YOUTH'S GUIDING LIGHT.

The world conference of the Y. M. C. A. found that the world's young people are dissatisfied and restless, conscious of standing on a new frontier but having no notion of what they are ahead of them.

In this fact there is both hope and danger. Considering the sorry mess that we adults have made of the world in the last decade or two, it can't be anything but encouraging to learn that youth is doubting our wisdom and is preparing to strike out for itself along a new trail.

But looking for a new path isn't the safest thing imaginable. This dissatisfaction of youth since the World War has led to innumerable tragedies. It has caused the destruction of many fine young men and women. It has led to such disheartening phenomena as the atheistic "youth movement" of Russia and the hard-boiled Fascism of restless young Italians and Germans.

Naturally enough, then, the international Y. M. C. A. feels that it can tackle no more important job than the job of trying to get youth started in the right direction.

Just how that is to be done is perplexing. The first thing that youth lost when the world's follies disillusioned was its old respect for its elders. It has not, for more than a decade, been in a mood to take a great deal of advice from the rest of us.

Yet the job can be done—if only a genius or two will be along to do it. For youth is as ready now as ever to follow an ideal, if it can find a worthy one. Indeed, it is chief because the old ideals that we held up to youth fell into mud that young men and women today are restless and rebellious. They have an enormous fund of idealism, an enormous reservoir of unselfish faith—and we are not giving them a chance to use it.

The confusion of youth is chiefly our own fault; and if youth fails to find an objective on which it can lavish its faith and hope—that, too, will be largely our fault.

FOR ALL TO ENJOY.

Bluebonnets, cedars all Texas flowers, shrubbery and trees, will be protected and preserved under a bill which Senator Margi Neal has on the calendar awaiting favorable action it deserves.

The bill would check both the inconsiderate plunderer of the peddler of flowers and greenery. It would keep the peddler and plants where they belong, for all to enjoy alike and none to plunder. The bill prohibits taking or destroying any tree, shrub, vine, flower, moss or turf on any highway, the land of any other person or any state park or sanctuary, except by permission. It lists all the native Texas flowers and plants, and besides making unlawful their taking also provides penalties for transporting or selling such property other persons or the public.

We all have seen thoughtless plunderers of the roadside. Trees broken and damaged. Every year hundreds of small trees are stolen and peddled for Christmas trees. Texas is striving toward a policy of beautifying its highways and public grounds. Senator Neal's is a first and necessary step toward preserving that which makes up this beauty. Hundreds of garden clubs and other public-spirited groups in Texas are dedicated to efforts in harmony with the proposed law, and will warmly welcome its help and its blessing.

FIGHT THE FIRE MENACE.

This country needs an intensive public movement against fire waste.

It cannot too often be repeated that the individual is generally solely responsible for the gigantic annual fire toll of lives and property. The fire insurance industry, aided by various public and private organizations and groups, carries on an unceasing, year-round work in an effort to promote a better understanding of fire hazards, fire-resistive building construction, more adequate fire-fighting facilities, and building inspections. This work has certainly not failed—though it our fire waste would reach a far larger total than present.

Fire prevention is mainly a matter of using one's eyes and one's common sense. If wiring is regularly inspected, chimneys kept free of accumulations and chimneys and heating units cleaned and examined, the average property's chances of burning will be small.

Let's give fire the careful treatment it deserves—and doing that, save the greater part of the half-billion dollars of property and the ten thousand lives that the "red snace" now destroys each year.

ONLY A CRISIS BRINGS TAX RELIEF.

A stir of concern in governmental circles in Washington, has occurred over the suggestion that a logical way to reduce the cost of government is to cut federal, state, county and municipal salaries 10 to 20 per cent. Over five million persons are shown in a partial list of public employees. All citizens and voters. It is not at all probable that any reduction in numbers or salaries will result except by the ultimate action of the people. Once boards, commissions and public payrolls are established, little help can be secured from public officials, who depend on votes to hold their positions, reduce official overhead.

