Milton C. Work of New York; R. R. Richards, of Detroit; Charles T. Adams, of Chicago; Walter F. Wyman, of Boston and Edward C. Wolfe and Henry P. Jaeger, of Cleveland.

The new bidding system is to be called "The Official System" and embraces tactical features which all of the sponsors have found most effective in actual competition, not only in many kinds of championships, but also when used by players of average ability. Its adoption constitutes the first time in the history of bridge that such an aggregation of recognized experts has ever agreed completely on any matter of a technical nature, and marks a new epoch in the history of the game.
