This column is published as a daily feature and may not be construed as representing the editorial views of this paper. What follows is merely what one man thought at the time it was written, and the writer reserves the right to change his mind concerning any subject, without notice, explanation or apology.

Last evening I was honored with a pop call from the more or less famous Robert C. (Bobby) Campbell, editorial helmsman and confidential columnist, not to mention sport writing propensities, on the Breckenridge American.

Robert was here in the interest of Jim Ferguson. I think. At any rate we argued for a long time over a subject which Bobby and I have been debating between ourselves for several years; namely: the practicability of the osmotic nemesis of transmigration.

Bobby is the modern Lord Chesterfield. He wears his clothes with all the swank and swagger of a Melntyre and yet his manner is quiet and suave and his conduct speaks a background of raising among genteel and cultured folk.

Next time I hope he arrives in the city earlier in the day so that I can show him our fine courthouse and discuss with him the possibilities of its future use as a huge chicken hatchery in the event of the bondholders having to take it over.

Preparations for a lawn are the same all over the country. The soil should be well prepared, deeply dug or plowed and reduced to fine tilth. Fertilizer should be liberally applied at the start.

With the permission of the reader and the assistance of the linotype, I shall now proceed to print a little piece that was sent me by my friend Susie Mansford of Ranger.

Farm Census Is Begun In Texas This Week

AUSTIN.—A little bother and a lot of benefit to farmers. That, J. E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture, said here, will be the effect of the new annual farm census that tax assessors in every county began compiling this week.

Hoover is my shepherd, I am in wait. He maketh me to lie down in park benches; he leadeth me beside the still factories.

RANGER HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

High School Examinations The examination schedule is running smoothly. All fifth period classes have their examinations from 8:30 to 10 Tuesday morning and all sixth period classes from 1 to 3 Tuesday. Examinations will be finished Tuesday and regular class schedule will be followed on Wednesday.

The data will benefit dealers and handlers of farm products in accurate guides to price trends and cutting speculation due to uncertainty, he said. It will help bankers and financiers by furnishing accurate knowledge of production, storage and marketing credits. It will benefit manufacturers in basing production upon needs.

No Advisory Meetings Held in High School The regular meeting of all high school advisories on Monday was not held today, instead a review for the sixth period classes was held from 1 to 3 o'clock. All students go to advisory on Wednesday to finish enrollment.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?

DAILY WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer WASHINGTON.—In 1920, when wheat sold for $3 a bushel, 1800 bushels of the grain would retire a $2000 mortgage on a farm. At the bottom of the wheat price depression last October, when wheat hit the lowest prices in modern history, it would have taken 12,000 bushels to retire the same mortgage, and even today conditions are not very much better.

THESE show that prices at New York retail markets for good grade pork chops averaged 26 cents a pound, a reduction of 7 cents or 21 per cent from the price of the same day one year before.

ESTIMATES by the Department of Agriculture representative at the packing plant, Simpson went on to show that the consumer would pay for these seven sheep when butchered, $83.70.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT TO LET CONTRACTS ON TWENTY-THREE PROJECTS

AUSTIN, Jan. 18.—Contracts for 23 state highway and bridge projects, costing approximately $1,300,000, will be let by the state highway commission here today and tomorrow.

Texas Treasury Climbing Back To Cash Basis

AUSTIN.—The Texas treasury is climbing back toward a cash basis. Treasurer Charles Lockhart issued notice of calls for unpaid warrants in three classes, as the deficit of general revenue was trimmed from above $5,000,000 to $3,642,490, and before the large payments of January receipts had been sent in by county tax collectors.

Some time late in February, or early in March, the treasury will rise out of its ten-month period of red-ink figures, and get back above the cash level. To holders of state warrants, that will mean the latest of the warrants will no longer be subject to discount; and the warrants which have been deposited against loans at banks will cease to pay interest.

NEW METHOD TO DIAGNOSE CANCER FOUND

BERLIN.—A new method of diagnosing cancer, which, it is expected, will be of great assistance in checking the disease in its early stages, is claimed by Dr. J. H. Fuchs, blood expert.

The Fuchs' method makes it possible to detect the presence of a necrotic swelling, or tumor, in the patient's body, through analysis of a small quantity of the blood. It is also possible to determine whether a condition of infection exists, or whether the tumor alone is present, and whether it is cancer or only the result of the infectious condition.