An army of public employees is one of the greatest dangers that follow paternalism in government—tax-consumers then control elections and in a large measure determine income they shall receive from the taxpayers. Only in a crisis develops and the common citizens revolts against confiscatory taxation, is any relief secured.

TARIFF ISSUE RETURNS.

It is beginning to look as if the 1932 presidential campaign will be in at least one respect a return to the political methods of two or three decades ago. It will be a campaign in which the tariff will play a very large part.

In recent years national campaigns have not hinged on a tariff. The subject has been mentioned, of course, now and then, but nobody paid much attention to it. It meant votes either way, and it got much less attention than it deserved.

Now it begins to look as if the tariff will be one of the main features of the next campaign. The recent interchange between Senator Smoot and George on the sugar duties has started the ball rolling. One of the favorite "issues" of a generation ago is showing remarkably promising signs of

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The tourist crop here isn't quite what it was last year and visitors are more careful of their pennies, but the effect of depression on the size of incoming summer crowds seems surprisingly small.

The capital remains America's prize sightseeing spot and at this time it presents a better show than in any previous summer. A $200,000,000 building and beautification program for Washington, the biggest thing of the sort ever planned by any government, has long since begun and all the way from the White House to the Capitol grounds you can see the vast program in various stages of raising and new construction.

Museums Popular
 There is no means of checking the number of visiting sightseers, but within a year, according to the Smithsonian Institution, some 1,500,000 persons have entered its four national museum buildings. Assuming that each sightseer went through the three principal buildings that would mean half a million individuals. The first half of the year even showed a slight increase in visitors to these museums and there were 195,000 in June as compared with 187,000 in June a year ago.

Sixty-five thousand went up in the Washington monument in July as against 57,000 in July, 1930, although previous months of this year had shown a decline of about 20 per cent. Guides at the Capitol estimate a 25 per cent drop in their business, but not in the number of visitors. Many persons, saving money, just won't pay a quarter a head to be guided. The local tourist camp is doing as well as usual because it gets what might formerly have been hotel trade. But it doesn't make as many sales. And you don't notice the souvenir trade in Pennsylvania avenue shops flourishing as well as it ordinarily does in the peak tourist months of June, July and August.

Wreckers Keep Busy
 The $10,000,000 Internal Revenue Building in the Triangle is also finished. Elsewhere you can see more wrecking and excavating than you ever saw before because the Triangle will also contain the Justice, Labor, Interstate Commerce Commission, Archives, Post Office, Coast Guard and Independent Offices buildings.

Away from the Triangle some $5,000,000 is being spent to beautify the Capitol grounds and you can see the foundation work on the $9,000,000 Supreme Court Building opposite the Capitol, alongside the Library of Congress.

C. of C. Groups Asked To Aid In Use Cotton Move

Special Correspondent.

AUSTIN—Formation of local branches of the national movement to stimulate cotton consumption has been suggested to chambers of commerce, throughout the state by Lowe Simons, executive secretary of the Texas division, national association for the increased use of cotton.

In a letter addressed to every chamber of commerce in the state, Simons urged them to hold brief membership campaigns, and enroll as many persons as possible in the movement. "There are certain definite objectives," Simons wrote, "that can be accomplished by this association, and which, when they have been attained, will mean the savings of millions of dollars to the cotton producing states every year. This is not a mere idea; it is tangible fact."

"In view of the keen interest in the cotton situation, which is indeed grave, we are bringing our organization to the attention of chambers of commerce, throughout this state. A live committee in each chamber could take hold of this and put it over."

"This is not just another organization in an already over-organized land. We have already accomplished a great deal, but the surface has barely been scratched. The aid and support of every individual interested in his personal welfare and in the welfare of the south, is urgently solicited in this enterprise. It is an enterprise which will take concerted action, but one which can be put across to the lasting benefit of the cotton industry and consequently to the whole south if we all put our shoulders to the wheel."

FARMERS OPEN WHEAT MARKET

By United Press.

