A BACKWARD STEP?

Locking part of the children of Texas out of schools, as a substitute for levying necessary taxes on the wealthy, is a backward step ever of shutting its schools to public-school-age children.

It would be equivalent in numbers to closing every school in the state," Senator Greer pointed out.

It would take about 140,000 of the 1,500,000 school children referred to as one of the backward steps. The last census showed that the illiterates had increased.

At the last of the 48 states to admit the six-year-old to its public schools, he said. "Every other state has adopted. I do not believe Texas is taking a backward step ever of shutting its schools to public-school-age children.

But the action would do the state no good this year.

Already the six-year-olds have been counted in the 1932 census and certified to the state department. In each school will draw its $17.50 from the state for each child. Why should it not use the money to educate the child?

Another factor is this: the proposal to raise from six to seven the admission age was made along with the bill recommended by Governor Sterling and approved by all school people, to allow pupils over 17 to complete high school without having to pay tuition.

"But that applies to much fewer pupils. Many have dropped out to go to work. Many have finished the public schools. Many have turned to specialized schools and training.

"The younger pupils are the ones who can go to school. They are the ones who should be in school."

"Dealing them out now would cause endless confusion," then continues, "since they already have been counted for the scholastic census, and the schools have become entitled to receive the apportionment for them, and the apportionment has been fixed upon that basis.

"Parents throughout Texas would keenly resent such action. The only reason that could be given, in the last analysis, for such action, is the failure of the legislature, before it, to levy the proper taxes upon the wealth-producing sources in the state.

Texas will not readily subscribe to the idea of taxing those growing wealthy at the expense of our natural resources, it is all right to shut the schools to make up for the lack of money on the necessity of levying more taxes.

Swallows Build Nest in Life Preserver

M'GREGOR, Ia.—Deep down in the hollow davit of a life preserver on the ferry boat across the river from here to Prairie du Chien, Wis., a pair of swallows built their nest and reared their brood.

The boat winds back and forth across the river. Sometimes the swallows go in search of food to one bank, sometimes to the other. But when the skipper, Pilot Traversy, toots his horn for a landing, the swallows wing out over the water as though they had been called, and come to rest boldly on

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—The most obvious practical effect of the Wickersham report on deportations is to make it harder for Secretary of Labor William Nuckles Doak to brand all critics of his immigration tactics as bolsheviks, anarchists and underminers of our glorious institutions.

The members of the Wickersham commission are not bolsheviks, anarchists or underminers and yet they adopt conclusions that aliens are often treated unconstitutionally, tyrannically and oppressively.

Thus the report becomes a sort of text book for those who are continually protesting some of the allegedly high-handed and hard-hearted acts of the immigration service. It says that the abuses are chargeable to the system rather than the Department of Labor and that inspectors shouldn't be expected to act satisfactorily as investigators, prosecutors and judges at the same time. But it says enough other things so that Doak is in something of an indignant rage. Doak has been staging a well-ballyhooed deportation drive and has maintained that only dangerous characters objected to any aspects of it. Both the commission and Reuben Oppenheimer, who wrote the conclusions it adopted, urged strict enforcement of deportation laws, but they also found some defects in the picture.

EXTRAORDINARY powers of the immigration officers are clearly revealed. An inspector apparently can grab anyone and rush him off as a suspected alien. He can jail suspects without a warrant, searching them and their effects. He can make wholesale raids anywhere, holding a thousand persons at a time until they prove their right to freedom. He can deny prisoners counsel at their preliminary examinations. Comparing methods of cross-examination with the Inquisition, Oppenheimer says: "It is doubtful if anywhere in the entire system of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence are government officials given similar unfettered rights of private inquiry, or is the exercise of governmental power more often characterized by violations of fairness and decency."

Anonymous letters are one of the chief sources of information relied upon to apprehend aliens. They are often written by personal enemies and sometimes even by members of the suspect's own family who want to get rid of him. Many aliens, chained at their own apprehension, give the names of others who are subject to deportation, either when arrested or by writing, back from the country where they are deported. Some immigration inspectors also use stool pigeons at strategic points, such as large factories employing many aliens.

Judge Meade Uses Horseshoe

KANSAS CITY, Kan.—Getting folks married is a matter of law, but getting them married right takes a knowledge of jinxes and charms, according to Probate Judge Henry Meade, who handles the most of Wyandotte county's weddings.

And the best charm to call on in emergency is a horseshoe, he adds.

The judge, who was at one time president of the National Horse Shoe Pitchers association, was presented a gold-plated horseshoe by the local club. He found it a good paperweight, but that was all, until one day when a nervous bridegroom dropped the wedding ring.

British Service Men Will Be Jellicoe's Host

By United Press.

TORONTO.—Delegates from 18 countries in the British Empire and fraternal representatives from the American Legion will attend the British Empire Service League fifth biennial conference, to be held at Toronto from Sept. 2 to 7.

Admiral Earl Jellicoe, grand president of the B. E. S. L., accompanied by most of the other British delegates, will land at Quebec on Aug. 22. One of the first important public functions at which Earl Jellicoe will be the central figure will be the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto on Aug. 28. This is the largest of annual exhibitions.