Thus, it is claimed that one of the most difficult problems of cancer, the diagnosis in its early stages, and especially with intestinal cancer, is near solution.

The Fuchs' method, which is the result of years of experimentation, lies in the discovery that the blood of a person suffering from cancer, remains unchanged under this analysis, while that of a healthy person is partially destroyed.

The blood is divisible into three parts: cells, serum, and fiber. Dr. Fuchs found that the blood fiber of a cancer sufferer maintained its form when mixed again with its own blood serum. On the other hand it slowly disintegrated when mixed with the blood-serum of a healthy person, or even of one suffering from a disease other than cancer. This disintegration process can be measured exactly by the Fuchs' method, through analysis of the nitrate which is released in the process.

Years of Research.

The last step required years of research before it could be brought to the point where measurements minute enough for practical diagnosis could be made by a process simple enough to be used in an ordinary laboratory.

Dr. Fuchs made tests with more than 2,800 cases, comparing his finding with clinical diagnosis. The results were completely successful in more than 90 per cent of the cases. Results were inexact only with cancer of the lungs and oesophagus. These form a special field in cancer, but are somewhat easier of treatment.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ann and Cecily Fenwick have for years supported themselves, their younger sister, Mary-Frances, and their grandparents, known as "Rosalie" and "Grand." Because of this financial responsibility, Ann, who is 28, is unable to marry Phil Ercroyd, young lawyer to whom she has been engaged for eight years. Cecily, 22, loves Barry McKee, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name their wedding date for the same reason.

Ann and Phil quarrel when she hears Letty King, who works in Phil's office building, address him with endearments.

De Armout continues to urge Mary-Frances to join his act and she promises to give him her answer next evening. Cecily is disturbed when she learns Barry has left town without telling her about it.

Ann tries to forget Phil by going around with Kenneth Smith, rich and very attentive.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXV

Mr. G. O. Carmichael, president and sole owner of the Home-Maid Bakery Products Company (Carmichael's Big Cream Loaf, Carmichael's Cookies for Kiddies, Carmichael's Cakes for Choice Occasions), stood on his front porch and frowned across his well-mown lawn over to his bugless pink roses and sighed worriedly.

Gray haired, healthy, clean shaven, excellently tailored, in appearance he resembled a banker—or thought that he did. His ambition for 25 years since he bought his first small shop and stopped doing baking for the other fellow, had been to look like a banker. That, then, must have been so much to the good on this early Monday morning. Also, conscience clear, he had slept well, had arisen, breakfasted satisfactorily, kissed his wife whom he loved devotedly, and had gone now—as far as the porch, at least—to a business that was thriving robustly at a time when many businesses were failing.

Neither surfaces nor depths seemed to provide reason for Mr. Carmichael's depression. Peace should have been dropping slow. But, had someone come inquiring as to the absence of the nine bean rows and the hive for the honey-bee, he would have been told that Mr. Carmichael had a disagreeable duty to perform. Duties were Mr. Carmichael's fetishes. Kindly, well meaning, earnestly mistaken about many things, Mr. Carmichael did not need to see his duty to do it. He scented duties from afar and made them his own with a whiff or two; he heard them whispering in the wind and caught them on the wing. No duty, no matter to whom it belonged, was safe anywhere near Mr. Carmichael.

Mary-Frances Fenwick was coming down the walk on her way to school. Mr. Carmichael, affecting a strolling gait, met her by the pink roses in his parking.

"Good morning, my dear," he said.

"Good morning, Mr. Carmichael."

"Nice morning, isn't it? On your way to school, I suppose?"

"Yes, Mr. Carmichael."

"School soon out now, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir. We're having our finals this week. It is algebra today. I am dreadfully worried about it. It's so hard."

"Speaking of worries," said Mr. Carmichael, "I've been quite worried myself, here of late. Very queer thing. For some time now I've noticed a young couple over in your yard—right near the corner. They meet there frequently. I wonder if your grandfather would like to have that sort of thing going on in his yard?"

"What sort of thing?" said Mary-Frances.

"Love-making. I have no doubt. Innocent love-making," modestly insisted Mr. Carmichael, "but—night after night. No. I am certain that your grandfather would not like it."

"I don't much think he'd care," Mary-Frances comforted.

