AND HOOVER SIGNED THE RELIEF ACT

President Hoover signed into law the federal relief plan that amasses $3,800,000,000 in one offer for invigorating business, increasing employment, and "relieving human destitution." A reminder that $120,000,000 will be available for advances to states under the federal aid highway law. A reminder that $186,000,000 is available for public buildings and waterway improvements "when the condition of the treasury permits." A reminder that federal reserve banks may discount eligible paper for individuals and corporations. A reminder that all reports of all reconstruction loans must be filed with congress monthly. A reminder that there will be an apportionment of the $300,000,000 fund for direct advances to states as loans "to provide food and shelter for those who need food and shelter the coming fall and winter."

Also, a reminder that Eugene Meyer, governor of the federal reserve system, and Paul Bestor, farm loan commissioner, automatically are removed from the reconstruction board. Gen. Charles G. Dawes removed himself from the position of president of the reconstruction board. He had a hurry-up call from Chicago where he had large banking interests. Then the so-called wise cracklers of the Eastern press, including Washington, declared that Dawes moved out because he would not take orders from Meyer. It was all guesswork. He moved out because one of the greatest banks of America needed $50,000,000 to guard the interests of its clients and protect the deposits of thousands who had placed their savings in its vaults. Dawes obtained the $50,000,000 from the Reconstruction corporation and four great banks and he placed his huge financial concern on a Rock of Gibraltar solidity.

This federal relief bill contains all the provisions of the original Garner bill with one item deleted, Eastern newspapers and publicity correspondents who know their financial onions and where to get them are branding Garner as a "radical." Why not Hoover? Didn't he sign the bill? Isn't it a law? Hasn't he declared that it is a "gigantic federal relief plan that amasses $3,800,000,000 in one offer for invigorating business, increasing employment, and relieving human destitution?" There is a way to guard against human destitution? "provide jobs with wage attached for idle men and women who would scorn a dole, and are ever ready to give of their best to provide bread and shelter and all the other necessities of life for their loved ones."

GEN. SMEDLEY D. BUTLER IN THE PICTURE

Gen. Smedley D. Butler, on the retired list, has thrown caution to the winds and is marching on. He peremptorily declined the dry nomination for senator in Pennsylvania. A lifelong republican and the son of a distinguished republican father for the first time in his life he is going to vote for the democratic standard-bearers for president and vice president. He has more than burned the bridges behind him. He accepted an invitation to go to Washington and address the bonus marchers. He offered encouragement to the army of veterans in Washington seeking the bonus. He said: "You are the best behaved segment of society in America today. You are as well disciplined as any army." His speech bristled with "hells." His first was when he said he had run for the senate in Pennsylvania as a republican on the bonus ticket and "got the hell beat out of me."

He advised the veterans to return to their homes and leave their leaders to guard their interests. In conclusion he said: "If you do go home keep your leaders here to look out for your interests and when you get home go to the polls in November and lick the hell out of those who are against you. You know who they are. Yes, the time has come to change the position of the soldier who bled in wartime and suffered in peacetime. You can change it. There is a simple method provided in November this year by the God-given system of government we have. NOW GO TO IT!"

Well, the former king of the fighting marines, fighters Butler led around the world, is on the road again. This time he has tossed the elephant over and is going to chase the donkey around the track.

BONUS MARCHERS ORDERED 'TO GET OUT'

Washington is a bit agitated. Washington is the capital of the nation. Thousands of war veterans are camping there demanding bonus relief. A sweeping evacuation order directed against the bonus marchers by the commissioners of the District of Columbia gave the veterans two weeks to vacate virtually every building and vacant lot now occupied by the army. Well, commissioners of the District of Columbia are appointed by the president of the United States. Mr. Hoover's formal acceptance of renomination will be delivered the night of Aug. 11. He will sound the keynote and launch in earnest the campaign for his re-election. His acceptance speech will be delivered in Constitution hall, this large auditorium near the executive mansion. Now what will happen if the bonus marchers take it upon themselves to very flatly spurn the order of the commissioners of the District of Columbia? A president of this republic has troubles of his own.