The following day he will take the salute when thousands of veterans of the Great War march past the grandstand at the exhibition, the feature event of Warriors' Day.

The British and American delegates will also attend the opening session of the fourth Dominion convention of the fourth Dominion convention of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League at Niagara Falls, Aug. 31 to Sept. 2. The Legion has 1,125 branches and a membership of over 195,000 in the Dominion.

The British Empire Service League is the organization that unites all ex-servicemen's organizations in the British Empire. At its conference 7,000 branches and millions of men and women will be represented. The grand patron is H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. It is expected that Earl Jellicoe and many of the British delegates will attend the annual convention of the American Legion, which opens at Detroit on Sept. 21.

The idea of locking part of the children of Texas out of the public schools, as a substitute for levying necessary taxes on the wealthy-gaining takers of Texas natural resources, is a poor way of meeting the problem, Senator Julian Greer, Athens school man, believes.

The proposal to exclude 10 per cent of the present school-age children from the public schools came back before the special session, as it had been before the regular session. It drew a prompt attack from the educator-senator from East Texas.

"This would be equivalent in numbers to closing every school in 50 counties of the state," Senator Greer pointed out.

"It would take out about 140,000 of the 1,000,000 scholastics."

"Texas often is referred to as one of the backward states in education. . . . The last census showed that the number of our illiterates had increased."

"Texas was the last of the 48 states to admit the 6-year-old pupils to its public schools," he said. "Every other state has that policy firmly adopted. I do not believe Texas will take the backward step ever of shutting its schools to one-tenth its public-school-age children."

"Anyway, the action would do the state no good this year or next."

"Already the 6-year-olds have been counted in the scholastic census and certified to the state department. In 1932 each school will draw its $17.50 from the state for each of these children. Why should it not use the money to educate the child?"

Another factor is this: the proposal to raise from 6 to 7 the admission age was made along with the bill recommended by Governor Sterling and approved by all the school people, to allow pupils over 17 to complete high school without having to pay tuition.

"But that applies to much fewer pupils. . . . Many have dropped out to go to work. Many have finished the public schools. Many have turned to specialized schools and training.

"The younger pupils are the ones who can go to school. They are the ones who should be in school."

"Dealing them out now would cause endless confusion," he continues, "since they already have been counted for the scholastic census, and the schools have become entitled to receive the apportionment has been fixed upon that basis.

"Parents throughout Texas would keenly resent such action. The only reason that could be given, in the last analysis, for such action, is the failure of the legislature, when the matter properly was before it, to levy the proper and necessary taxes upon the wealth-producing sources in Texas to meet the needs.

"The people of Texas will not readily subscribe to the doctrine that in order to avoid taxing those growing wealthy from depleting our natural resources, it is all right to shut enough pupils out of the school to make up for the lack of taxes."

That's one view on the necessity of levying more taxes.

THIS MUCH DONE

Whether half a loaf, or just a thin slice of relief, the oil industry was accorded, one measure Monday by the legislature toward nourishing it back to health.

The pipeline bill will put it into effect the moment Governor Sterling approves it.

East Texas sponsors claimed it will go far toward remedying the conditions of the oil business. The bill was handled by an East Texas Senator Pollard of Tyler. It was passed without a dissenting vote in the senate, and was accepted, 112 to 20, in the house, the votes giving already a vote that the legislature believes it workable and effective.

Whatever the fate of the conservation enforcement bill, the session will have produced at least one law designed to help the oil business. If it works out as its advocates expect, this pipeline law may go most of the way to reestablish the demoralized oil business on a sound footing.

This was the first session of the legislature ever called to deal with the economic ills of one industry. The pipeline law may be all that is done, or practically all that has meaning. It may be the important economic success that would fully justify the session.

Kearns Believes Jack Dempsey Rewon Title

Jack Kearns, one-time manager and later arch enemy of Jack Dempsey, agrees with the thousands of boxing fans who believe Dempsey was entitled to a knock-out decision over Gene Tunney in the famous "14-count" heavy-weight championship fight at Chicago.

And if Kearns had been in Dempsey's corner that night Dempsey might have gone down in history as the first fighter to regain the world's heavyweight crown.

Kearns and Dempsey split up before Dempsey's first fight with Tunney and they are no longer friendly, but the astute "Doctor" still believes his former charge was one of the greatest fighters of all times.

In a recent "fanning bee" Kearns conversation turned to the value of good seconds and he expressed the opinion that he would have made Dempsey champion had he been in Jack's corner at Chicago.

"Any good smart second would have got the title back for Jack that night," said Kearns. "At least if he hadn't forced the referee to give Jack the decision he would have made him the winner in the opinion of everyone who saw the bout and Tunney never would have had an opportunity to stage that final comeback which won him the bout and made Dempsey decide to retire.

"Dempsey's seconds never should have allowed the referee to give the '14 count.' What would I have done?"

"Well, the instant my own timer told me Tunney had been down ten seconds I would have jumped into the ring and got Dempsey out of the arena. Then it's a 100 to 1 bet that before Dave Barry would have given Jack the decision by a knockout. The official timer would have backed me up that Tunney had been down ten seconds and Barry couldn't help awarding a knockout.

