MURRAY'S SON QUESTIONED IN KILLING

Wickersham Report Says Crime Costs Billion

ABOUT THIS AND THAT.....

E. A. Ringold, collector of school taxes for the city of Ranger, has received a letter that could serve as an object lesson to most of the payers of city or school taxes. The letter follows, with the name omitted.

"Mr. Ringold:
"I went to the city hall this morning to finish paying my school tax and I was told I could see you at your office, but as it is not convenient for me to visit you at your place of business I am enclosing check. Please advise me if all is right. If I were making the laws I would have them so when a person became too old to pay poll taxes I would exempt them from home- and school taxes, but as I have not been called upon to arrange them, I will have to abide by them for the present.
"I may have a girl living with me who may want to attend school. Please excuse me for being late with my taxes. It took all to pay the city.
"Respectfully,
"MRS. _____
"P. S.—I paid half, I think, in May."

INVESTIGATION RECOMMENDED BY COMMISSION

Says Federal Government Spends 52 Million Annually on Justice.

By PAUL R. MALLON, United Press Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Crime costs the American people far more than $1,207,656,821 a year, the Wickersham commission disclosed today in its thirteenth report entitled "The Cost of Crime."

How much more, the commission declined to say. It found the ramifications of secret illegal industries too vast and its own funds too short. It refused even to fix a definite minimum figure but it cited many items in the crime ledger, which, added together brought the total well over the billion mark.

Some items were roughly estimated, some were frank guesses, while others—like the profits from racketeering—were left with a perplexing question mark in the tables of costs.

A further investigation was recommended to determine the facts.

The commission did convince itself definitely of many things, the most important of which were:

The federal government is spending $52,786,000 a year to administer justice to criminals.

Three hundred cities are spending $247,700,000.

Sixty-six per cent of the federal expenditure goes for prohibition enforcement.

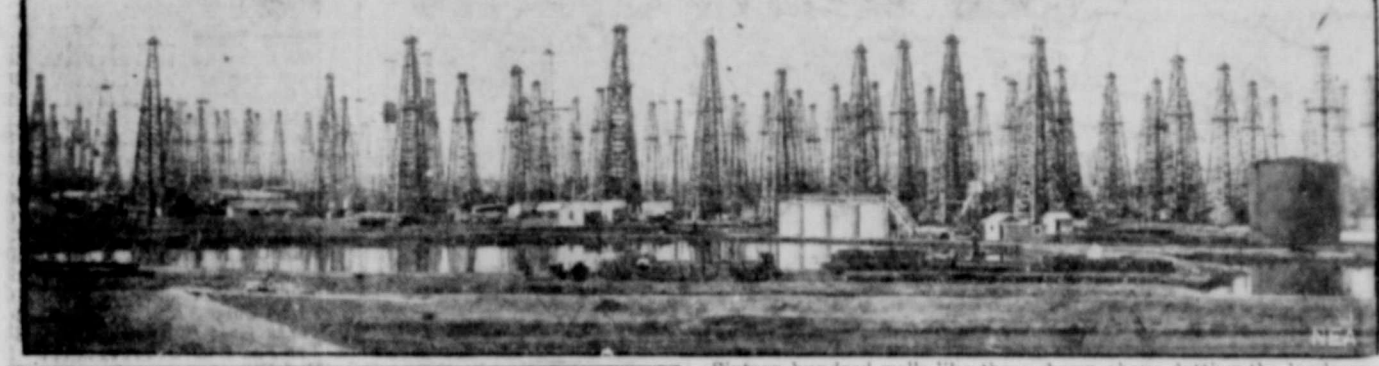

Some unnamed cities have wasteful and inefficient criminal justice machinery.

An immediate investigation should be made into racketeering—which is called America's most costly modern crime.

An investigation should be made to determine which cities are wasteful.

AS TROOPS SHUT DOWN TEXAS OIL WELLS

Sixteen hundred wells like those shown above dotting the landscape in the great Texas oil fields were shut down as Gov. Ross Sterling proclaimed martial law in an effort to force higher prices. At the left are shown officers checking in Troop A, 124th Cavalry unit from Fort Worth, called to help enforce the order. As the result of the shutdown action by Governor Sterling and the previous closing of Oklahoma wells, two-fifths of the entire crude oil production of the United States—nearly 1,000,000 barrels daily—was cut off.

RANGER IN SEMI-FINAL GOLF MATCH

Members of the Breckenridge Country club will invade the Ranger golf course Sunday afternoon in the next to last scheduled game of the Oil Belt Golf association matches. The only other game of the season for the Ranger club will be with Breckenridge and will be played in the Dynamo City.

By virtue of the defeat suffered at the hands of the fast Thurber club, Ranger is now in a tie for first place in the percentage, sharing the top position with Thurber.

Should Ranger win both her games with Breckenridge and Thurber win two—all that are left on the Thurber schedule—Eastland, the championship of the association would still be tied up and a play-off between Ranger and Thurber would be necessary. Should either team lose one of their matches and the other win the championship would be decided without a play-off. It was pointed out today by A. Neill, president of the Ranger Country club.

Both Breckenridge and Eastland have heard teams to defeat and there is a possibility that one of the two leading teams will go down in defeat in at least one of the matches, Mr. Neill said today. He has urged all Ranger players to be out for the match as it is one of the most important for the Ranger club in the entire schedule.

SAYS HE KNOWS NOTHING ABOUT PURSER'S DEATH

Says He Left His Gun in Cabin of Man Found Dead.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—W. Murray, son of "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, governor of Oklahoma, was questioned today by department justice agents in Brooklyn in connection with the death of Jesse Apud, assistant purser on a liner Southern Cross, who was found dead in his stateroom Monday.

Murray told agents there he had been a party in his cabin, but which he and some of his gun had gone to Apud's stateroom. He said he had left his pistol, which was later found beside the body Apud, in the dead man's room. He demanded any knowledge of how an assistant purser might have been shot.

GOVERNORS ASSEMBLE TO PLAN COTTON REDUCTION

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 21.—Governors, legislators and cotton men from a dozen states gathered here today at the call of Huey P. Long, governor of Louisiana, to consider a plan for a year's holiday on cotton growing.