"I'm not so sure of that, young lady. I'm not so sure of that. Here is a peculiar thing. The girl is your size and build. In fact, if I didn't know what a sensible little lady you were, I'd be positive that she was you. But I know you too well to think that you'd be sparkling out in the yard, night after night, when you should be in the house studying your algebra. That is the way I know this girl isn't you. You understand, I'm sure she isn't. In fact, I'm so sure of it that, unless I see the couple there again, I've decided not to mention it to your grandfather at all. Of course, if I should ever see them there again, even once more—and I feel it is my duty to watch out—then I'll be bound to inform your grandfather, and no ifs nor and's about it."

Mary-Frances' cheeks dimmed the roses' color. She said, "I'll have to hurry now, I guess. I'll have to go by my friend, Ermintrude Hill. Goodbye, Mr. Carmichael," and walked away so fast that she heard Mr. Carmichael say, "A word to the wise," only once, though he said it three times before he said, "Well, that's off my mind," and smiled his satisfaction, and went to take his car from the garage.

It was a pity, a great pity. But for Mr. Carmichael and his duty, there is a slim chance, at least, that Mary-Frances might not have flunked flat in her algebra examination; and there is a stout certainty that she never would have written to Earl DeArmout:

Dear Prince Wonderful:
All has been discovered. We dare never meet again. Whatever you do, don't come to see me to-night. I mean it really. This, dear, is our first enforced absence from each other. Beloved, let us put our hearts together and get comfort. It is not a true separation to know that another part of the world contains the rest of me. Oh, the rest of me, the rest of me that you are! So, thinking of you, I can never be tired. I rest yours. I will give this letter to my friend to take to you, and if you will answer in the inclosed, addressed, stamped envelope I should get it before I go to school in the morning. Answer at once, and be sure it is Ermintrude's writing, and if the family should see it before I do they would think I was getting a note from Ermintrude. Dearest, I love you too much, too much, I cannot write it.

I am your most unhappy and loving,
Frankie.

It is difficult to know what to do with quotation mark in Mary-Frances' letter. It is so mixed up. Perhaps the sections that she cribbed can be detected without pointing at them. The child had a certain genius for getting hold of books she would have done just as well or better without. Her plan for acquiring them had, as has much of genius, its roots, at least, in simplicity. She hunted hard, and high and low, for books that had the word "love" in their title, excluding only those that seemed to deal with religion or nature story. Rosalie's mind liked going the easy, anthropological ways, and she frequently confessed that, though aware of her folly, she could read better with a pencil in her fingers; so the small bamboo stand behind her door ("My own intimate collection — my dearest friends. One should have them close at hand; don't you agree with me?") was richly fertile with ready reference material for Mary-Frances.

The "Englishwoman's Love Letters," however, had not been found in Rosalie's room. Their thin volume had been squeezed crooked between West Coast Shells and an Epitome of Modern European Literature (1883), in the library downstairs. It was filled with pressed, powdery four-leaf clovers, which were a nuisance. In the front of it was a bookplate, undecorated, which read, "This Book is the Property of A. N. Monks, and Must Be Returned to Him Without Fail." In the back of it, rubber stamped, were the purple words, "This Book is the property of the Cozy Book Circulating Library, Wendling, Utah." Another of those black-stay volumes that are fated to stay and get lost on the most moral dignified, and law-abiding bookshelves. Poor little thing, it all granted its tragedy as Mary-Frances shoved it back into its place.

Ermintrude, who had been waiting during the long process of the latter's construction, said "Well,

PASSAGE TO PARIS

Patou launches a color called Rose Opaline. Agnes creates a little string beret, and Vionnet startles Paris with her diaphanous evening gowns worn over incredibly brief maillots. Bruyere makes a coat with a scarf, and Schiaparelli sponsors dinner pajamas.

Those things happen within the closely guarded portals of the great French houses. Only one woman in a million will see them as the mannequins pass by. But two weeks later—three weeks at most—every American woman who reads a newspaper may know as much about the Paris Openings as the fortunate few.

Great department stores, tiny specialty shops, alert manufacturers, offer through their advertising what practically amounts to a restaging of these semi-annual presentations. Every successful model will be shown. Every significant trend will be recounted—and America will wear its Basque berets and its evening pajamas as nonchalantly as Cannes or Juan les Pins.