"At any rate, I would have claimed the title and certainly would not have let Jack continue. If Barry insisted upon going by could do would be to disqualify Dempsey because I entered the ring.

"If he did that the whole thing would have been up to the commission and I'd have the argument that the Marquis de Queensbury rules make ten seconds the official time for a knockout. I don't think any commission rule is meant to alter the Queensbury code and I think the commission would have backed me up in the argument that the Illinois knock-down rule was made to protect a fighter arising from the floor and not to penalize the man who scored the knockdown.

Third Bout Would Have Been Greatest Ring Attraction

"I'll agree that Dempsey was a sap in not getting to a neutral corner immediately, but the fact that commissions in all states have since clarified their knock-down rules and now require the referee to pick up his count from the official timer after seeing that the other fighter is in his corner indicates that such was the intent of the rules under which Dempsey and Tunney fought."

Kearns' eyes gleamed as he dreamed of "what might have been" and he closed the conversation with a sigh:

"Gee! But that would have been great ballyhoo for a return match."

Old Schooner Salvages Self

By United Press.

ILWACO, Wash.—Of all the strange legends of the sea, none is more unusual than the chronicle of that stout four-masted schooner the old North Bend.

As she rides at anchor in Astoria, she looks like any other windjammer. But the North Bend is the only one of the fabled masted ships that ever flung herself half a mile inland and then, unaided by human hands, moved that distance through the sand to float once more, unharmed.

The tale sounds wild, but there are witnesses to vouch for it, and the channel left in Peacock Spit as the North Bend moved through the sand to open water. That channel, by the way, virtually ruined Peacock Spit as fishing grounds, so that a company which in the past had paid this state $36,000 a year for fishing rights this year refused to bid one-third of that sum.

It was on Jan. 5, 1928, that the North Bend, Portland-bound from Sydney, Australia, in ballast, was stripped of canvas in a wild storm at the mouth of the Columbia river. Hurlled by the force of a raging tide, the four-master staggered, while her crew cringed in fear. She was aground.

Morning showed how far aground she was. Half a mile of sand separated the North Bend from water. An automobile loaded in Sydney was lifted overboard and ran across the sand to Ilwaco, where it is still to be seen. Salvage efforts failed. Wedged in sand and driftwood, the North Bend could not be moved.

Then a strange thing happened. Untouched by any save the elements, the ship began backing through the sand to water. In April, 1929, over a year after she was grounded, the ship floated again in the Pacific. A tug put out from Astoria and towed her to the harbor there, where sailfolk still mark her as the boat that salvaged herself.

BEWARE!

Other preparations, we are informed, have been offered at times to those who ask for Bayer Aspirin, and even represented in some cases as being "the same as Bayer Aspirin."

Watch Out! Remember that years ago doctors warned the public against "headache remedies," some of which are harmful, depressants and unsafe for many people to take.

Then remember how Genuine Bayer Aspirin came. And who acclaimed the world over by leading men of science as SAFE relief for pain, and was prescribed without hesitation by eminent physicians. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

What folly, then, in the light of these things, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing. Don't gamble—KNOW.

The genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets are made by a special process, under careful supervision of scientists, in the Bayer Laboratories, with over 25 years of highly specialized experience.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Test Gal. 6:1-10.
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Aug. 16, Sowing and Reaping, Gal. 6:1-10.

By W. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of the Congregationalist
Problems in the early Christian church quickly became social as well as individual. The power of salvation of Christ revealed a newness of life, and a conquest over old habits and ways of living was not the whole of gospel experience. The new Christian had to live in relationship with his fellow man, and he was brought into very close contact with those who shared the new experience and the new faith. A great work of grace may go on in the heart of man, transforming the general aspect of his life so that it may very truly be spoken of as converted, but the change may not be complete and thoroughgoing in affecting every thought and attitude. The man who is intensely conscientious about some matter is apt to criticize his fellow Christian who does not feel the same intensity about that particular thing. The saint who is highly devoted to his own religious development may be unworldly in duties and courtesies in the commonplace things of life. There are those who have accused themselves to think so much of things that they are not thoughtful or considerate of other people's things.

The Law of Humility
Perhaps it is a comfort when one sees the defects and shortcomings of the church of today, to realize that the early church, even in the very generation of those who had felt the direct influence of the master and of the apostles, was not perfect. Various passages in Paul's letters, such as this in our lesson, show a great deal of light upon these things.

Here in these verses Paul is reminding the Christians at Galatia of the elemental responsibilities of the Christian life in love and kindness toward one's fellows. Apparently there were some in the church at Galatia who were censorious of their brethren and inclined to be severe upon those who had succumbed to temptation and to something unworthy. Paul reminds these censorious Christians that they ought to remember the possibility of being tempted themselves. Instead of being harsh and unkind they ought in gentleness to be doing all in their power to restore the faith and fellowship of those who had been overtaken in their fault. "It is the law of Christ," Paul says, "to bear one another's burdens." The law of Christ, also, is a law of humility, enjoining a man not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, and above all not to think of himself as something when he is really nothing.