The conference to be called to order today by Governor Long is "open to the public," he announced and "we will consider every plan offered for relief of the cotton farmers."

Delegates began arriving Thursday. The governor's plane was sent to Austin to bring Lieutenant Governor Edgar Witt. Witt had told Governor Long by telephone that he would be unable to come as he had to be back in Texas Sunday. Long immediately placed his plane at Witt's disposal.

Governors Blackwood of South Carolina and Farnell of Arkansas arrived during the night and Governor Sampson of Kentucky came this morning. More than a score of United States senators and congressmen were here.

Governor R. S. Sterling of Texas, largest cotton raising district in the world, sent J. E. McDonald, agricultural commissioner, as a personal representative and announced he was "heartily in favor of some plan to reduce cotton acreage in 1932."

New York Gang Trapped After Siege

When 100 policemen laid siege to a Brooklyn, N. Y., apartment house and trapped six youthful desperadoes, they also discovered Margaret Walsh, 19 (left), of East Rochester, N. Y., and Jean McQueen, 20, (right), of Rochester, N. Y., in the gang's hideout. Here the two girls are shown being questioned by detectives after their arrest on charges of vagrancy. Miss Walsh told police she had been kidnapped from the New York restaurant in which she worked.

DERRICK ON MAIN ST. IS REPAIRED

The big steel derrick at the foot of Main street in Ranger, which was erected several years ago during the oil jubilee, is being repaired and strengthened by the addition of guy wires as a measure of safety.

The derrick had been considered a menace to public safety because the foundations had rotted away and the one guy wire that helped to hold it in position was considered inadequate. Several motorists have, in the past, struck the structure in turning corners and the derrick had been knocked out of line. It is believed up with the street, its foundations installed and several additional guy wires added. The city health department decided the derrick was a menace to traffic and started dismantling it. So many protests from Ranger citizens were received that it was rebuilt.

The work is being done by competent derrick men under the supervision of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce.

TWO PILOTS DIE IN CRASH

FREEPORT, Texas, Aug. 21.—Two Fort Crockett pilots were killed here at 9:30 a. m. today when their plane crashed into a power line across the Brazos river and dived into the stream.

The two fliers were believed to be Lieutenant Edgar C. Walthall of Atlanta, and Sergeant W. J. Smith, stationed at Fort Crockett. These two were making observations in that section.

The plane, apparently having engine trouble, passed over Freeport at about 100 feet and barely missed several buildings.

As it crossed the river the plane ran head-on into the power line and dropped.

It was recovered from the water and the bodies recovered at noon.

BURIAL FLAGS AVAILABLE AT COUNTY SEATS

Announcement of burial flags to be issued to veterans of any war through post offices at county seats has recently been received.

Section 201 of the World War veterans act as amended by Section 12 of the act of July 3, 1930, provides:

"Where a veteran of any war including those women who served as army nurses under contracts between April 23, 1898 to Feb. 2, 1901, who were not dishonorably discharged dies after discharge or resignation from the service the director shall furnish a flag to drape the casket of such veteran and afterwards be given to his next of kin regardless of a cause of such death."

Each county seat post office (which in this instance means the post office at Eastland) has been designated as an issue point for the distribution of burial flags. Mr. A. H. Johnson, postmaster at Eastland, has a supply of flags together with necessary application blanks and instructions which are now available at the Eastland post office.

The person requesting the flag will be required to exhibit the original discharge certificate of the deceased veteran or to submit other documentary evidence or information which will assist the official in determining the application in determining the veteran's eligibility to a flag.

Applications may be made by relatives, representative of an organization having charge of burial, person arranging burial services, undertaker or other person having knowledge of the facts and acting in the interest of the deceased or in his family.

Dr. H. B. Tanner, secretary of the chamber of commerce at Eastland announces he will be glad to render any assistance possible to those entitled to these flags.

SCHOOL ITEMS

Much has been said about the fact that a court decision had been rendered requiring all students over 18 years of age to pay tuition in the high schools of this state. This condition has been remedied by a law passed by the legislature last week to the effect that hereafter it would be legal for students over 18 to attend the public schools free of tuition.

Much interest is being manifested in Ranger and surrounding communities on the part of those desiring to enter college this fall. A considerable increase in attendance upon the Ranger Junior college is expected this fall.

Answering the many inquiries as to when school will open, this is to announce that school will open on Wednesday, Sept. 9. Completion of registration will be had on Monday and Tuesday as will be definitely announced later. Already most of the students of the high school were registered before the close of the spring term.

Work is being pushed on the high school and college library. Miss Holmes, the librarian has been on the job since Aug. 1. The library is being catalogued according to standard methods.

A number of the teachers and principals who have been attending university summer courses have returned and are enthusiastic over the coming session's work.

Cigarette Dealers Puzzled Over Stamp Tax Effective on Saturday

Result of the new cigarette tax, effective in Texas at midnight, is a matter of speculation for dealers, jobbers and salesmen—who await the reaction of consumers before expressing an opinion as to how the new statute will affect sales. The price, incidentally, goes to 20 cents a package.

The question hinges on whether the smoker complacently accepts the tax, pays an additional three cents for the standard 20-pack package, "rolls his own" or "bootlegs" his smoking supply from a tax-free state, according to those of the selling fraternity.

A Dash of Color
The stamps may not add much to the joy of the smoker, but they will add a dash of color to the cigarette package. They are described as slightly larger than a postage stamp, bearing a lone star, the state emblem. The 3-cent stamp for a package of 20 cigarettes is green the 1 1/2-cent for a package of 10 is blue and the 7 1/2-cent for a 50 package is orange. There are stamps of other denominations for packages of five, eight and 12 cigarettes, but they will rarely be seen in West Texas, according to dealers.

Several Ranger cigarette retailers may have to go out of the cigarette business temporarily Saturday morning or replenish their stocks, it was learned today.

After passage of the cigaret tax law banks in various cities were asked to handle the stamps as an accommodation to the treasury department of the state and to the customers of the banks. The Commercial State Bank of Ranger agreed to handle the stamps and $482 worth were sent to the bank for sale. H. C. Wilkerson of the Commercial State Bank, said today.