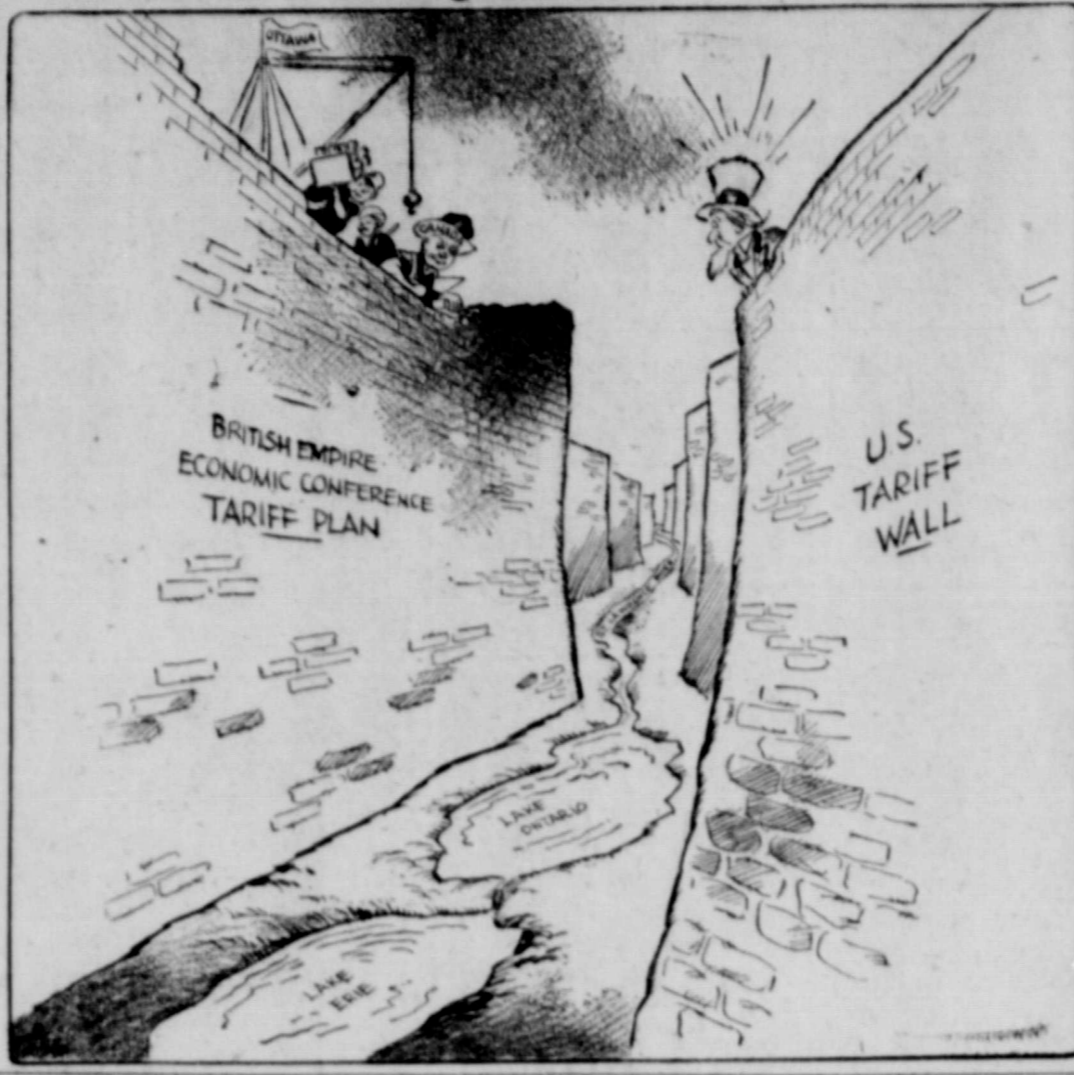

SIX SOUTH AMERICAN NATIONS FACING WAR

Six Latin nations threaten the peace of the South American world. According to a correspondent public tension is acute and it ranges all the way from international dispute to armed civil warfare. It must be conceded that the appalling losses caused by the World War did not make the Eastern or the Western world safe for democracy. All these South American nations have republican for mof government, but in many military chieftains are the dictatorial rulers and the machine gun is more powerful than a prince of peace appeal to the spiritual side of the warring brothers. Under the flags of many nations the voters shoot it out after the election. In this, the republic of Washington, they talk and they vote it out. No, democracy is not a failure in the U. S. A.

Past accomplishments no matter how great, are simply a reminder of greater things that must be done in the future.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Most of the petty "graft" and the cheap little tricks which members of Congress employ to augment their salaries are going to get a "bill airing" in this year's congressional campaigns. They have been exposed more mercilessly than ever before and the fellows who are out to get the seats of the present members already have begun to raise their issues.

Much Explaining Due

SOME members will have an easy time explaining themselves, while others are likely to find it rather difficult. No one, for instance, is likely to have the nerve to criticize Speaker Garner for employing his efficient wife as his secretary.