Here, also, we come in Paul's statement to a somewhat striking paradox. In verse two he urges these Christians to fulfill the law of Christ by bearing one another's burdens. In verse five he says that "every man shall bear his own burden." The discrepancy between these two appeals is apparent rather than real. It is only where each man feels the fullness of his responsibility and is earnestly striving to bear his own burden and at the same time where each man in doing this is ready to help every other man to fulfill the same law that there can be a truly Christian fellowship or even a true society. Individual responsibility and social responsibility go hand in hand, and the one should never be an occasion for weakening the other.

Mission of Jesus.
In the midst of this responsibility it is necessary that Christians should help to instruct one another in matter of grace. The fact that men have entered into a new experience does not destroy for them the reality of the general laws of life. The fact that the man is saved even from sin does not remove the effects of sin upon him. That is painfully true in all reference to human life. "Whatever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Jesus did not come to revolutionize the university or to destroy or change its laws, he came to give man strength and wisdom working in the presence of these laws to achieve his spiritual destiny. We tend often times to take the reference to sowing and reaping to the effects of sin, but we ought to realize that that law applies in the realm of righteousness. Paul's own conclusion from the effects of sowing and reaping is that we should not be weary in well doing, that everywhere in life as we have opportunity we should be doing good toward all men and sowing the seeds of truth, love and righteousness in full assurance that we shall reap as we have sown.

The same manner as it was conducted last year. Catalog material is being placed in the hands of the printer this week and it should be ready for distribution the first week of August. Catalog carries the information that the fair is sponsored by the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club and Rotary Club. All individuals and organizations of the county are invited to actively participate in the four nights of entertainment and amusement.

These communities are invited to take part in all of the various features, the community agricultural booth, women's home demonstration club exhibits, individual agricultural exhibits, community home contests, community one-act play contest, fiddlers contest, etc. Ranger Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring an hour's entertainment the opening night and the Chamber will provide similar program the last night. Boying exhibitions will complete each night's fun.

The midway will be in full swing each night with the various concessions operated by civic organizations and service clubs of Eastland. Several new attractions for this year should make an added appeal to the public. The income from these attractions and advertising in the catalog constitute the sole source of income for financing the fair and general patronage of the midway is needed to assure the financial success of the county fair.

While the recent dry weather has damaged crops to a considerable degree there has never been better prospects for fine exhibit materials. Never has there been more canning in the county than is now being done and there should be a wonderful exhibit of home canned foods. There will be a notable shortage in fruit exhibits but garden and field crops of all varieties should be shown in profusion. The fact that farm people need money will prove an added incentive to bring in good exhibit materials. There has been more pure and certified seed planted this season than ever before which will improve the quality of stuff exhibited.

For Exhibitors
Farmers who plan to bring in exhibits may well bear in mind that the proper place to select exhibit materials is in the field just as in selecting planting seed. It should be selected and carefully preserved just as it reaches maturity and exhibits should be selected before there is bird or weather damage. It takes no little work to prepare a worthy exhibit and there must be no mixture of other seed or trash. There has been a very fine small grain crop and some excellent samples of wheat, oats, barley and rye will be shown in grain samples. Most of this will have to be hand picked to get our trash and mixtures of other seeds. Dried beans and peas are shown in gallons and require hand picking on account of the tendency to mix with other varieties. Premiums offered and the fact that this gives good planting seed already prepared should justify the work necessary in preparing a creditable exhibit. The fact also that materials once prepared may be shown both at the community fairs and the county fair again justifies the work.

Community Fairs
Dates for community fairs are as follows: September 1, Grandview; 3rd, Grapevine; 5th, Cook; 8th, Reagan; 9th, Dothan-Friendship; 10th, Alameda-Cleaney; 11th, Colony; 14th, Elroy; 15th, Nimrod; 16th, Scranton; 17th, Flatwoods; 18th, Pleasant Hill; 18-19, Carbon; 18-19, Rising Star. There are fourteen of these community fairs, all but two are for one day. Community fair catalogs or classification of exhibits are now being prepared and will be in the mails this week. There is a community fair within reach of every farm family of the county and every one is urged to participate in the fair nearest to him. There is probably nothing that brings more rural people together for the purpose of agricultural advancement and social recreation than this series of community fairs.

Jellies, Jams and Marmalades
From Farmers Bulletin
Jelly, a fruit juice that is good for jelly is one which contains acid and a substance called pectin, which is the essential jelly-making substance. Some fruits contain acid and pectin in proper proportions for making perfect jelly. With certain other fruit juices, either acid or pectin has to be supplied from some other fruit in order to make good jelly.

A perfect jelly is clear, bright, and tender, and when cut with a knife or spoon has a clean surface and does not stick to the knife or spoon. When turned from the glass, jelly should hold its shape and should quiver but not break.

In making jelly it is necessary to know in general the proportion of pectin present; on this depends not only the jelling of the mass but also the amount of sugar that will be required. Tests for pectin are given below.

If a juice does not contain pectin in a sufficient quantity, fruit juices which contain a larger proportion of pectin or extracted pectin may be added. Likewise acid may be added to a juice which lacks it, but is rich in pectin. A fruit juice that contains a small proportion of acid makes a less tender jelly than does a sour juice. Combinations of two or more fruit juices, therefore, often give better results in both texture and flavor than does the juice of one fruit used alone.