Shortly after receipt of the stamps one wholesaler purchased $300 worth of them and since then other wholesalers and retailers have purchased all the available supply of the 3 cent stamps that are to go on the 20-cigarette packages. Some stamps for the 50, 10 and 12 cigaret packages remain at the bank, but some said that they had heard several say that they intended to do so before the law went into effect.

Ranger drug store managers today said that they had not noticed any increased sale of cigarettes this week by those who were laying in a stock, but some said that they had heard several say that they intended to do so before the law went into effect.

(Continued from page one.) before midnight tonight, and who are unable to purchase stamps will either have to discontinue the cigarette business or lay aside their present stock and buy ready-stamped packages from the wholesale houses until another supply of stamps can be received.

Dealers seem to be somewhat confused about the method of affixing the stamps and the procedure to follow in carrying out the law. Some seem to think the moisture-proof containers must be removed and the stamp placed on the package proper while others think it should be placed on the outside of the protecting wrapper.

HOK AND SLIDES Henry L. Farrell

Behind the Front

THE football trenches from a bird's-eye viewpoint look pretty much the same as usual. But in the dugouts behind the lines are several new commanders-in-chief, some of them issuing official orders on their own for the first time this fall.

Along the Atlantic coast, Eddie Casey is the new boss at Harvard, taking the place which Arnold Horween resigned last year. Al Wittmer has the spot Bill Hoper occupied so long at Princeton. Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, a "mule" in the lineup of the Four Horsemen, is chief navigator of the Navy forces.

There are two new faces in the south. One of them, Wallace Wade, is an old face in new surroundings at Duke University. Frank Thomas, another Notre Dame grad, has Wade's old place on the crest of Alabama's Crimson Tide.

There are three changes in the middle west. Heartley (Hunk) Anderson has inherited Notre Dame's annual "suicide schedule." Indiana has promoted E. C. Hayes to the job Fat Page held. Iowa State took George Yostker, a basketball coach, from Michigan and installed him as head coach of football.

And on the west coast, Skipper Bill Ingram, late of the Navy, has fallen heir to the job of making something of California's football players.

Anderson's Job

WHAT will these fellows do this year? Try to produce a championship team, probably. At least they will strive to put out fighting teams that will give good accounts even in defeat.

Some of them may not develop a championship even this fall, or even next year. And some of them may not get another chance after this season.

THIS warning is printed to put the public on guard against a deception which may be practiced against those who seek genuine Bayer Aspirin for pain, headaches or colds.

We take this means of warning you, so you may be able to protect yourself and family against results of such deception.

Other preparations, we are informed, have been offered at times to those who ask for Bayer Aspirin, and even represented in some cases as being "the same as Bayer Aspirin."

Watch Out! Remember that years ago doctors warned the public against "headache remedies," some of which are heart depressants and unsafe for many people to take.

Then remember how Genuine Bayer Aspirin came. And was acclaimed the world over by leading men of science as SAFE relief for pain, and was prescribed without hesitation by eminent physicians. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

What folly, then, in the light of these things, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing! Don't gamble—KNOW.

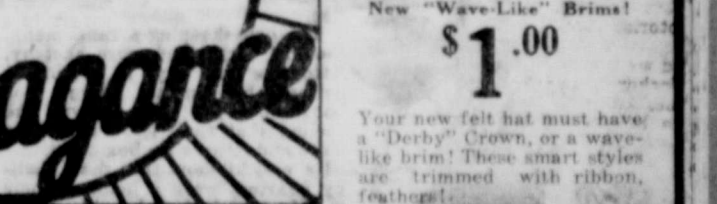

The genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets are made by a special process, under careful supervision of scientists, in the Bayer Laboratories, with over 25 years of highly specialized experience.

So when you want SAFE relief for pain, cold or headache, ask for BAYER ASPIRIN. You have a perfect right to ask for what you want. And an equal right to get what you ask for.

Look for the name BAYER on the package. And the word Genuine in red. Insist on Genuine Bayer Aspirin and refuse to accept a substitute.

GUILTY LIPS

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "MAD MARRIAGE" ©1931 BY NEA SERVICE INC

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Norma Kent, pretty 20-year-old secretary, is employed in a law office in Marlboro, middlewestern metropolis. On her way to keep a dinner engagement with Bob Farrell, young lawyer, Norma sees a puppy in peril of its life in the midst of downtown traffic. A stranger rescues the dog and brings it to the girl. The stranger's good looking, well dressed and introduces himself as Mark Travette. Norma refuses to tell him her name or where he can see her again.

She takes the puppy with her and meets Bob. They dine at a favorite restaurant. For the third time Farrell asks her to marry him. Norma refuses, saying she wants to keep their association on the basis of friendship instead of love. When she reaches the shabby apartment which she shares with Christine Saunders, generalist called "Chris," she finds her roommate has been crying. Norma sees Chris is falling in love with her married employer, Bradley Hart, proprietor of an advertising agency. The older girl refuses to tell what is troubling her. Next day Norma goes to the office of the Marlboro Press to insert an advertisement about the puppy in the last and found column.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

The red-haired youth glanced up from the pad on which he had been writing. His smile was pleasant, infectious.

"Did you wish to place an ad?" he asked.

Norma said that she did.

"If you'll just step over to the next counter I'll be glad to take care of it," the young man said. As he spoke he moved toward the last-topped counter at the left.

"I see. Is your dog lost?"

Norma continued the search. "No," she said, "it isn't my dog and I didn't lose him. It's a puppy I want to advertise about because I thought some little boy or girl might be terribly unhappy over losing a pet. I've written out what I want to say—"

She had found what she had been looking for. From the collection of papers, coins, vanity cases and other trinkets in the purse she drew a neatly typed sheet.

"Here it is!" She handed the paper across the counter. "Do you think what I've written will be all right?"

Possibly the young man studied the paper. He read:

"Found: Puppy at Broad St. and Eighth. Gray and brown with black spot over right eye and black tip. Owner should communicate with N. Kent, 3008 Franklin St. Gray and brown with black spot over right eye," the youth read aloud. "You don't—er—say that kind of a dog it is, do you?" he glanced up. If there was a hint of amusement in the young man's face his professional manner was impeccable. "Gray and brown," he repeated, "with a black spot over right eye."