Then There's the Record

A NICE point was raised at the very end of the session when the Senate broke into a brief debate as to the propriety of printing political speeches in the Congressional Record, which costs $58 a page.

GRIPES by GUS

Legal Atmosphere

The Cisco attorneys are not sure they have a case. The defense attorneys are not sure that the case should be in court. So before they try the case it behooves them to discover if they have a case to try. You won't understand that, Mr. Anderson, and neither will anyone else, but that is because you never bust out of a law school like this department did. Did you ever hear of a demurrer, Mr. Anderson? We thought not. Had you, then you would have known what has become of the Cisco outer suit. It is now in the demurrer stage, and if you will reach for the dictionary instead of a sheet you can find it with much gusto.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

Although it is a long time until the duck hunting season opens, the fact that President Hoover recently signed the amendments to the migratory-bird treaty-act regulations, adopted by Secretary Hyde of the Department of Agriculture calls attention, at this time to the new hunting season.

The general seasons on Wilson's snipe or jacksnipe, sora, woodchuck and doves have not been changed. The new season for ducks, geese, brant, and coot on Long Island and in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Kentucky, California, and in Western and Northern Texas is from Nov. 1 to Dec. 31.

In Southern and Eastern Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee the new season opens on Nov. 16 and lasts until Jan. 15. On ducks the daily bag limit remains at 15 for all species, of which not more than five may be either ducks and not more than 10 of each or in the aggregate may be canvasbacks, redheads, ringnecks, blue-winged teal, green-winged teal, cinnamon teal or shovellers. This is additional protection given these kinds of ducks because they did not recover the effects of the drought that prevailed for several years on their breeding grounds to the same degree as other species. To two other species of duck—the ruddy and bufflehead—the protection of a continuous closed season has been given.

The bag limit on mourning doves was reduced from 25 to 18 a day. The number of live duck decoys that can be legally used anywhere in the United States is limited to 25.

Borah's Attitude

SENATOR BORAH says the habit of tossing political speeches into the Record costs hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. The nice point is how much of the staff that goes into the Record is worth the expense.

Queer Topics

IT'S a queer melange that gets in. Recent exhibits indicate a topical preference for prohibition, farm relief, federal expenses, veterans' affairs and war debts. Congressmen brag about all their states or districts have had out of the federal government during their terms and how successful their party has been in cutting expenses.

There are many warm individual tributes to departed members, a glowing description of the dedication of a new state capitol and musings on such topics as "home, school and the church" and the "workings of a divine providence."

Several hundred designs of this ancient instrument have been displayed at the Leipzig fair. The TINYMITES STORY by HAL COCHRAN PICTURES by JOE PAUL

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Of course it made a whistling roar when one big tent was toppled over by wind that circled 'round and 'round and reached the cyclone stage. The Tinies scampered here and there, afraid of what was in the air. Cried Scouty, "Hey! Drop to the ground. The wind is in a rage." His quick suggestion helped them all. It didn't take them long to fall and then the wind surged over them, as they lay on the ground. Scared Duncy shouted, "Look at that! Another tent has been blown flat. Some parts of this big circus, I am sure, will never be found." "A HEAD of us there is a hole. If into that we all can roll, I think we'll be much safer. Follow me! I'll lead the way." Then Duncy slowly crawled along, beneath the wind that still blew strong. Said Windy, as he followed, "This is our unlucky day!" They reached the hole and there they found some canvas had spread around. The Tinies crawled on top of this and died in a bunch. "Now every one of you lie flat on your back. I wish the wind would let up," said wee wee with a frown. "I'm getting from crouching here, and we all catch cold, I fear. This was that we're on is happy. Try and keep it down." The wind, however, took a fancy to the Tinies and then it slowly lifted as wind gave one long roar. Tinies held on tight and they shortly floating on their way. "Wonder where we're headed for?" Morocco Wins In Slump Fight

CASEBLANCA, Morocco.—Morocco has put up a stubborn battle against the depression wave and its agriculture and industry are less seriously affected by the world's economic crisis than European and American countries.

The ambitious building program elaborated in the spring of 1929, when the world's affairs flourished, has been cut down only 20 per cent. Casablanca leads with an outlay of $11,000,000 for 1932, instead of $14,000,000, as originally intended. All these new constructions consist of improved office buildings and skyscraper office buildings in the vicinity of the docks.