Among the fruit juices that make good jelly when used alone are apple, crab apple, partially ripe grapes, plums, berries and currants. Such fruits as strawberries, peaches, pears, pineapple, and cherries do not make good jelly when used alone.

Extraction of Juice: The fruit should be looked over carefully, and blossom ends or decayed parts removed. It is generally not necessary to remove the skins. Practically all fruits require cooking for the extraction of the juice. Juicy fruits should be cooked in small amount of water; such fruits as apples should be covered with water.

Cook the fruit until it is tender, turn it into a jelly bag and drain it; do not squeeze it but allow it to drip, since squeezing gives a cloudy jelly.

This process not only shortens the time but eliminates seconds and makes more jelly.

A second and third extraction may be made from such fruits as crab apples, apples, grapes, plums and currants by returning the pulp to the preserving kettle after the juice has dripped from it, covering it with water, heating it gradually, and allowing it to simmer slowly for 30 minutes.

Sugar: Probably many of the failures in jelly making are caused by the addition of too much sugar. Currants, under ripe grapes, and wild apples are practically the only fruit juices requiring an equal measure of sugar. Two-thirds as much sugar as juice is a good proportion for most fruits.

Cooking jelly: In general not more than six or eight cups of jelly should be cooked at one time, less may be used. The volume of the preserving kettle should be four or five times as great as the amount of juice to be cooked since there is a tendency for the juice to boil over.

Measure the juice and boil it rapidly for five minutes, skimming it if necessary. Add the sugar, and stir the juice until sugar is dissolved. Heating the sugar seems to save no time, nor does it seem to improve the quality of the jelly. Cook the juice very rapidly; this gives a bright, clear product, whereas long, slow cooking gives a dull, dark jelly or inferior texture.

Jelly test: To test jelly, take up a small amount of the juice in a spoon and allow it to drop from the side of the spoon. When the drops flow together and sheet upon the spoon, the jelly is done and should be removed from the heat at once.

Sealing the jelly: Pour the juice into clean, hot glass jars to the top. The jelly as it cools and leaves a space around the edge of the jar. Seal the jars with a paraffin cover. Seal the paraffin cover the seal the sides.

Pectin tests: The pectin test helps to determine whether fruit juice can be used for making jelly or whether additional pectin will have to be added by another juice or extracted pectin. One tablespoon cooked juice and one tablespoon combine around in the can and if there is a large amount pectin present it will be gelatinous mass; if there is small amount it will collect small particles. This test may be a tendency for the juice to go back into solution in a time.

Alcohol test: Wood alcohol denatured alcohol may be used for this test, but since they are on great care should be taken.

Epsom salts test: 1 tablespoon cooked fruit juice, 1 teaspoon salt and 1-2 tablespoons water. Stir the mixture and allow it to settle. If the mixture is clear, the jelly will be clear.

OAKLEY NEWS

OAKLEY, Aug. 13.—Health of the community is good at this writing.

Mr. Adams and Mrs. Harrell opened school last Monday with forty-three enrolled. This is about 80 percent of the total number to be in school. They will teach until time to pick cotton and then dismiss for the fall gathering of crops.

Coed Henderson, pitching for the Eastland second team, lost a no hit, no run game last Sunday when Cooper of Oakley singled in the seventh and B. Frazier re-ported with another single in the eighth inning, but was the game easily when his team mates gathered 22 runs off Cooper, Morton, and Sawyers. The score was 22 and 0.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Adams and Mrs. Estelle Harrell went to Breckenridge Monday afternoon where they received books that were necessary for their school work. We are looking forward to a very successful school term.

The Pentecostal people of Oakley and surrounding communities are holding a revival at Oakley this week. Large crowds are in attendance each night. Miss Johnson of Ranger is conducting the meeting.

Alvin Mayhall, C. C. Goforth and E. A. Barber were attending school matters in Breckenridge Monday.

Youth Protests Army's Plan

WASHINGTON.—The younger generation's interest in aviation is not waning the least, according to information at the War Department from Kelly Field, Texas.

A 13-year-old youngster of Buffalo, N. Y.—his name was not disclosed—wrote recently to officers at the Army's Texas air base protesting against reports he had heard that the Army was planning to use two-seater planes.

"Well," the boy wrote, "I vote no."

He outlined his reasons, as follows:

"When the machine gunner sees an enemy airplane coming, he signals the pilot to get on the tail of the other ship, as they usually do. What if the pilot does not get there in time and while trying to get there he gets shot in the attempt. I think that you should have one-seater pursuit planes."

The youngster revealed to Kelly Field officers that he plans to come down there soon and learn more about this flying business.

"Oh, boy!" he said, "I hardly can wait until I am at least 17 and one-half years old. I guess I can start then, can't I?"

The young airplane enthusiast fairly pleaded with the officers to reply to his letter, closing his message in this manner:

"Please send me an answer. I am waiting. Please send me any kind of an answer. My mother laughs every time I tell her I'm going to be an aviator. Well, so long, supper's ready. Goodbye."

Then, in order to impress upon the officers further his desire for a reply, the boy added a postscript, which read:

"Don't forget to send me an answer what you're doing to do. Watch what my mother'll do when you send me a letter."

