MACDONALD IS FIRST SIGNER OF NEW PACT

Says Must Have Response Elsewhere To Be Effective.

By STEWART BROWN
United Press Staff Correspondent
LAUSANNE, July 9.—The Lausanne treaty ending Germany's World War reparations payment, was signed today, with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain declaring "our agreements must have response elsewhere."

It provides that Germany pay in one lump sum, 1 cent for every dollar demanded by the victorious Allies—if she can sell the bonds to raise the money.

Collection and payment of inter-European war debts was declared suspended until ratification of the treaty.

Prime Minister MacDonald was the first statesman to sign as president of the conference. He declared the treaty open to signatures, walked around a square formed by tables and signed the document which lay on a translator's table in the center of the square.

The other delegates approached and signed. The signatures took considerable time because of the multitude of documents.

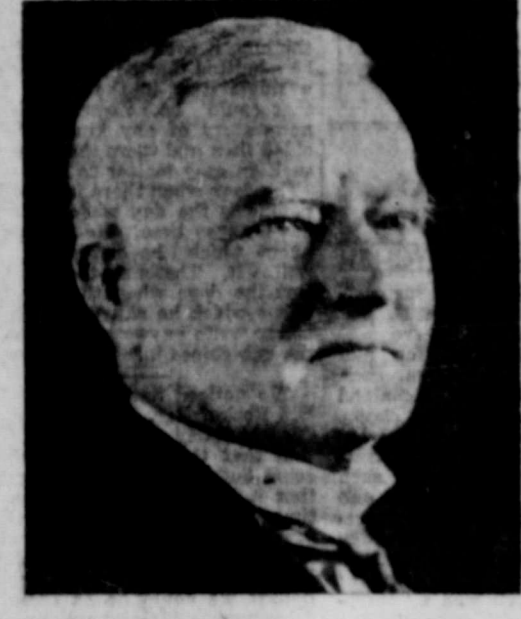

Chancellor Franz von Papen, Foreign Minister Baron Constantin von Neurath and Finance Minister Count Lutz Schwerin von Kroschwitz signed for the Germans.

MacDonald referred directly to a future settlement with the United States in an extemporaneous speech.

"Our agreements must have response elsewhere," he said. "We have already said that any agreement we reach must be placed in a world framework."

The Duty of the Voters of Texas

- 1 { To Continue Honesty In State Government
- 2 { To Oust Special Privilege at Washington.
- 3 { To Encourage Energetic and Unafraid Public Servants

In two weeks, Saturday, July 23, the majority of 6,000,000 Texans will express what they consider best for the nation and the state.

The story of the vote will be: ROOSEVELT and GARNER and STERLING.

THE DAY of the politician who rewards his friends at public cost, and punishes his enemies because they have not been his friends, has ceased in this America of 1932.

It is true that slightly less than 1,000,000 votes will be cast, but these votes represent men, women and children; they represent the aspirations of school children, the future of womanhood, the hope of what Roosevelt has aptly called "the forgotten man."

And as the day for voting approaches, there is a ground-swell reaching from the plateau country of Amarillo down to the rice fields of Orange county which spells the simple words "Common Sense."

It is true that July 23 decides the question of Texas, and that Nov. 8 is the final battleground between Roosevelt and Garner and Hoover and Curtis; but in effect the same people who on July 23 will vote for sanity and the square deal in Texas will vote on Nov. 8 for progress and a new deal in Washington.

THERE is a striking similarity among the three men—that is, when the surface of things has been stripped down to the ultimate truth. Physically they are most unlike. There is the quick, nervous and crippled Roosevelt. There is the independent and decisive "Texas Jack." And there is the careful-moving, straight-thinking, courageous Ross Sterling.

All three of these men desire and aim for the best and are willing to work through the vigil of day and night to give their best, so that America may have its best.

We have no need at this time for the partisan; we have no need for the log-roller; we have no need for that man who has the faculty of drawing about him the political lawyer and that section of the public which works in the dark for the interest of special privilege.

America and Texas need a square deal and an open deal. They will get it at Washington with Roosevelt and Garner; they have had it in Texas with Sterling.

MEASURE WILL GO TO HOOVER NEXT MONDAY

Sure Veto By President Is Predicted By Observers.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—The senate finally approved the $2-122,000,000 unemployment relief bill today, starting it on its way to the white house and an inevitable veto.