Norma smiled, shook her head. "I couldn't say what kind of a dog it is because I haven't been able to decide. Do you think that's really necessary? He seems to be sort of Scotty—only Scotty's don't have spots, do they? His hair is long like a Scotty's but the spots make me look more like a fox terrier, maybe a bird dog. You see he's little fellow?"

The youth across the counter winced.

"If it's so complicated as all

"Well, I think it would be good for you to step out and have some fun," Norma urged.

That, he suggested, "maybe we'd better let it go. The rate of charges is anything about claiming a reward?"

"Oh, no! I wasn't thinking of that."

"I see," the young man studied the typed page again. "Don't you think it might be a good thing to include your telephone number? And would you care to specify a time for people to telephone?"

Norma agreed to both proposals. What a helpful, obliging person the red-haired youth was! Of course writing want ads was his business. He did that all day long. Norma had never tried to frame an advertisement. She thought her effort was considerably improved by the additions.

The youth counted the words and explained the rate of charges. It was arranged that the want ad should appear in all editions of The Press at the special price offered for three days' insertion. In case the rightful owner of the dog appeared earlier the ad could be canceled at any time.

Norma hurried back to the office of Brooks, Welliver and Brooks, feeling well satisfied with her venture. The advertisement stated that inquirers should telephone between the hours of 6 and 10 p. m. Norma gave the number of the house telephone which all the tenants used. She and Chris could not afford a private line.

Of course there would be no calls that evening. The advertisement was not to appear until next day. At 5:15 Norma met Chris on a corner mid-way between the buildings where the two girls worked. They boarded a car and rode home.

At a delicatessen shop near the apartment they bought rolls, some slices of cold meat and oranges. As they went about preparation of the evening meal Chris seemed quiet. Norma, recounting events of the day, apparently did not notice.

The housekeeping arrangements the girls employed were sketchy. After the long day in the office neither had much energy for housework yet both enjoyed the feeling that the two-burner gas plate and minute ice box constituted a real kitchen, that their shabby quarters were a home. Their weekly rent included maid service for housework yet both enjoyed the feeling that the two-burner gas plate and minute ice box constituted a real kitchen, that their shabby quarters were a home. "It's for you, Miss Saunders. Telephone," Norma could hear Bessie Hawthorne's nasal voice floating upward.

Chris descended. Five minutes later she had returned.

"That new salesman wanted me to drive somewhere tomorrow evening for dinner," she announced.

"Aren't you going?"

Chris shook her head. "I'm not interested," she said.

"But why not?" Norma urged. "It's getting so you don't go anywhere!" she said. "It's certainly not because you don't have plenty of chances! Why don't you go?"

"Oh, I just don't want to. He's a nice enough sort, I guess. Selby's his name."

"Well, I think it would be good for you to step out and have some fun."

Chris did not answer. After a moment she said, "I'll tell you what I will do. If you think you'd like to meet him I'll invite him out here some evening. Or I could fix up a date—"

Norma shook her head. "No," she said. "Not right now, anyhow. I haven't been very nice to Bob lately and I wouldn't want him to think it's because I'm interested in anyone else. I don't want to hurt Bob's feelings."

"I'll go!" Norma sprang to her feet and ran into the hall. She had supposed it was the telephone but at the foot of the stairs she met Bessie.

"It's a man," Bessie said in a hushed voice, "to see you."

The door of the vestibule stood ajar but Norma could not see who was waiting. She stepped forward, pulled the door back. For a long moment she stared at the figure in the doorway.

inal justice machinery does not cost too much.

A weeding out of laws—eliminating unnecessary social restrictions—might well be undertaken as a measure of economy.

Although the word prohibition is not directly mentioned in that connection, the commission incorporated in its report the report of its leading investigator, Sidney P. Simpson of the New York bar, who said:

"A part of the money now required to be expended in the administration of criminal justice is spent in the enforcement of statutes applying to conduct with which it is a matter of defeat whether the people and the criminal courts are intrinsically fitted to deal, and which must, in some cases, at least, be regarded as outside the limits of effective legal action by means of the criminal law."

"A thorough overhauling of our criminal codes with a view to appraising the social advantage of such statutes and comparing that advantage, if any, with the cost of their administration would appear highly desirable from an economic standpoint."

"It is clear, we think, that the cost of enforcing the criminal law would be less if it did not attempt to forbid and punish acts participated in by large numbers of otherwise law-abiding citizens who do not regard such prohibited acts as 'criminal' except in a technical sense."

"However, the desirability of thus reducing the burden imposed on the taxpaying public by expen-

This picture shows fire fighters working desperately to check the flames sweeping through Montana's rich forests. With the trees and undergrowth heavily dust-laden, the fire hazard is now beyond that of the holoocaust year of 1929. The commission was concerned over racketeering—the process of extorting money by threats from legitimate and illegitimate business. It found that racketeering now is probably the most profitable form of crime and "had come to pervade a substantial part of the national economic life."

Investigator Simpson reported to the commission that "the alliance between racketeering and the activities of certain labor unions is reputed to be close."

"Comprehensive investigation is very difficult," Simpson continued, "and would, indeed be highly dangerous to the investigator. Nevertheless such investigation is a task which urgently needs to be carried out."

Grain Weevil Control.

The low price offered for farm products has made it generally desirable for the farmer to hold his grain in storage, and this in most cases is done. That he may profitably thus hold his grain according to the R. R. Reppert, Extension Entomologist, it will in many cases be necessary to control the weevils that gather insects that normally infest grain.

In the first place, it should be understood that no practical treatment will render the grain immune to subsequent attacks. The best method to be accomplished is to kill the insects present at the time of storage. Weevils will later migrate into the bins, and their migration may make it necessary to repeat control measures. Farmers should from time to time examine the grain to determine whether infestation and fumigation in their judgment damage the grain to demand action.

While several methods of fumigation might be suggested, we consider the use of carbon bisulphide, otherwise known as high test, the most practical under conditions of farm storage. In using this material, it must be remembered that there is danger of fire, explosion, and all fires and hot cigarettes should be kept away until the bin has been fully fumigated.