Two generations ago—or even one—this could not have been. And advertising has been a tremendous force in making it possible. Advertising has become the common carrier of fashion. There's a passage to Paris in the advertisements almost any day you look.

LESSON-SERMON GIVEN

"LIFE" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, Jan. 17. The golden text was taken from I John 5:11. "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." The passages read from the Scriptures embraced the following from Romans 8:6: "For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included this from page 492: "Being in holiness, harmony, immortality. It is already proved that a knowledge of this, even in small degree, will uplift the physical and moral standard of mortals, will increase longevity, will purify and elevate character. Thus progress will finally destroy all errors, and bring immortality to light."

INSTITUTIONAL REPORTS SHOW SLUMP BURDEN

By United Press. CHICAGO.—The increased burden that depression and unemployment has put upon public institutions here is shown by reports of 1931 expenditures. The Cook County Bureau of Public Welfare, according to Director Joseph L. Moss, spent $2,850,000 for relief in the form of milk, food rations, shoes and coal for 65,000 families containing 325,000 individuals. Another $1,050,000 was paid in pensions to 1,400 dependent mothers with 6,000 children. Warden Michael Zimmer reports that the Cook County hospital had an increase in both applications and admittances. Decreased incomes, through unemployment and lowered wages, accounted for much of this. The strain upon the homes was further revealed in increased delinquency as reported by the Chicago County juvenile court. Inability to pay the 18,000 employees in the public schools was the keynote of the report of the Board of Education, but the enrollment of 508,438 pupils in September, revealing a shortage of 97,000 seats, was another unfortunate situation. An unprecedented demand for books has sprung up and the public library finds that the shortage of funds prohibits even normal replacements and additions.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

AMONG nourishing, inexpensive desserts, a perfectly made cornstarch pudding holds close to first place. Delicate in texture and flavor, it is suitable for children and invalids and should please the most fastidious grown-up.

There are certain definite rules to guide one in making cornstarch puddings, just as there are in making custards or any other particular type of dessert. Thorough cooking and just the right proportion of cornstarch to milk are the secrets of a delicious pudding.

Eggs can be added to most cornstarch puddings and contribute a pleasing delicacy as well as food value. If they are used, remember never to add the egg to the hot cornstarch mixture. The heat will cook the tiny particles of egg almost immediately and a speckled mixture will result. Pour the cornstarch mixture slowly into the beaten egg, stirring constantly. When thoroughly blended, return to double boiler and cook one minute. The starch mixture must be well cooked before combining with egg.

Cornstarch Pudding The following rule for vanilla cornstarch pudding can be varied in several ways. Chocolate is always popular and can be made from the basic rule by adding two squares of melted chocolate to the cornstarch and sugar before the scalded milk is poured over it. Use 2 cups milk, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 6 tablespoons sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. Scald 1 3-4 cups milk in top of double boiler. When tiny bubbles appear around the edge of the milk it is hot enough. Mix cornstarch and 2 tablespoons sugar with remaining cold milk. Put until perfectly smooth. Pour about half the scalded milk into cold milk mixture, stirring rapidly. Add this to milk in double boiler, stirring constantly. Cook and stir until thick and smooth. Remove spoon, cover and cook over hot water, stirring occasionally, for 20 minutes. The water in the bottom of the double boiler should be kept boiling.

Beat egg slightly with remaining sugar and salt and slowly add cornstarch mixture, stirring constantly. Return to double boiler and cook one minute. Remove from heat and let cool a few minutes. Add vanilla and beat well. Turn into molds which have been dipped in cold water and let stand until cool. Then chill thoroughly before serving.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT, United Press Staff Correspondent. PARIS.—The long and short of the coat situation is both interesting and important. There is a very definite place for each, whether they be of fur or fabric. Generally speaking, the smart woman who assembles her wardrobe here prefers a short, or three-quarter fur coat, for shopping and town wear. It is easy to do considerable walking in for the lack of weight below the knees is less tiring. It is worn with a good, substantially warm, woolen frock such as Molyneux makes of dark brown wool jersey to go with his hip-length coat of brown seal. The diagonal wool costume for town wear, also designed by Captain Molyneux is trimmed sparingly with caracul. The suit is in black, both wool and fur, and it is worn with a bright green felt