Rabat comes next with $8,000,000, mostly apartment houses; Meknes, $2,500,000; Fez, $1,750,000, and Oudjda, $500,000. Unfortunately, there has been large decreases in the output of Morocco both in the agricultural and industrial fields.

The 1932 crop will fall about 25 per cent below that of 1931, while sheep and cattle raising are similarly affected. The phosphate production, however, has been more severely hit. From 1,500,000 tons in 1931, it has decreased to 900,000 tons in 1932.

A result of the slowing up of business here has been felt in the automobile manufacturing trade of the United States.

Post Office Day

By L. STEPHENS

Post Office Day, Oiden, Texas, was celebrated for the first time in the country, we are told, on the birthday of our country, July 26, 1776, that the postmaster general, named Benjamin Franklin, was 157 years ago, on the day of his birth, the first of the postal department of our country.

Washington, in his far-reaching realization of the importance of the postal service, was the first to carry a letter across the continent, and he did so in 1775, passing the 75,000 persons employed in the postal department of our country.

Whenever I see that mail plane soaring high in the heavens, at night, looking more like a star than anything else but a steadily moving, very persistent star, I want to take off my hat to that pilot and the air mail pilots en masse. I always think, "There goes an old boy who is 'taking it through'." Pioneering in the air branch of his service, risking his life itself, fulfilling the trust his government and his department has placed in him, he is a living symbol of the kind of loyal Americans we have and the kind we need and please God, the kind we will always have with us through all times.

livered. It was that knowledge, that persistence, that patriotism that carried them through, braving the heat of the deserts, the wind and snows of the mountains, the hostile hands of raiding Indians, the swollen streams and unknown woods, until they arrived at Sacramento. At first the one-way trip took 35 days but they later developed the speed of ten days. They had fresh horses at relay stations every 10 miles that enabled them to make this remarkable speed.

At that time it cost $5.00 each half ounce for a letter to make that trip. But it was cheap at any price, because it was almost accomplishing the impossible. Those pioneer Americans appreciated their postal service and those hardy express riders. We honor them now. They were a patriotic crew.

That spirit, whether you know it or not, goes out from the various heads of the postal department today, through branches and stations and into all the nooks of the farthest corners of the service, and into the very soul of your own postal representative in your own town. For that purpose mail is routed and schedules changed and improved upon, that the mail may get through and if possible get through quicker.

Whenever I see that mail plane soaring high in the heavens, at night, looking more like a star than anything else but a steadily moving, very persistent star, I want to take off my hat to that pilot and the air mail pilots en masse. I always think, "There goes an old boy who is 'taking it through'." Pioneering in the air branch of his service, risking his life itself, fulfilling the trust his government and his department has placed in him, he is a living symbol of the kind of loyal Americans we have and the kind we need and please God, the kind we will always have with us through all times.

Boy's Dog Pal Fights Snake For Life

Tired of wrestling around the backyard of his Dayton, O., home 3-year-old Gene Boldman turned his attention to the flower garden. A warning "brr-r-r" meant nothing to Gene, but Myra, sleek, big-eyed Doberman Pinscher, Gene's wrestling companion, spring to the alert, hackles bristling, teeth bared. A three-button, 27-inch rattlesnake struck at the boy, but Myra leaped in time. When Gene's screams brought his mother, the rattler was dying and Gene was unharmed. Myra, twice bitten, was given serum and a chance to survive. Boy and dog hero are shown above.

Marathon Will Hold Interest at Olympic Games

By STUART CAMERON, United Press Sports Editor, LOS ANGELES.—The marathon race of 26 miles, 385 yards, with its historic background stretching into the misty past when Pheidippides carried the good news of Greek victory from Marathon to Athens, invariably provides one of the outstanding highlights of the modern Olympic games.

There is a suspense of waiting two hours and a half from the time the army of entrants leaves the stadium, until the first tired runner re-appears.

At least four of the first six to finish in the 1928 marathon will step to their marks Aug. 7 here, including the tall Chilean, Plaza, who took second place; Martelin of Finland, who was third, and Yamada and Iwada of Japan, who finished fourth and sixth after leading the pack for four-fifths of the distance. It is history that winners of marathons frequently have previous Olympic competition.

South America has brought up another youngster as a strong contender in the person of Juan Zabala, who is credited with covering the full distance in two hours, 33 minutes and 19 seconds, in a race in Europe in 1931. Zabala is the star distance runner of South America and made a trip to Europe to gain the benefit of competition. He returned home in the steamer in order to save money so that as could come to the United States several weeks in advance of the games, for conditioning.