Fumigation with carbon bisulphide is not effective at low temperatures, and the work should be done only when the general temperature is above 50 degrees and night temperature is 50 degrees or above.

In fumigating, it is necessary to confine the gas. A loose bin will not be successfully fumigated. An ideal storage bin is one built of matched lumber. If such a bin is available, but opens above into an open barn, it will be necessary to cover the top of the grain with a heavy canvas. Piles of grain on the barn floor or in open bins may be fairly well treated by covering them in the same manner.

Generally six pounds of the liquid carbon bisulphide should be used per thousand cubic feet of grain. This should be computed only on the basis of the grain itself, but of the open part of the bin above the grain extending to the ceiling.

Application of the material should be made in large shallow pans, so it will evaporate quickly. The gas is heavier than air, and these pans should be placed on the surface of the grain. Pour the liquid on the grain will destroy the germination of that which it comes in contact. In general we consider it best to make application in the pans as suggested.

Ex-President Among Captured Cuban Rebels

Albany Woman Builds Telescope

ALBANY, N. Y.—Mrs. Thomas A. Jenkins owns a six-inch reflecting telescope which she made.

The mirror, which Mrs. Jenkins placed on exhibition at an amateur astronomers' meeting at Springfield, Vt., brought forth much admiration. Several telescope authorities declared it was the best amateur six-inch mirror made in some time.

Mrs. Jenkins devoted six months to grinding the glass with an emery wheel and a barrel in her apartment dinette. The mirror had to be ground first to the rough, then to the focal point and finally to a perfect 96-inch focal point.

The mirror, it is said, is capable of distinguishing the rings of Saturn. In order to be able to do this, a telescope requires the finest of grinding and polishing astronomers said.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

A Gospel for All Men

Text: Acts 11:5-18. The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Aug. 23. A Gospel for All Men. Acts 11:5-18.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist.

No story could be more definite or sweeping, in its application to present problems and situations in the world than the story of Peter's vision on the housetop. Sectional and racial prejudices are still extreme in the world, and a Christianity that theoretically acknowledges the love of God for all men, and the power of the Gospel to bless and save all men without distinction, seriously breaks down when it comes to deal with practical situations both as regards individuals and groups. This is true here in America, as in India and in South Africa and in other zones of conflict. Perhaps one of our weaknesses at the present time, as Americans, is our readiness to suggest how these problems may be solved by Great Britain and other countries while we disregard our failure to solve them at our very door, and within our own house.

Peter was in the same situation as many professing Christians today. A new and enriching experience of religion had come to him, but he had carried over into that experience a fair amount of formal prejudices and practice without realizing how seriously these things were in conflict with the spirit and teaching of the new religion that he professed. When he found men who were not, like himself, Jewish, and who were not the heirs of religious faith and privilege, sharing in the experiences of the Gospel, he did not know what to do. He held aloof from these men, and he had a feeling that the new experience and the new fellowship must be confined to certain classes. Apparently it required a strong vision of the manifestation to dramatize the facts for him and to make him see the unreasonableness and un-Christian nature of his prejudices.

Meaning of Vision.

In his trance as he fell asleep and dreamed on the housetop he saw a great sheet let down from heaven by four corners, and in this sheet he saw many beasts and birds. He had been hungry when he fell asleep, and in his hunger he heard a voice bidding him to kill and eat. His reply was that he had never eaten anything common or unclean. Whereupon the Divine Voice said, "That which God has cleansed call thou not common or unclean." Even while Peter mused on what the vision might mean, there came a knocking at his door of Gentiles from Caesarea sent from Cornelius, the centurion, to solicit Peter's offices in instruction and religious guidance. Peter in spite of his prejudices could not miss the meaning of the vision. If God could pour his blessings and gifts upon the Gentiles, why should Peter withhold baptism and fellowship from them?

It was a plain vision of facts and principles to which Peter himself never quite fully adhered, for there came a time when Paul tells us he had to withstand Peter to his face because certain old prejudices and distinctions were still persisting and affecting Peter's attitude toward other Christians in fellowship.

Sees Right Way.

But the vision and experience that Peter had that day marked the right spirit and the right way of looking at things. We shall never break down the things that separate and divide men until we view the problems of life from the standpoint of a God who loves all men without distinction and the power of the Gospel that, wherever it is applied, becomes manifested regardless of nationality, or race, or color, or the outward differences which even in our religion we tend so often to establish into barriers of separation and misunderstanding. Prejudices die hard, but they always die when they come in contact with the Gospel preached and lived in fullness and sincerity.

Peter was at his best when he was living up to his vision. We are all at our best when we live up to the vision of our inspired moments, and the life of our dreams is nobler than the life of our prejudices.

RODEO AT FRANKELL

"Prayer Problems and the Perils of a Prayerless Life" will be the theme of the Saturday night service. In this message discussion will be given to presumptions prayers or prayers that God will not answer. Divine healing will also come in for discussion to attend.

"Samson Shorn" or "A Costly Haircut" will be the theme of the Sunday night message.

The services will likely continue throughout the next week though a definite decision will not be reached until Sunday.

Large crowds have been attending the services it is said and much interest is being manifested.

A service for boys and girls is being held each evening from 7:30 to 8:00 at which Mrs. Turner gives a bible story.

Interest Mounts In Huck Finn Contest Today

"Huckleberry Finn to the right is Huckberry Finn."

This call and announcement will be made by the judges after they "look over" the boys who gather at 12 o'clock noon Saturday in front of the Ranger Times office and parade to the Arcadia theatre for the greatest contest ever conducted for the boyhood of Eastland county, the Ranger Times-Arcadia theatre Huckberry Finn championship competition.

There were community groups, there were families, twin boys, brothers and sisters—every sort of combination and scores of boys who were not a part of any group—a grand rush to see "Huckberry Finn" as played by Junior Durbin.

Judges On Task.

The three judges of the Huckberry Finn championship contest, H. J. Stafford, H. R. Ghoson and George Mansour, took a long, lingering look at the long line of boys and girls, men and women, that filed into the Arcadia theatre this afternoon, especially the boys, and realized what a difficult task will be their's tomorrow when they meet to select the Huckberry Finn prize winners.