MIDDLETOWN, O.—City officials have given farmers in this vicinity permission to take their wheat to mills to be ground into flour and then sell it in the city market place themselves. Frank Stevens, market director, said he believed farmers would realize more on their crops because of the city's action.

Texas Seeking Wider Market

By United Press.

AUSTIN—Fortified by strong inducements from Gov. Ross Sterling and the governor's southern states cotton conference, officials of Progressive Texans, Inc., are conducting a series of meetings over the state to discuss the organization's plans with sectional and community leaders.

Charles R. Tips, Three Rivers manufacturer, who was drafted to the position of organization manager, asserted he had been greatly encouraged by recent public expressions recognizing the merits of the organization. He referred particularly to the resolution of the cotton meeting delegates, recommending the plan to all southern states, and Gov. Sterling's reiteration of the same idea—that every state in the south might profitably adopt the program outlined by Progressive Texans of industrial development.

"The position of the entire south," Tips said, "is comparable to that of Texas, in that there is not an equilibrium and the products of the soil. Texas has leaned heavily on foreign export markets—particularly for cotton, the principal agricultural crop—and these foreign markets slowly and apparently inevitably are disappearing. Hence the over-production."

Governor Sterling, in his commendatory statement, declared that while legislative plans to curb over-production were being considered, too little attention has been paid another possible avenue of approach to the over-production problem—the developing of more and wider markets for Texas products.

Chinese Population Is 474 Million

By United Press.

PEIPING—The latest census of China, compiled by the Ministry of the Interior, shows the population to be 474,787,000. This is 15,000,000 less than the post office estimates of 1926.

Due to disorders in several parts of China at present, the latest estimate is considered approximate. Dr. Warren S. Thompson, head of the Scripps Foundation for study of Population Problems, who recently completed a year in China, declared that it is possible to say only that the population of China is somewhere between 350 and 500 millions.

PRISONER'S FOOD FOR HIS FAMILY

ELYRIA, O.—A prisoner at the county jail here was found saving food out of his own meager rations for his wife and their 13-year-old daughter. Sheriff Clarence Adams said the wife brought an empty basket to the jail every day, and after visiting with her husband, who is serving out a $300 liquor fine, left with a few morsels he had given her. The sheriff let them keep the food.

Loudest Drums Is Owned in Colorado. WIGGINS, Colo.—Milliam Beard, a rancher, who lives here, believes he has the oldest, and certainly one of the loudest drums in the world.

Back in 1870, James Denny, a Civil War veteran, and a cabinet-maker by trade, who incidentally was Beard's grandfather, set about to make himself a drum. He fashioned the shell from cherry wood, and tanned sheepskins for the head. From solid pieces of wood he turned the sticks and over the end of each wrapped deer skin. The drum was made in Indiana. It has descended through the family until it now is in the possession of Beard. Thirty-six inches in diameter across the top, and two feet deep, it has a sonorous and impressive tone.

Heart of Liane by MABEL McELLIOTT

CHAPTER XLVIII Liane wished that the music might never stop. Never again would she be so young and so fair and so lovable-like. Her joy was tinged with the faintest touch of sadness, making it perfect. She said at last: "I can't en- lobster thermidor after that. It would be sacrilege." He folded her coat around her and they drifted away, glances following them as they passed. In the great foyer of the hotel the girl saw a face she knew. Impulsively she put out her hand. "Shane McDermid. How nice to see you?" The big man in the brown suit smiled. "Well, well! It isn't Miss Barrett any more, is it?" "Not now." Clive shook hands with Shane cordially. "I haven't forgotten that you saved our lives." Shane nodded. "Oh, awfully. Why should I mind? You've been one of my best friends."

Her Story WILL AMAZE YOU

Norma Kent's elopement made her picture familiar to newspaper readers throughout the country. When following her marriage to wealthy Mark Travers, she was swept into drama that neared tragedy, she showed courage and loyalty that make her story one of the most absorbing serials of recent years.