However, while all of these veteran marathon performers must be considered among the finest prospects for the 1932 crown, the chief preliminary interest in the event centers about Paavo Nurmi, of Finland. He hopes that he will be reinstated to his amateur status in the International Amateur Athletic federation meeting here, July 28.

It has long been the contention of the great distance runners of the world, meaning by that the runners of distances from three to 10 miles, that if one of their number should really make an effort to win the marathon, he'd leave the common or garden variety of marathon runner so far behind that they were participating in the same event.

Weight to Opinion.

Hannes Kolehmainen, first of the great Finn distance runners, gave considerable weight to this argument when, after having been the outstanding star on the track for half a dozen years, he turned up at Antwerp in 1920 and ran away from the marathon field, setting a record which still stands. Jolie Ray, the great American one and two mile star, came back after years of inactivity to place fifth at Amsterdam.

Little Bill Beats Big Ben

Proving his first triumph over Ben Eastman in the I. C. 4A games was no fluke, little Bill Carr of Pennsylvania again ran over the blond Stanford star, this time in the finals of the 400-meter race in the U. S. Olympic finals at Palo Alto. Carr won handily, with two yards to spare.

Those who predict a Nurmi victory in case he is reinstated, point out that he might win in one or two different ways. With his great natural speed by comparison with the average marathon runner, it would seem to be a simple task for him to loaf along at their comparatively slow pace until perhaps a mile from home and then run away and leave them.

The second group of Nurmi enthusiasts, however, point out that Paavo would probably find it much more difficult to run slowly than to hit his swift ordinary pace and believe that if he hits off the first 10 miles in under 55 minutes, which would be no trick at all for him, he would be so far ahead that nobody possibly could catch him.

Week's Rest for Paavo.

It is the opinion of many of the experts that if the great Paavo runs the 10,000 meters on the first Sunday of the games and then rests up for a week and tackles the marathon on the second Sunday, that he will not only win the race by blocks, but will set a record that probably never will be touched.

The race will start in the stadium and will be run down towards the peach, doubling back by another route to finish in the stadium.

Says Communism Fails To Better Living Conditions

By United Press, KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Communism has failed to better living conditions for the Russian peasants, according to an American engineer, H. L. Tedrow, recently returned from that country.

"For the peasants, it is merely a matter of changing cars," Tedrow explained. He superintended copper mining for the Russian government.

"It's an example of an organized minority of some 2,000,000 communists ruling about 160,000,000 unorganized people," he continued.

"The huge military demonstrations of the government are far no other purpose than to show off its power and keep the citizenship thoroughly cowed."

Tedrow said that while he and his wife were given every possible comfort by the government, the peasants still are able to purchase meat and butter at rare intervals. And then the prices, he said, are prohibitive.

From the campaign speeches, it is already apparent that the nation is certainly going to be saved from something awful in November.

Raising of Two Warships Urged

By United Press.

PENETANGUISENE, Ont.—Two famous warships, the Tigress and the Scorpion, symbolic of American and Canadian bravery during the War of 1812-14, now are rapidly disintegrating in shallow water in Penetanguishene harbor. They were sunk along with eight other warships, to comply with the terms of the Rush-Bagot treaty, which allowed only two armed vessels from each of the two nations on the Great Lakes.

The board of trade here met to discuss the matter. They forwarded a strongly worded petition to the federal government, saying that unless immediate steps were taken to raise them and preserve them from the elements and raids from souvenir hunters, they would soon be lost forever.

So far, the only steps that have been taken to preserve the ships has been to send divers down to determine whether or not they are fit to raise. Some doubt has been expressed by the divers as to whether the Scorpion can be raised but it is agreed that, with very little difficulty, it will be possible to raise the Tigress, and rebuild the stolen and rotten parts. Sufficient financial backing is still wanting to complete the task.

Both the Scorpion and the Tigress participated in the American naval victory in the Battle of Lake Erie, or Put-In Bay, Sept. 18, 1813, the Scorpion having the distinction of firing the first and last shots in this battle.

Auto Insurance To Be Standardized

By United Press.

TORONTO, Ont.—Standardization of automobile insurance forms along with financial responsibility of auto drivers to their victims, comes into force Sept. 1, the Ontario insurance department states.

The standardization is adopted following an interim report by a special committee of automobile insurance underwriters to the superintendent of insurance. All other provinces in the dominion with the exception of Quebec and Prince Edward Island have adopted the new regulation.