No foulin', boys, it's easy to win the Huckberry Finn prize. All you have to do to win the Huckberry Finn championship is to appear so much like Huck that the judges will say you are "sure enough" Huckberry Finn. Huck was a regular cuss, just like hundreds of boys here in Ranger. He loved to romp and play and have fun just like you do.

From what you know about Huckberry Finn, how do you think he should be dressed? Figure this out for yourself, then get on your toes, or maybe you are wearing the exact kind right now, and appear as much like your mental picture of Huckberry Finn as you can.

Your idea may win the two and a half dollar gold piece and the money of being named the Huckberry Finn of Ranger. Or it may be one of the other prizes of great tickets.

There are no age limits or restrictions. The parade starts at 12 o'clock sharp from the Ranger Times office. And believe me, boys, it will be a real parade with a band and everything. The Ranger High school band, directed by R. L. Maddox, realizing the greatness of the occasion, have volunteered their services and are leading the parade tomorrow.

Old Cordova salt lake in Crane county, Texas, a royal Spanish salt when Texas was part of Spain is being made a commercial producer of salt by the building of a plant employing 30 people. In early days ranchers raked the salt into piles with wooden rakes and hauled it off by wagonloads for their cattle.

U. S. Leads in Electrified Railroads

THE United States now has more miles of railroad track electrified than any other country in the world. The American total is 4,272 miles of track and important new electrifications under way or authorized will soon add greatly to this mileage.

Switzerland has 2,900 miles of track electrified, Germany has 2,370 miles, France 2,100 miles and Italy 2,040 miles. The present world total is 21,000 miles. In fact, if all the electrified track of railroads in various countries could be laid out as a single track line along the Equator it would be possible to travel almost around the world on an electric train.

The world's most ambitious new project is the Weir scheme to electrify 61,000 miles of main track and sidings in Great Britain. Even in the Orient, passengers are riding in electric trains. Japan has 1,470 miles of track electrically operated and proposes to bring the total to 9,000 miles.

Electric projects already completed by various railroads have required more than 100,000,000 pounds of copper, of which about 120,000,000 pounds have been used in the United States. The vastness of the proposed new British electrification may be realized from its estimated copper requirements of 1,000,000,000 pounds.

Copper and its alloys are used in every detail of electrification from generation of power to the ultimate use of current in motors which propel the trains. Copper wire and cable are particularly important for transmission of power and for the overhead and feeders which distribute it to the trains. Recent overhead construction in the United States has required 15,000 to 20,000 pounds of copper per mile of railroad track.

America's greatest electrification is that of the Pennsylvania cover-

Circle—A daily scene during construction of the copper overhead of the Pennsylvania's great electrification project in the East. More than 100,000,000 pounds of copper and requiring about 25,000,000 pounds of steel. Some 1700 miles of new electrification are being added to this system. More than 100,000,000 passengers passing annually through New York's railroad terminals no longer note the familiar puffing, steaming "iron horse." They are hauled by silent electric motors.

COUNCIL TELLS HOW TO CUT DROWNING TOLL

By United Press.

CHICAGO.—The heavy summer toll of drownings would be considerably reduced if the knowledge of prone pressure resuscitation were universal, the National Safety council believes.

Each year, says the council, scores of persons are saved from death, but hundreds more lose their lives because no one close at hand is familiar with proper resuscitation methods.

The council recommends the following method:

ONE. Lay the patient on his stomach, one arm extended directly overhead, the other bent at elbow, with face turned outward and resting on hand, so that nose and mouth are free for breathing.

TWO. Kneel, straddling the patient's thighs, with your knees placed at such distance from the hip bones as will allow you to assume a comfortable working position over the patient. Place the palms of the hands on the small of the back, with fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib, with thumbs and fingers in natural position, and the tips of the fingers just out of sight.

THREE. With arms held straight, swing forward slowly, so that the weight of your body is gradually brought to bear upon the patient. The shoulders should be directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

FOUR. Now swing backward, completely removing the pressure. Then repeat the operation, regularly, timing it to about 12 to 15 times a minute.

FIVE. Continue without interruption until natural breathing is restored. Patients have been brought back to consciousness after four hours' work.

SIX. An assistant should loosen clothing about the patient's neck, chest and arms as soon as resuscitation starts.

SEVEN. Keep patient warm. Do not give any liquids whatever until patient is conscious.

EIGHT. To avoid heart strain, patient should be kept lying down after recovery. If the doctor has not arrived upon recovery, patient should be given some stimulant, such as one teaspoon of aromatic spirits of ammonia in small glass of water, or a hot drink of tea or coffee.

NINE. The work should be done immediately at nearest possible point to where patient receives injuries. He should not be removed until breathing is normal and he is fully recovered.

The treatment is to be used in gas, or electrocution cases as well as drowning.

Where Six Died When Propeller Flew Off Tri-Motor

All that remained of the tri-motor airplane which crashed at Cincinnati killing six is shown here. Pilot Marvin Odell, shown in center, one of the six dead, made a dramatic struggle to bring the ship down.

Maybe the grasshoppers in Nebraska and North Dakota are only making hay-hey while the sun shines.

safely after a propeller had flung off as the ship took off for Atlanta. The terrific speed of the motor caused by the loss of the propeller caused the motor to be torn and fall out.

Toltec Ruins Give Up Well Preserved Ancient Mummy

By United Press.

CORTIZ, Colo. — The Toltec ruins owned by Lee Dawson, three miles southwest of Cortez, are yielding some valuable archaeological specimens.

Dawson's most recent discovery, and perhaps the most valuable, is a perfectly preserved mummy, which was uncovered a short time ago. The mummy is that of a man of one of the ancient races which inhabited the southwest centuries ago, and it is in such a remarkable state of preservation that Dawson was able to put it in a case immediately after it was unearthed, for display near the ruins.

The body, finger and toe nails, and hair are in a splendid state of mummification. One ear is dried to the head, but is visible.