The vote was 48 to 31.
Senate approval came after democrats sought vainly to persuade Speaker Garner to abandon his relief feud with President Hoover. The speaker rejected all compromise proposals.

The measure cannot reach Mr.
Hoover until Monday. The house is in recess over the week-end and the final draft of the bill must be signed by the speaker with the house in session and by the vice president before it can be sent to the white house.

Debate lasted less than an hour and a half.

Safety Meeting Has Good Crowd

The roof garden of the Connelthe activity of the gathering of 150 men from the surrounding area Friday night, attending the joint safety meeting program of the Lone Star Gas company, and Community Natural Gas company, of the Ranger and Eastland district.

G. A. Plummer of Eastland was chairman and master of ceremonies. A brilliant program of music by the Lone Star band entertained the crowd for half an hour.

Following the band concert,
Chairman Plummer introduced Mrs. J. M. Perkins, whom he announced as the only woman who had ever been invited to speak on program of these organizations.

FIRST MOHAIR MILL FOR TEXAS

New Braunfels is a very important industrial center as well as financial seat in the county of Comal.

According to James McDowell, capitalization of $300,000 for the mill is in sight. He is the technically trained spinner associated for the past several years with the Bluebonnet Cotton Mills of New Braunfels.

This is a reminder that although Texas produces more than 80 per cent of all the mohair and 40 per cent of all the wool in the United States there is not a single mill devoted to the processing of either.

The Old Fight Game Ain't What It Used To Be!

IT STARTED OUT TO BE A REAL BATTLE - - - AND ENDED IN A LOVE FEAST!

FIGHT CARD IS PLANNED BY COMPANY

Company I, Texas national guard, is planning an athletic show in the Elks gymnasium on Monday night, July 18, it was announced Saturday by Capt. W. C. Hickey.

The Elks housing committee has agreed to let the guardsmen have the use of the arena and other equipment for the actual cost of running the show and all profits will go into the company fund to be used while the company is in training camp during August.

A temporary ring is now being built by members of the company at the armory in order to give the contestants in the athletic show to work out.

Captain Hickey, who is working up the program, says that he has already secured the services of some of the best fighters in this part of the country to enter the matches and that an announcement of the full card will be made as soon as it can be worked out.

Wrestling will be featured on the program, with some interesting boxing matches to fill out a complete card.

Members of the national guard company were working hard Saturday building the temporary arena in the armory in order to get the wrestlers and boxers might get good workouts before the date for the athletic show.

Eastland Merchants To Stage Revue

On Thursday and Friday of next week there will be an added stage attraction at the Connellee theatre. Thursday night 30 lovely children will represent that number of merchants, a silver loving cup will be awarded. On Friday night equally as many young ladies will be presented. To the winner on that evening will be given a diamond ring.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON. - Franklin D. Roosevelt and Herbert Hoover will present a fascinating conflict in personalities to the voters during the 1932 presidential campaign.

There is little comparison between them and if the presidency were to be awarded on the basis of vibrant platform manner, aggressive charm, happy and disarming smiles, sympathetic appeal, splendidly handsome features and crusading fervor, it would be just too bad for Mr. Hoover.

Roosevelt has all those things. He has more "it" than any novice who has appeared on the scene in at least a couple of decades. He is such a handsome cuss that one of his main tasks in this campaign may be to prove that he is not "beautiful but dumb."

Stodgy Hoover Hoover is colorless. He stirs up few warm emotions in the human breast. His smiles are few, fleeting and often a bit sour. His platform manner is heavy and dull. His voice leaves most things to be desired.

That Happy Plane Dash NEVERtheless, Roosevelt certainly strengthened himself by his airplane dash to Chicago convention, his ringing speech of hope to the people and the fact that he is more cultured and suave, more likely to appeal to that large number of middle class men and women who worry about their social security.

The "Wishy-Washy" Charge THE word went around before the Chicago convention that Roosevelt was a weak vacillating wishy-washy opportunist. An incredible number of persons—even among the "forgotten man" class, the men in the street, the ordinary men and women you meet every day—have been impressed by that charge against Roosevelt which has been so widely made.

Even many of the delegates to the Chicago convention that Roosevelt was a weak vacillating wishy-washy opportunist.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

This depression will pass on in due time, like others have done. But in the meantime, when many need help, we ask that a thought be given to the many unemployed everywhere throughout the country.