"Guilty Lips," written by Laura Lou Brookman, tells how Norma finally won happiness. It begins

August 19th in this paper

one in blue pleaded of the woman behind the big urn. Her tone made the other look up suddenly. "Muriel Ladd!" she began, half-latching in her surprise. "The girl in blue began to chatter animatedly. 'I think this is the most marvelous idea,' she cried. 'I've been reading about it in the papers. Mrs. Waring, one of your trustees, is a friend of mine. She asked me to come.' 'I'm so glad you did,' Cass Barrett said warmly. She relinquished her place to one of the girls and said, 'Let me show you some of our rooms. They're lovely. I'm house mother, you know, and maybe I don't love it. I think perhaps I'm better as a house mother than I was as an actress.' Muriel protested but the other woman pointed ruefully to the streaks of gray in her hair. 'I was out of the ingenue class by miles,' she said, 'and it's rather nice not to hear 'You're not the type' from a casting office any more. Although," she smiled, "I still am an old fire horse in this at least. I do get excited when our girls put on 'As You Like It' and I smell grease paint once more." She led her guests from cubicle to cubicle. The rooms were miracles of neatness and ingenuity. There was charm, too, in the chintz draperies, the little maple beds. No dormitory stiffness here. It was a place any girl might like to call home. Muriel praised everything. Then she asked with interest, "How are the young marrieds? I've been west with my husband. Haven't had news of them in ages." Cass beamed. "Hadden't you heard? They got back in April after nearly a year abroad. Last month their little girl was born. She's a pet. You must go to see

"How nice of you to come," she smiled to Muriel. "I'm still havin' to be lazy, Doctor's orders." They kissed after the fashion of women who have not met for long time. The languid caller accompanied Mrs. Desmond as down to blow cigar rings casual as they talked of matters which only faintly interested her. "May I see the baby?" Muriel begged. Liane touched a bell ring at her side and a starched Scotch nurse carried in a mite smelling of warm flannel and talcum powder. "Isn't she precious?" Muriel demanded. The languid lady of the smoke rings agreed. "Curious things, babies," she offered. "Never could understand them." Liane laughed. "They don't need to be understood. Only need to be fed and washed at this infant age, at any rate." The nurse looked daggers at the caller, held in such dangerous juxtaposition to her charge. "I don't think the air in here good for her, madame," the nurse said stiffly. Liane laughed. "Take her out, Nana. We won't contaminate her if we can help it."

She might have thought the was a little later, if she had seen young Mr. Cleespaugh unlock the street door, take those narrow steps two at a time, and rush headlong into the room where his wife lay. No languor could have been proof against the embrace he gave her nor the look of tribute he put her fragile loveliness. He said in a troubled voice "Howells told me when I called that you had headache. I rush straight home—" "It was nothing. I stayed a too long this morning. I'll go sick the rest of the week." "Darling, promise me you will. She took his head between her two slim hands. "Fussbudget she said. There was an interval and she told him, "Muriel Desmond was here today. She liked a child." "Jealousy he demanded. 'Wouldn't she? Luisa's perfect like her mother.' Liane laid her cheek against her husband's. "Darling, sometimes I'm frightened, it's all so perfect. Do you suppose you'll always be this way? I should die if you ever stopped caring—" "Stoutly he cried, "But I never shall. I shall love you forever and ever." She laughed, exultant, but the were tears in her eyes. (THE END)

Every LUCKY STRIKE is made of the finest tobacco leaves the world can offer—the finest from Turkey—the finest from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and the Carolinas—the Cream of many crops throughout the world. But all tobacco leaves, regardless of price and kind, as nature produces them, contain harsh irritants. LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process—a process that mellow, that purifies, that includes the use of the modern Ultra Violet Ray—expels certain harsh irritants naturally present in every tobacco leaf. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds, who use them as a base in making sheep-dip, as well as a powerful spraying solution for trees, flowers and shrubs—enough to permit the daily dipping of over 50,000 sheep or the daily spraying of many thousands of trees. Thus, you are sure these irritants, naturally present in all tobacco leaves, are not in your LUCKY STRIKE. "They're out—so they can't be in!" No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.