Theatre Manager Turns In "Riot" Call Thursday

A "riot call" was turned in to the Ranger police department Thursday afternoon by B. E. Garner, manager of the Columbia Theatre.

According to police department records, Henry Hammond, constable, was dispatched to the scene of the "riot" and found that boys were trying to crash the doors to get into the theatre to see the free picture show.

Order was soon established without any material damage being done to the theatre.

Century Old Clock Keeps Good Time

BELFAST, N. Y.—The wooden cogs in a century-old clock were spinning at full tilt here today.

Jerome F. Gleason reclaimed the timepiece, which was built in 1822, from attic dust. He found the wheels jammed with dust and soot, and the face broken. A few hours of tinkering put it in shape, and now, Gleason says, it "keeps railroad time."

WE'VE COUNTED THE NUMBER OF TIMES FOOD IS DELIVERED TO OUR STORES

The stores we checked up on were receiving new supplies of fresh groceries sixty-two times a week — about once every hour.

Of course, some stores get fewer deliveries. Just as others get more. But all of our stores receive new supplies so often that their food simply has to be fresh.

Dorothy Mackaill will be seen today at the Columbia theatre as Margaret Nichols, beautiful fashion model whose life is complicated by discordant loves.

"The Reckless Hour" the first national romance of modern life, gives Miss Mackaill the most sensational role yet played by the English actress who won such acclaim in "The Office Wife" and "Party Husband." John Francis Dillon directed.

Vegetable and Fruit Shipments Off 7.5 Percent

By United Press.

AUSTIN.—Fruit and vegetable shipments from Texas in July dropped 7.5 per cent from those in July, 1930, mostly because of smaller loadings of watermelons, according to figures recently compiled in the Bureau of Business Research of The University of Texas.

"Although the estimate of watermelon production indicated a crop 4 per cent greater than that for last year, actual loadings for the season so far are 29 per cent under those in the corresponding period of 1930, there having been 2,950 carloads shipped in July, 1930, whereas only 2,290 have been shipped in July this year. This situation may be due to the very slow demand for watermelons and the dull market tone at the leading markets," the Bureau's reports said.

"Cantaloupe shipments for July numbered 389 carloads, or 139 per cent more than were shipped in July last year, and exceeded by 21 cars the total shipments for the season in 1930.

"Loadings of peaches, though large in comparison with those for last year, are 78 per cent and 48 per cent less than those for the corresponding month in 1929 and 1930, respectively.

"With the season for the late spring and early summer crops just about over, shipments of fruits and vegetables should decline considerably over the next two months.

"The index of prices received by producers for fruits and vegetables, as calculated by the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics on the basis of 1909-1914 as equal to 100, stood at 110 in July as compared with 114 in June, and 173 in July of 1930."

RENO, Nev.—All that glitters is not gold, P. E. Morrison, interior decorator from Philadelphia, admitted today after abandoning all illusions about prospecting, especially in old wells. A metallic gleam at the bottom of a dry shaft on the Birks ranch west of here lured Morrison to investigate. But when he had lowered himself with a rope to within four feet of the bottom, a chorus of hisses and buzzes informed him he was intruding on a rattlesnake residence. His shouts for help brought rescuers, including the fire department.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Liane Barrett, 18 and beautiful, tries in vain to forget Van Robard when his engagement is announced to Muriel Ladd, popular debutante. Liane's mother, Cass Barrett, is an actress and it is during Cass's engagement in stock at a fashionable Long Island summer colony that the Barretts meet Mrs. Cleespaugh, wealthy widow. When Cass goes over to the fall Liane becomes Mrs. Cleespaugh's secretary. Clive Cleespaugh, the widow's only son, asks Liane to marry him. Clive cannot inherit his father's fortune unless he marries before he is 25. Liane accepts, agreeing the marriage is to be a matter of form only.

Tressa Lord, jealous of Liane, tries to make trouble for her. Tressa conspires unsuccessfully with a gang of blackmailers. Later Liane is kidnapped but rescued by McDermid and Clive.

Liane and Clive are married, spend a honeymoon in the south and then return north. Muriel slopes with Chuck Deansome, newspaper reporter. Weeks pass and Liane encounters Robard on the street. He begs her to go abroad with him. She confides in Cass and learns she is not Cass's daughter but the daughter of Cass's sister, Luisa, and Robard's stepfather. Luisa was Robard's first wife. Van is killed in an automobile accident. Liane is overwhelmed by a sense of guilt and finally runs away. In a New Jersey town she finds work, half-starves herself and becomes ill. She recovers and with health comes the knowledge of the deep love she has for Clive. Believing Clive cares for Tressa as considering his happiness above her own, she suggests a divorce. Clive says the matter shall be as she wishes. Tressa comes to visit them. She declares Liane has lost her husband's love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLV

To be young is to be impatient. Tomorrow will not do. It must be today! Liane, thrashing about for a solution to her difficulties, her mind to go to Clive and show her cards. She wanted to say, "Shall we make a clean break of it? I think we'd better. We can't go to this way."

Liane scarcely knew what held her back from this move because as the days passed and Tressa's air of proprietorship over Clive deepened her agony increased. She said to herself, "This is unendurable. Anything would be better than this."