On the subject of unemployment and the need of necessities for men and women who are willing to work but who are denied that blessing, and children who need food and clothes, many of our states are doing little but passing the buck to the national government. With this thought, we beg leave to believe it is a matter for the public to take the lead, with a view to stirring official conscience.

We are aware of the argument that the national government cannot support those distressed by fore of circumstances. We are aware too, that in official circles the most stringent measures of retrenchment are imperative if this country is soon to return to normal times.

As to the various states, there is no legal liability, but we would be somewhat less than human were we not to emphasize the moral obligation of local and state governments toward those who make possible their being.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

with BILL MAYES

We know how a salesman must feel when he gets a prospective customer all lined up for a sale, has everything arranged and when he goes up to the door to get his name on the familiar dotted line finds out that the prospective customer has died, or something.

In other words we had ideas about how we were going to get a lot of local news stories for today's papers. We jotted down notes here and there so we would not forget none of them.

This hunting for news when there isn't any to be found is a hard task. Nearly everyone seems to think that a newspaperman should know a lot of things about which he could write. Just yesterday a man said that he would give us a lot of news for the paper that day. As it happened, we did, but we asked him what he knew that we could write about.

The days when there is a lot happening is the day when an editor has an easy time. He gets plenty about which he can write, and writes it. That's all there is to it. But the days when there is little about which he can write, and he has to write anyway—that's where the rub comes in.

We noticed Saturday that John D. Rockefeller, celebrating his 53rd birthday, was optimistic and said that the world had always come out of depressing times and that it would certainly do so this time.

Which reminds us that when we were a mere child we remember the papers running cartoons of John D. showing him as an octopus with the face of the famous oil man. On the head was pinned, with a gigantic halpin, a toupee.

At the same time Rockefeller was celebrating his 53rd birthday, a couple, one aged 83 and the other a young girl of 70, were getting married.

Wayne Hickey and Andy Anderson just came in and told us that unless we got their names in the paper in some way the paper would not be worth reading today.

Ranger golfers will endeavor to keep their place at the top of the Oil Belt Golf association percentage column today when they journey over to the Resort City to play members of the Mineral Wells Country club.

A total of between 20 and 30 matches is expected to be played today. When the Ranger players went to Turk on their last golfing expedition on June 26 they took along 26 players, who played 26 matches, winning 15 and losing 11, placing them in a position to cop the Oil Belt cup or pennant whenever it is a golf club wins in the association for winning the most matches.

Eastland Post To Meet With Elks

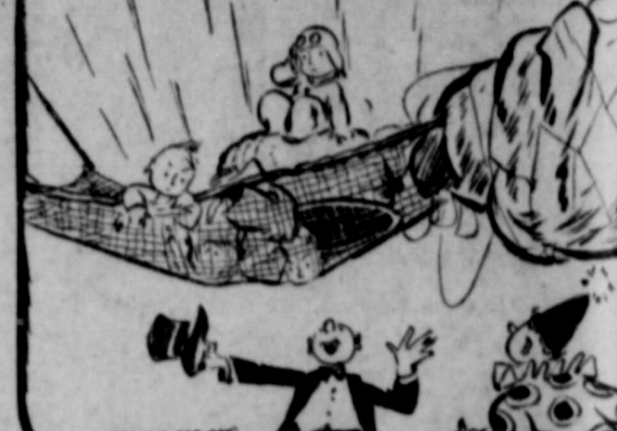

The B. P. O. Elks No. 1372, Eastland, through Julius Krause, exalted ruler, has extended an invitation to the Dulin Daniels post, American Legion, to meet in the Elks clubrooms Monday evening at 8 o'clock in advance of the regular meeting of the Elks lodge, and hold a joint conference on the feasibility of American Legion using the Elks clubrooms for Legion meetings.

The plan to be considered appears to be a practical one, and also one that would work for the good of both organizations. All Elks are urged to be present, and extend the right hand of hospitality to the American Legion, their guests of the evening, and all American Legionnaires are requested to appear.

UTICA, N. Y.—A swarm of bees that invaded the porch of a home caused so much fright that police, the Department of Public Works, and, finally, a bee expert were called. The expert advised that if the bees were left undisturbed, they would leave of their own accord.

The TINYMITES

with HAL COCHRAN PICTURES by JOE

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

THE bird that pecked the big balloon began to chirp a cheerful tune. It seemed to be real glad that it had spoiled the Tinties' flight.