The mummy was discovered in a long tunnel which connects two rooms. A willow mat, upon which the body was placed, was well preserved, and pieces of weaving, instruments for such work, and all other small items found near the body were in good condition and were placed in the case with the body. Dawson's theory is that the mummy was once a weaver in his ancient tribe, and those articles were placed beside him in death, so that he might continue his occupation in another world, as was the ancient belief.

Remarkable, too, was the fact that the shroud which covered the torso, the cords which bound the man's knees, even to the knot which connected them, are plainly visible. The shroud, investigation showed, was constructed of feathers.

The findings in the Toltec ruins have added a great deal to man's present knowledge of the ancient peoples. Dawson, during the past year working alone, has discovered knives, pottery, arrowheads and other properties of the ancient inhabitants of the village. Plates carrying hieroglyphics, which he says contain the history of the people of that day, have been uncovered, together with a key which will enable him to decipher the plates.

Barber Rejects Jail Customers

By United Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—If Arthur King, Kansas City barber, were not quite so fastidious regarding the customers who go under his shears, the municipal farm today might have a first class tonsorial artist in attendance to assure summer comfort for the prisoners there.

King appeared in court at the behest of two motorcycle patrolmen, who said they had captured him after he had driven his motor car 48 miles an hour on a downtown street. Judge Thomas Holland looked the prisoner over, then asked his occupation.

"I'm a barber, Judge," was the reply.

"Fine," said Judge Holland, releasing him.

Tomato Catsup
1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon mustard, 1 teaspoon each whole cloves, cinnamon and peppercorns, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 pint vinegar, 2 red peppers seeded and cut into 1 gallon tomato pulp. Add 1 cup of chopped red peppers (seeded) and 2 medium sized onions to 1 gallon of red tomatoes. Cook thoroughly, through sieve, measure the pulp and add to it the spices, which should be tied in a bag. Cook for 2 hours, add vinegar, and cook for 2 hours. Rapid cooking keeps fine bright red color in the catsup. To avoid burning stir constantly. Pour the catsup into sterilized jars or bottles. Set the catsup at once in a vessel of water having a false bottom to prevent breaking. Put the cork in loosely, and process at 10 pounds for 30 minutes, and seal tight. When cool the mouth of bottle into melted paraffin.

Grape Juice
After washing the grapes, crush and heat. Fruit juice will be readily when the fruit is crushed, but the pulp should not be used to boil. When the pulp is thoroughly soft, strain through fine cheese cloth or flour sack to remove as much of the juice as possible, then strain the juice through a flannel cloth to remove seeds. Heat the juice until it is very hot, but not boiling. Strain into sterilized bottles, place corks in loosely, and place in a water bath, and process for 15 minutes at a temperature just below boiling. Press the cork in tightly and dip in hot paraffin, if jars are used, seal tightly.

CISCO C. OF C. SPONSORS TOUR

Jointly sponsored by County Agent J. C. Patterson and Cisco Vocational Teacher E. H. Varnell plans are being made for a tour of Eastland county farmers to Spur Friday of next week where the group will study results of experiments in soil conservation work that are being carried out there. The work of this government agricultural station is being closely watched by agricultural people all over the nation, said Mr. Varnell, and some interesting facts have been brought to light as a result of experiments there.

Among them he mentioned findings that cotton land with as little as a two per cent slope loses by washing as much as 20 tons of soil per acre a year, and also that approximately 40 per cent of the rainfall is lost through evaporation and drainage.

The caravan of farmers and agricultural workers, travelling by motor, will leave the Cisco chamber of commerce at 5 o'clock in the morning making the trip to Spur and returning the following evening.

Anyone wishing to accompany the motorcade is directed to get in touch with either Mr. Patterson at Eastland or Mr. Varnell at Cisco chamber of commerce.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY, NEA Service Writer

ATE August and early September bring lima beans in abundance to our markets. These beans are a heartier food than the green beans of summer, and, according to the manner of serving, add many calories to the diet. One-fourth cup—four level tablespoons—served lightly seasoned with butter furnishes 100 calories of protein, fat and carbohydrates, while it takes one cup of string beans to furnish the same amount of food value. However, the vitamin content of green beans is higher than that of limas, for green beans are classed with the leafy vegetables.

There are several varieties of lima beans, tiny green ones, large green ones and large flat whites, but they all must be gathered for immediate use before the milk becomes firm inside the tender shell-like covering. As the beans ripen, this covering grows hard and difficult to digest, and the creamy center becomes dry and unpalatable. No matter how long the beans are cooked, these conditions cannot be altered.

If lima beans have been allowed to become over-ripe before gathering, the best way to serve them is to rub them through a colander after cooking and use them in a sauce or soufflé. This removes the tough, indigestible covering, but of course does not restore the delicate flavor of the tender vegetable.

Seasoning Adds Fat
Since beans are lacking in fat, this must be supplied in the seasoning. The most delicious way to serve lima beans is in pure cream. One-half cup cream seasoned with salt and pepper and two cups cooked beans makes the addition of butter unnecessary. Heat cream to scalding point after pouring over beans, but do not let boil. Portion to use for this sauce. Cook limas in a little water as possible to prevent burning and cook uncovered. Let the water cook away or use it in the sauce. Remember to salt them when they are about half done. If you add salt when the beans are put on to cook, there's danger of toughening the covering, but they have a better flavor if the salt is cooked in. Allow 30 to 40 minutes for beans to cook and form the habit of shaking the pan in which they are cooking. The fatness of lima beans often causes them to stick to the bottom of the pan and scorch even when there is plenty of water over them. Shaking the pan prevents this without crushing the beans as stirring would.

Used in Succotash
Lima beans usually are rather high in price. But if they are combined with sweet corn in that old-time dish our great-grandmothers learned from the Indians, a delicious vegetable dish can be made to serve a large number of persons at small cost. Succotash is often made with green beans but is at its best when limas are used. Two cups of lima beans and two cups of sweet corn cut from the cob will serve six persons. The beans must be cooked until almost done before the corn is added. Or left-over beans and corn can be used in convenient proportions.

The firmness of lima beans makes them excellent to use in salads. Their rich protein content makes them a valuable addition to the vegetable-plate meal or any early autumn dinner when the meat course is light.