But because she had suffered greatly in the past year she temporized. She watched and waited, but turns despairing and then hopeful.

The day Tressa drove into town with Clive Liane endured agonies of jealousy. The worst of it was that she had no right to resent. Only four months ago, she had said to Clive, "I love someone else." She had expected sympathy and understanding. She had not stopped to wonder how he might be hurt.

"I've learned a lot about love," Liane mused sadly. "I may make a great many mistakes in the future but never the same ones again."

Muriel came out that day for tea. She was a gay and bright-eyed girl in a red cap and coat and bright hat which made her look like a robin reborn herself.

They talked of nothing and of everything as they sipped their tea. Liane found Muriel watching her curiously. The other girl blurted out suddenly, "Don't think me a busy-body, but I must tell you everybody's talking about the dead set Tressa Lord's making at Clive. People wonder why you have her in the house. She's been snatching with him. She even goes to his office. It looks pretty bad. I hate being a babble, but you're such an innocent I thought perhaps you ought to be told."

Calmly Liane said, "It's all right. I know all about it." She managed a smile but her heart was lead in her breast.

Muriel shrugged. "Well, I suppose you know your own happiness but to me this girl's a cobra, and wouldn't trust her three minutes with my boy friend."

"She's our guest," Liane said in that same lifeless tone. "Nothing could be wrong." Muriel gave her a pitying look. "Don't be that way! You know things happen. You can't close your eyes to them and pretend they don't exist."

Liane said "Thanks for telling me, but I know you mean it in a friendly way but honestly everything is all right."

After Muriel had gone she walked up and down, distraught.

Some of that's awfully good. Didn't know you liked it or I might have got you some of the others."

"Oh, there are eyes that he can see. And hands to make his hands rejoice, But to my lover I must be Only a voice."

"Oh, there are breasts to bear his head, And lips whereon his lips can lie, But I must be till I am dead, Only a cry."

He put down the book quietly and looked at her. The bright tears were falling at last. He thought angrily, "Must she weep for that man always?"

"Good night," he said, softly. He felt a boor, desecrating a shrine.

She raised those brimming eyes to his. How was he to know that she wept for him and him alone? She wanted to hold out her arms to him, to cradle his head against her heart.

Instead she said "Good night." Clive closed the door softly, shutting her in with her tears.

Tressa stood watching him amusedly as he turned away. "My dear man," she began laughingly. "He wheeled. You? I thought you'd turned in."

"I hadn't. I wanted a final smoke and hadn't a single one left." She exhibited her case of silver gilt and jade as proof. "My dear man, how long has this been going on?" she inquired as they went downstairs together. She looked back at the closed door.

Clive flushed uncomfortably. "Don't know what you mean."

"Ah, yes you do. She's no wife to you, Clive darling, and I know it." She patted his arm. "Anyone can see."

His eyes darkened, flashed, "I forbid you to speak like that."

She smiled airily. "Oh, very well. But it's foolish of you. You know how fond I am of you. I only want to help." She pouted.

Suddenly he said, "Tressa, didn't you tell me that you called the house that time?"

She tossed her head. "I did try, ages and ages, but no one answered."

He fixed her with a stern, forbidding glance. "You said you had got them—that you had given Clive the message."

She blew a cloud of smoke airily before she answered. "Did I? Well, I must have been thinking of something else." She laughed at him, all impudence. For an instant he stared into her mocking.

Expert Studies Soul of Food
 ROME.—Little eggs are more nourishing than large eggs and a pint of small grain is more fattening and healthy than a pint of large kernel grain, writes Dr. Giuseppe Tallarico in "La Technique Agricole Internationale."
 Dr. Tallarico, who is a member of the Italian parliament and the national research council, has completed a long series of experiments on the "soul" of food as it affects the unborn child. He has found, by experiments on small animals, that the food taken by the prospective mother determines in a large measure the ability of the child to combat ordinary diseases. He believes that food taken by a prospective mother has a "soul" which is imparted to the unborn child. He says there are qualities in food which escape physical and chemical examination but which, however, bestow greater building power upon the embryo infant.
 He has found that cooking destroys the soul of food, because its vitality is killed. Hence he says prospective mothers should avoid cooked food as much as possible.
 Fertilized eggs, spring milk, germinated grain are vital substances, reports. Many small eggs are better than a few large eggs, while a pound of mixed fodder and grass is better than a pound of any variety.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN
 BY SISTER MARY
 NEA Service Writer
 ALTHOUGH all of us are not fortunate enough to have our own tomato patch, we nevertheless are able to serve this fruit-vegetable at a comparatively low price at this season of the year. Fresh tomatoes are coming into the local markets in abundance and they are at their best when they are "home-grown" and sun-ripened. Fully matured, naturally ripened tomatoes are rich sources of vitamins A, B and C and should appear daily in our menus as long as they are obtainable.
 Tomatoes make an economical substitute for oranges just now, while the citrus fruit is scarce and high. Keep in mind, however, that tomatoes have only half the vitamin C content of oranges and use them in proportion. Other fresh fruits and vegetables add their share of vitamin C also and help to keep up the necessary standard.
 A recent investigation regarding the iron content of certain fruits and vegetables reveals that the juice contains only a small part of the iron in oranges and tomatoes. This definite bit of scientific information is of great value to the homemaker since it enables her to make the most of her foods.
 They're All-day Food
 The ways of serving fresh tomatoes are countless. From breakfast to dinner they find a welcome. A toasted bacon and tomato sandwich is an appetizing innovation in the breakfast menu. A tomato juice cocktail is a stimulating first course for a luncheon or dinner or breakfast. Stuffed tomato slices are almost legion, the number of combinations being limited only by the cook's imagination. Fruits, vegetables and meats—including fish and poultry—combine excellently with the pleasant tartness of tomatoes.
 As the season advances, fresh tomatoes can be used to advantage in hot dishes. They are particularly good in scalloped dishes since the juice supplies enough liquid. Plenty of coarse buttered crumbs must be used in order to absorb