The lads were dropping rather fast, all wondering how long they'd last. "Thank goodness," shouted Duncy. "That big bird's blown out of sight."

"Oh, never mind the bird, 'cause he is just as safe as he can be while we are in an awful fix. We're speeding toward the ground."

A STIFF wind then began to blow and Copy smiled and cried out. "Oh! That is a break of luck for us. Our downward flight is checked. The wind is tossing us about. Be careful, lads, and don't fall out. Perhaps, if this breeze on a while we'll land and not be wrecked."

Then Windy cried, "I see why. It's the circus one when we took to the air."

"I don't think it would be so bad, if we could land on a trapeze. Let's try and steer the balloon that way, right over there."

"Now, everyone lean right!" And when they were outside put up a trapeze with a net.

They missed the tent, but all knew they were saved. Hand just then they saw a crowd outside put up a trapeze with a net. The little basket swung down and the Tinties were saved.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CHERRY DIXON, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, married DAN PHILLIPS, newspaper reporter, after a quarrel with her parents. It is a Leap Year marriage and Cherry does the proposing.

She and Dan move into a cheap apartment and Cherry's first thought is to get her husband a new suit. She tells her mother, who is a housewife, that she has to go to work and that she has a new suit. Her mother becomes seriously ill. After a week's absence there is a reconciliation with her parents. She will not allow her to accept financial aid from them however. MR. and MRS. DIXON depart, seeking another climate to improve the mother's health.

BRENDA VAIL, magazine writer, comes to Chicago and Dan meets her. She asks him to collaborate in writing a play. Dan begins to spend most of his evenings at Miss Vail's apartment. Dixie tries to warn Cherry that she is getting close to Dan, but Dan but Cherry will not listen. Dan says he was about to tell Cherry he was writing about her story he wrote weeks before. She says it was destroyed, deliberately telling an untruth.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER XL
 CHERRY slipped the pie into the oven, closed the door and straightened with a sigh. Her shoulders and arms ached. She knew she should not have tried to bake on cleaning day but the apples would have spoiled if she had not used them. Apple pie was Dan's favorite dessert too.

She looked at the clock and saw that it was almost 6. Time to set the table.

Cherry was wearing her oldest house dress. It was torn and smeared with dust but she did not think of that. Her hair was hidden beneath a towel pinned on to a dust cap and there were black smudges on her cheeks. From floor to ceiling the apartment was in spite and squalor and Cherry herself had never been less presentable. She had given the apartment a thorough cleaning, shaken the rugs, swept and dusted and washed the windows. It had all taken longer than she had expected.

Cherry opened the gate table and spread out the cloth. Usually she took pains to make the table attractive but tonight dishes and silver went on carelessly.

She was back in the kitchen stirring the stew made from last night's beef roast when Dan's key sounded in the lock. Cherry did not turn but called, "That you, Dan?"

She heard him throw his coat and newspapers. A minute more and he stood in the doorway. "Great Scott!" Dan exclaimed, "what have you been doing to yourself?"

Cherry looked up in surprise. "Why—I—oh, I guess I forgot to take the towel off my head. I've been cleaning house. Everything's done except the bathroom window. Will you wash it for me, Dan, while I finish getting dinner on the table?"

The young man frowned. "Can't it wait until tomorrow?"

"I promised myself I'd have this work done tonight. If you don't want to do it say so and I'll finish it after awhile. I didn't think you'd mind doing that little bit. I've scrubbed and slaved until I can hardly stand—I."

It was unusual for Cherry to complain but tonight she was really tired. She had tried to crowd too much work into a single day and every muscle in her body seemed to protest.

"Oh—all right!" Dan grumbled. "I'll do it."

He rolled up his sleeves and Cherry pinned an apron about him. She gave him the cleaning powder, a basin of water and clean dusters. Dan disappeared and Cherry went on with preparations for the meal.

"Haven't you finished yet, Dan?" she asked.

He was rubbing the window pane laboriously. Cherry stepped forward. "Up there," she pointed. "There's a streak that isn't clean." Dan's exclamation was smooth-voiced. "Why don't you hire someone to come in and do this for you?" he demanded. "Don't you think I've done a day's work at the office?"

"I guess you know why I don't hire anyone to help me? It's because I haven't money to pay them."

"And that's because I don't make enough! Is that it? You might as well say it. That's what you're thinking, isn't it?"