Cement Output Shows Increase
AUSTIN—In line with the usual seasonal tendency, production of Portland cement in Texas increased from 634,000 barrels in June to 648,000 barrels in July, but this increase of 1.9 per cent is rather small in comparison with the increase of 13 per cent between these two months in the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research's index of cement production, according to the bureau.
"July production this year is 10 per cent greater than it was in 1930," the report said. Shipments, too, increased slightly, reaching 696,000 barrels in July, as compared with 693,000 barrels in June, but were 1.8 per cent smaller than in July, 1930. The usual seasonal increase is 10 per cent.
"Although stocks of Portland cement in Texas mills at the end of July were 7.3 per cent less than in June, they are 11 per cent greater than in July of 1930 and are the highest for any July on record."
"In the United States, July cement production was 19 per cent under that for last year, with shipments and stocks for July 27 per cent and 1.3 per cent smaller than in the corresponding month of 1930. Plants were operating at 62 per cent of capacity as compared with 77.8 per cent in July, 1930, and 86 per cent in June, 1931."

Europe's Economic Condition Halts Plans for Coup
By United Press
PARIS.—The somewhat confused situation in Europe has halted the plans of the Hungarian monarchists in their restoration of young Otto to the Magyar throne, it was revealed today by the French press. It has been revealed that concerted action was contemplated by the followers of Count Bethlen and Count Apponyi for the issuance of a manifesto setting forth Otto's claims.
The manifesto, which was to have been published and distributed about the chancelleries of Europe on July 20, has been temporarily delayed, inasmuch as the question is of the gravest importance, especially for such countries as France and Italy. Italy openly has been sponsoring Otto's return, and France, while somewhat undecided, has nevertheless shown a friendly attitude toward Otto, who has been receiving his "kingly" education in France and Belgium.
The manifesto of Otto of Hapsburg, which was actually printed in a newspaper in Zagreb, read:
"Otto II, apostolic king of Hungary, of Croatia, of Slavonia, and of Dalmatia, king of Rome and of Jerusalem, archduke of Austria, duke of Salzburg, of Styria, of Carinthia and of Carniole, margrave of Moravia, duke of Upper and Lower Silesia, of Dalmatia and of Zadar, etc., as apostolic king of Hungary, Croatia, of Slavonia and of Dalmatia, gives notice, that after the death of our august father, on the basis of articles I and II of the law of 1723, the succession to the throne has fallen to us as the legitimate successor.
It is stated that the monarchist party felt reasonably assured of enough support in western Europe to launch the royalist movement, but the debacle of Germany and the threat of an even worse economic crisis induced them to postpone the attempt.
Meanwhile young Otto is studying hard at the king business in the University of Louvain, where he should have already heard much of the evils caused by the last war, and particularly by the side on which Hungary fought.
When that Tammany chief testified for the horse doctor, he was probably figuring they'd need him for the Democratic mule in 1932.
Railroad construction in West Texas continues with the granting of a permit to the Fort Worth & Denver, authorizing the construction of two branch lines in Gray county from Pampa.

PARIS STYLES
By United Press
PARIS.—Gather ye rosebuds while ye may—and put them on a black taffeta background if you wish to have a very lovely evening gown of the Agnes-Drecol vintage.
But let the roses be those beautiful, dull roses with nice dull leaves and lots of prickly, almost fuzzy, little thorns all over their stems.
Both jewelers and designers of the mode have had ample opportunity to observe the drenched trees, and they have done so without profit. Today we have in the diamondsmith's window and in the great salons of Haut Cour, large and small oak leaves, and acacia sprays and elegant clusters of roses, and diamonds that cost a million dollars, and in strass and rhinestones that cost the barest fraction of that amount. They sparkle like their natural counterparts in a burst of sunshine after the shower.
Peaches and cream—that combination that everyone seems to want to eat on first sight—is evident everywhere, and conspicuously so in brocaded satins, laines and velvets. Combined with black and white, and topped with an ermine coat it evokes hunger in more ways than the one that involves gastronomy.

Condition of Livestock Is At 82 Per Cent
AUSTIN.—The condition of the Texas ranges on Aug. 1 was rated at 82 per cent of normal according to reports received by the division of crop and livestock estimates, U. S. Department of Agriculture. The condition remained unchanged from a month ago. However, the northwest, west, and the north portions of the central district have suffered from lack of moisture. For the state as a whole rainfall has been above normal during July, with the south half of the state being the most favored. Scattered rains through the northwest and west areas have relieved the drouthy situation only in localities, while there are many extremely dry areas. The south half of the state and the Edward's Plateau region continue to be favored by timely and frequent rains, and condition of ranges improved during the month in these areas, while it is usual for ranges to show a decline during July.
Cattle with little shrinkage being reported. In the south half of the state cattle are in an excellent condition, but in the northwest rains are urgently needed to prevent further shrinkage. The August condition at 87 per cent is the same as reported on July 1.
There has been little, if any, change in the sheep condition during the month. Sheep are mostly fat and in an excellent condition. Lambs are fat and are weighing out much heavier than last year, and a larger number than usual are fat and ready for market.
In the 17 western range states, continued dry weather with high temperatures during July seriously damaged range feed in most of the area west of the Continental Divide and in Montana, the Dakotas, Western Nebraska, Wyoming, and Colorado. Hurdle weather in these areas are fair to good, but the lower ranges are only poor to fair. Stock water has been short in many of these areas. The prospects for fall and winter ranges are poor in Montana, Western Dakota, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, California, eastern Oregon, eastern Washington, northeastern and southwestern Wyoming and western Colorado. Short feed and water has forced some movement of livestock from montana, western North Dakota, Nevada, and northeastern Wyoming, with indications of early movements from many dry areas. Range and feed conditions are generally good in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona; western Oklahoma is dry with fair to good feed in western Kansas. Hay crops are short in most of the western states due to dry weather and shortage of irrigation water. A large acreage of grains will be cut for hay. The condition of the ranges is the lowest in the nine years that range reports have been made. Ranges are 73 per cent of normal compared with 79 per cent last month, 82 per cent a year ago, 86 per cent two years ago and the five year average of 87.9 per cent.