Tomorrow's Menu
 BREAKFAST: Chilled apple sauce, cereal, cream, little pig sausages, bran muffins, milk, coffee.
 LUNCHEON: Stuffed onions, tomato and banana salad, toasted muffins, chocolate milk shake, vanilla wafer.
 DINNER: Baked ham, scalloped potatoes, chard with lemon sauce, watermelon and green pepper salad, blackberry cobbler, milk, coffee.
 To four tomatoes suits the average taste. Salt, of course, and often pepper and a hint of spices, increase the piquancy of tomato dishes.
 The following tomato dish is delicious enough to take its place in any company dinner and is desirable when at hand.
 Tomatoes and Mushrooms
 Three large tomatoes, 1-2 pound fresh mushrooms, 1 large sweet onion, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.
 Wash peppers and remove pith and seeds. Cut flesh in shreds lengthwise. Peel and mince onion. Melt butter in frying pan, add shredded pepper and onion and cook over a low fire until tender. Add mushrooms which have been skinned and cut in quarters. Sprinkle with salt, sugar and pepper and cook until tender, about fifteen minutes. Serve on triangles of hot toast.

 Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, Miss Rita Donaho, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Donaho, of Comanche, became the bride of J. Frank Norris Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. J. Frank Norris of Fort Worth. The bride formerly resided in Eastland and has many friends here. The ceremony was read by the father of the bridegroom at the First Baptist church.

Preceding the entrance of the bridal couple, Miss Marian Donaho, sister of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly," after which the wedding party entered to the strains of the Wagner watermelon feast played by Miss Janice Miller of Memphis, Texas.
 The bridesmaids were Misses Elizabeth Anthony and Judith Clarke of Comanche and the matron of honor was Mrs. Frank Mackey of Colorado, sister of the bride. Little Stanley Fox, nephew of the bride, carried the ring on a cushion, and the little flower girls, Sulina Speed and Ruth Adele Moore of Comanche, scattered rose petals in the path of the approaching bride.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Jim Gaddy Norris of Fort Worth.
 The bride wore a rose beige chiffon frock with waist of graduated tucks, and a pleated skirt. Her corsage was of pink roses and lilies of the valley.
 An informal reception was held following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, after which the young couple left for San Antonio and other cities of South Texas to spend two weeks before going to Austin, where they will make their home.

Sponge Necklaces Worn
 PARIS.—Sponge necklaces have made their appearance in Paris and are both beautifying and utilitarian. So artistically are they designed that they can be worn, not only with bathing suits and beach outfits, but also with street costumes, and are excellent for traveling in case the wash cloth has been forgotten. The sponges are cut into odd shapes, like boxwood wedges, and tinted in attractive colors.
 An Arkansas jury refused to return a verdict before receiving its fees. You might say justice not only is not blind but has excellent foresight.

PARIS STYLES
 By MARY KNIGHT,
 United Press Staff Correspondent.
 PARIS.—With the rising of the first fashion sun on the winter horizon the strongest rays are definitely black and white. Colors may grow pale, or vivid, but black and white remain with us inexorably the same—yesterday, today and tomorrow, wherever the Parisian point of view is concerned.
 If one day's doings can give us any definite idea of anything about our winter fashions we may say that satin and velvet will weigh high line our wardrobes. The next layer will be taffeta followed by lame and crepe. Not a piece of chiffon was shown by Yveb at her inauguration of the fall and winter mode. Lace, yes, but not in combination with chiffon. Either by itself, or with net it should find itself combined into an evening gown.
 Printilla is the name of a new and lightweight open-weave cloth created for dresses, and Mohariah combines mohair in its fabrication into a cloth of fine diagonal stripe with undulating lines sweeping over them in novel fashion.
 Tweeds and woolens will have their hour, and from the numbers of them making first bows, that hour will elongate itself into months. One is called Scotchmash, a term used to describe the yarn with which it is woven. It is a double type fabric presenting a homespun face, rugged and durable looking.

PARIS-LONDON AIR TIME CUT
 LONDON.—The door-to-door time by air between London and Paris has been reduced 20 minutes by Imperial Airways. The road connections between the air ports and the cities, as well as the aerial journey between Croydon and Le Bourget, are now made in 3 hours 40 minutes. Access to the Croydon air port by road has been made easier by Imperial Airways changing the London terminus of the company from Charles street, near Piccadilly Circus, to Victoria station.