"Oh, Dan, how can you accuse me of such things? Do I ever complain about money? Don't I do everything in the world to save? I've worked all day—"

"Worked? What do you think I've been doing? If you really had to do a day's work once in a while maybe you'd know how it feels to be tired!"

Tears smarted in Cherry's eyes but she was determined Dan should not see them. She could not trust herself to speak.

They had never quarreled so before. There was nothing over which they were disagreeing now. Both were tired and both were suffering from "nerves." One word from either of them just then could have set everything right but neither of them spoke that word.

Dan finished polishing the window pane and stepped back. "There," he said grudgingly. "Does that suit you?"

The girl did not reply. The odor of something burning had reached her nostrils. The pie in the oven! Cherry ran to the kitchen and pulled the oven door open. Thick smoke rolled out. Cherry reached for a holder but found none. She grabbed the nearest object—a tea towel—and lifted out the pie.

By Laura Lou Brookman

"I promised myself I'd have this work done tonight. If you don't want to do it say so and I'll finish it after awhile. I didn't think you'd mind doing that little bit. I've scrubbed and slaved until I can hardly stand—I."

The hot, sugary liquid bubbled over the edge of the crust and burned her hand. Cherry cried out in pain. She dropped the pie on the shelf and held her hand under running water from the tap.

The pie was ruined. The blaze beneath the oven must have been higher than she had thought. The top crust, instead of being a golden flake yellow, was charred and black. The odor of burning apple juice was offensive.

Dan stood in the doorway, surveying the scene. "Well," he said, "I guess we don't have pie for dinner." He moved to the windows and raised them.

Cold air swept into the room. It chilled the food that had been placed in the sizzling dishes. Cherry and Dan shivered but there could be no thought of going ahead with the meal until the smoke was gone. In five minutes the atmosphere cleared.

Cherry disappeared into the dressing room and returned with tell-tale red lines about her eyes. She and Dan sat down at the table and the meal began. Cherry, if she had been her own vivacious self, would have looked attractive in spite of her soiled, torn frock. She could have laughed and Dan would not have noticed the grimy costume. She did not look attractive now. Tears had smudged the black marks on her face. Her lips pressed in a hard, tight line to keep from trembling.

Dan spoke once or twice as though trying to make overtures of friendliness but they were not accepted. Cherry's answers were polite. Too polite. There was a long interval of silence in which the girl was aware that the meal was hopeless. The stew was cold and the salad contained too much salt. She had counted on the pie to retrieve a meal of leftovers. Cherry was so miserable she would not have noticed what she was eating if it had not been for Dan.

Why didn't he tell her he was sorry for those hateful things he had said? Why didn't he cover her hand with his and say, "Cherry, I was a beast but it was because I've had a hard day. Forgive me, darling?" Why didn't he take her in his arms and ask her to forget those cruel words?

Dan Phillips did none of these things. He ate little of the food. The meal was over almost as soon as it had begun. While Cherry gathered up the dishes Dan sat barricaded behind his newspaper.

The girl had almost decided she could stand the silence no longer, that she must speak, when Dan got to his feet.

"I'm going out for a while," he said shortly.

Cherry forgot her pose. "But, Dan," she said, "I thought we might go somewhere together this evening. See a movie maybe. I thought—"

"I'm sorry," Dan interrupted. "I've made other plans."

Anger she could not control flashed in the girl's voice. "It's strange," she said, "but whenever there's anything I want to do you always have other plans! We never go out together any more. You haven't taken me anywhere for a week! All I do is stay home and—" "I know!" Dan assured her bitterly. "All you do is stay home and slave. I can rectify the rest of it for you backwards. It comes from having a worthless, good-for-nothing husband. I'm very sorry for you, but in keeping with my role as the worthless husband I'll have to remind you that I've made other plans for the evening."

He picked up his hat and coat. "Where are you going, Dan?"

"He stood with one hand on the doorknob. Dan paused long enough to say the one word, "Out!" then disappeared.

Cherry sank into the big chair. The tears she had fought back for so long came unchecked. "He's gone!" she sobbed. "What's gone without me! Oh, what will I do? What—will I do?"

There was only Pinky the kitten to console her and Pinky was engaged in tearing up a paper sack.

DAN PHILLIPS strode to the window. He stood looking out into the darkness, hands clasped behind his back.

There was a single light in the large room. It came from a lamp near theavenport and it glowed softly beneath the parchment tinted shade. From the shadows across the room a low voice came.

"But you're restless!" Brenda Vail said. "Is anything wrong, Dan?"

Phillips turned. "There's nothing wrong," he said. "Nothing at all. But, Brenda, I can't come here any more. I've got to stop seeing you."

"You silly boy! What on earth are you talking about?"

The young man moved forward so that his face was illuminated by the circle of light. The lines of his cheeks were drawn tightly. He went on stubbornly. "You know what I mean, Brenda! You know things can't go on as they have been—"

"But, Dan, you don't mean this!" Brenda Vail had risen. She was dressed in black velvet and out of the shadows her face looked very white. The outline of her rouged lips was like a double heart.

"You don't mean you're going to forget about me? You don't mean you're not coming to see me?"

"I haven't the right!" Phillips protested huskily. "I have to think of—someone else, Brenda. Things can't go on this way. I tell you, I can't stand it!"

The woman's voice dropped to lower pitch. "I know," she whispered. "It's been hard for me, too. Oh, Dan—"

She was in his arms then and Phillips was kissing her.

Indian Braves Learned About Divorce Costs

GREAT FALLS, Mont.—Modern divorce laws in some of the states appear to be very liberal, but in reality they are quite string-ent when compared to customs of Indian tribes in the early days.

Before the coming of the Jesuit priests, an Indian buck who desired to discard his spouse merely went to a dance, and while the members of their tribe were sitting around a camp fire, throw a crooked stick into the air.

Stick In Air

Another Indian who had the same desire would also throw a stick into the air. That constituted a trade and the men exchanged wives.

That system worked very well until the coming of the "black robes," who told the tribesmen that if they desired to enter the Kingdom of Heaven the white man's way they could not discard their wives at will. But if they desired to enter a much hotter clime after death they should continue to exchange wives.

Indians Pleased

The Indians were very perplexed by this state of affairs, but a short time later the Baptist missionaries appeared, who told the Indians if they would join the Baptist Church—take a bath—they could get a divorce according to the white man's law and still be eligible to sit among the righteous after death.

The Indians were delighted with this arrangement and deserted the Jesuits by the score to place their spiritual lives under the guidance of the Baptists.

There was, as always, a fly in the ointment. The braves soon found that to obtain the white man's divorce it was necessary to pay a lawyer $100.

The $100 was quite a stumbling block, but many a brave decided that, after all, it would be money well spent.

Big Trout Saves Fisherman's Life

DURANGO, Colo.—A big Rainbow trout, regarded as a prize for fishermen, proved to be a life-saver for Tilton Macy, Durango angler.

Macy, his wife, and Merritt McKenzie were enjoying an afternoon of fishing on Fishing Pier. Macy cast his line into the water, then sat down upon a convenient boulder to wait for a moment or so.

Suddenly the line tugged. Macy leaped to his feet and seized the pole. At the same instant his wife screamed, and turning, Macy saw a rattlesnake flatten out on the rock he had just left. The reptile had struck at the small of Macy's back. The trout's tug had moved the man just in time.

Macy fired a shot at the snake. The bullet pierced it about ten inches from the tail. The wounded reptile then disappeared into the brush.

Macy and McKenzie searched the thickets for the snake. It had disappeared as completely as it had appeared.

Meantime, the trout on Macy's hook was having its troubles. The hunters looked up to see the fish state stream, trailing the line and pole with it. Again it proved a life-saver, for as Macy left the thicket and dashed onto the boulders to seize his pole, he almost stepped on the reptile, cooled and ready for action. With a club in one hand, and the fishing pole in the other, Macy killed the reptile.

Storage Company Head Turns to Goats In Slump

CLEVELAND.—If times get worse, Frank J. Hawkins, president of local transfer and storage company, will add a few more goats to his herd and let the rest of the world go by.

He believes that goats will be brought into their rightful prominence by the depression. According to his own story, he first got a couple of goats so that he could outdo around and care for them to get his mind off business worries. But now he is convinced that they will solve his living problem if it gets to the serious stage.

"So far," he said, "my business is all right, but big business are crashing all over the country, and some day it may be my turn. If this happens, I'll take my goats and my family and repair to a little country place I own."

"It costs me just $3 a year to keep a goat and if I had to buy everything they eat, it would cost me only $5 a year per goat.

"These two female goats keep me in all the milk I can use. A goat gives a gallon of milk a day, and it's thick and rich."

TEXAS RAILROADS PAY SUBSTANTIAL PART OF STATE'S TAX BURDEN

Taxes is one of the large fixed charges connected with the operation of Texas railroads. From the standpoint of the welfare of state, counties and communities, railroad taxes are of much importance. This annual obligation must be met from the earning capacity of the rail carriers.

In 1931 the railroads of Texas paid a total of $8,303,108.47 in federal, state, county, municipal and miscellaneous taxes. The distribution of this amount to the various tax funds is shown below:

	Amount Paid	Per Cent of Total Tax Paid
U. S. Government	$ 61,270.13	.74
State	1,954,435.47	23.51
County	1,146,669.97	13.81
Roads	1,699,764.15	20.47
Improvement Districts	175,606.87	2.12
Schools	1,437,152.74	17.31
Cities	1,792,994.61	21.59
Miscellaneous	35,214.59	.42
Total	$8,303,108.47	100.00

It can thus be seen that railroad taxes represent an important and indispensable factor in the economic life of our state. They help in a large measure to pay the expense of our state, county and municipal government, build and maintain highways, pay the cost of drainage and other improvements, and support our schools and educational institutions.

It is the desire of Texas railroads to extend this helpfulness to Texas counties and communities in carrying this heavy burden. However, their ability to meet these obligations as they become due depends upon their ability to earn sufficient revenue with which to pay this and other heavy expenses connected with their operation.

RAILROADS HAVE ALWAYS SHOULDERS THEIR SHARE OF RESPONSIBILITIES TO THE NATION, THE STATE, AND THE CITIES AND COMMUNITIES THEY SERVE, AND WILL CONTINUE TO DO SO TO THE EXTENT OF THEIR ABILITY.

Two leaders prominent in the convention of the National Prohibition party at Indianapolis are shown here. Above is Dr. Clinton N. Howard of Rochester, N. Rabotnitsa—Working Woman—as it is called, is a drab enough looking little magazine, in no way resembling the women's publications in other countries.

VOTE FOR JNO. W. THURMAN FOR County Commissioner

"JOHN"

Responding to the insistent requests of his friends, John Thurman entered the campaign for the office of County Commissioner. Now that the first primary is only a few days off, his friends want the public to know the reasons why they sought him to enter.

Jno. W. Thurman's record as a city official proves beyond a doubt his honesty in handling public affairs as well as his ability to administer corporate business in an efficient manner. His long residence amongst us has shown his deep interest in all matters pertaining to the community. His experience, gained in his contacts with the city affairs, civic affairs, Federal Farm Loan matters and the conduct of his own business has qualified him so that he can conduct the business affairs of Eastland county in a manner satisfactory to the people and to the best interests of the county.

In the handling of tax matters, Jno. W. Thurman's leadership of the Ranger city commission has resulted in reduced valuations, reduced to where the people can pay their taxes. His friends realize that this same thing can be brought about in the county renditions. Of course, it will mean a reduction in the revenue received by the county which will in turn require rigid economy in county expenditures and a closer supervision over every department with which the commissioners court comes in contact. But Jno. W. Thurman will have the courage and administrative ability to handle such matters better, we believe, than they have been handled.

The friends of Jno. W. Thurman doubt the necessity of hiring special collectors to collect delinquent taxes at the enormous cost to the county. The office of tax collector is not entirely free from criticism in the matter. What is a tax collector elected for, if not to collect taxes? It is the duty of the county attorney to handle delinquent tax matters and file delinquent tax suits, as provided in the statutes. With these two offices already vested with authority to collect, it seems that the commissioners court might ask them to discharge their duty rather than make separate contracts with individuals to do the work that duly elected county officers might do.

Mr. Thurman's friends believe that a change in personnel in the county commissioner's office would quite naturally bring about changes in administrative methods that would show an immediate saving to the county. The present incumbent is a good man, respected in his community, but yet a new man in the place would change up the routine, would clean out the dead wood, would take a new interest in college and go deeper into many matters which are not taken for granted merely because of the apparent familiarity of the incumbent with the situation. If you believe that a change in administrative officer might lessen your tax load, might spend the county money more economically, might ask for bids on certain purchases rather than buy promiscuously from political friends, then consider Jno. W. Thurman and give him your vote.