A forward step is seen in making the insured motorist automatically financially responsible to victims. The standard forms says that every company shall, under all circumstances be liable to the victim of any accident, whether the policy-holder violated the statute or not. If the policy-holder has violated the statute the insurance company has redress in suing him.

America's chances of ruling the Olympic competition in women's track and field and swimming depend largely on the showings these girls make in the international games.

Jap Land Deal In the Philippines Is Declared Legal

By JOSE M. MALONZO,
United Press Staff Correspondent,
MANILA, P. I.—Extensive Japanese landholdings in Davao, Mindanao, made the subject of a legislative investigation, were acquired under the old land laws permitting foreigners to buy or lease agricultural land, according to Serafin Hilado, director of the insular bureau of lands, and accordingly were obtained legally.

The director of lands pointed out that the law now is modified so as not to permit foreigners acquiring Philippine public lands. It was revealed that there were many cases in which Filipinos applied for purchases, leases or homesteads, and then made arrangements with the Japanese for the latter to cultivate the land. At present such arrangements are carefully scrutinized and investigated, and drastic action is taken if violations are involved, Hilado said.

Statistics of the State Election Bureau showed that 1,505,434 of the 2,963,738 registered Republicans cast primary ballots, 51 per cent of the registration; that 176,351, or only 24 per cent of the 724,337 Democrats, went to the polls primary day; and 3,091 of the 26,435 members of other parties voted.

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS.
AUSTIN.—The East Texas oil field was demoralized before conservation and proration could be started. . . . The railroad commission now has a new field in which it will put regulations before production gets started—the Conroe field—in which a full test of the benefits of orderly production and withdrawals can be had.

Spring Primary Drew Few Votes

HARRISBURG, Pa.—Pennsylvania's spring primary was one of the most intense in years for both major parties but only 46 per cent of the eligible electorate participated.

Platform demands for the consolidation of counties and merger of the city-county governments, and previous recommendations, for a short ballot.

Witness James E. Ferguson, just after the Ferguson highway commission had taken office in 1925, saying (Aug. 5, 1925):

"When the new highway commission came in, and I was free from the legislature, I had time to handle the highway problems." He said he sat with the highway commission in its meetings, "I thought it necessary. The commission cordially invited me to sit with them as my wife had appointed all three of them. . . . It ought to be borne in mind that the highway department spends more money than all the other departments of your state combined. I thought I could not in any better way redeem my promise to the people for an economical administration of their affairs than to identify myself with the commission. . . . The highway commission now has a full understanding among themselves, with one another and with me, and nobody is employed or discharged, no contract is let, no expenditure of funds decided upon and nothing is done in any way which does not take place at a full meeting of the commission. . . ."

And a short time later, after Dan Moody had recovered for the state over $1,000,000 in cash and cancelled contracts, on contracts let by this commission, an outburst of public opinion forced Mrs. Ferguson to accept the resignations of the remaining members of this commission with whom Jim had identified himself.

A reduction of 1,577,000 acres in Texas cotton planting this year below the 15,769,000 total of 1931 is indicated by July estimates of the federal-state crop reporting service. . . . This 10 per cent cut may be followed by a far greater than 10 per cent drop in production, since in many sections the yield in 1931 was far above usual.

Senator Will Beck of Texas, who has rendered outstanding service to his state, whose leadership to establish the psychopathic hospitals has prepared the way to save thousands of afflicted people, will continue his race for re-election to the senate, despite the fact that he has been stricken with a malady that is sending him to a hospital for several months.

His work alone of looking after health matters in the East Texas oil area under the martial rule—he is a lieutenant colonel, medical corps, in the national guard—deserves the appreciation of every Texas citizen.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MONA MORAN who supports her mother, invalid father, little sister, KITTY, and a few well-to-do neighbors, HILLY, is determined to marry for wealth and position. She is receptionist for a Wall Street law firm and in the office area men of the world to which she aspires.

"Do you like the dress?" Mona asked.

The truth about Steve is that he had been involved with gangsters three years earlier but broke with them and has gone straight since. With no thought of immediately but wanting Mona to look her prettiest, he buys her a gown and wrap. She finds them in her room that night and Steve decides to wear them.

Steve had pressed the bell three times, passed and then twice more. His old signal. He sat in the lean, low-slung car, gloved fingers drumming on its wheel and hummed softly.

There was a dim light in the hall. The door opened, closed softly and swiftly. Steve could see the narrowing crack of light vanish above someone's head. Only Mona's hair could gleam with such a halo. He must learn to call her Mona now.

As she came into view, the glow of the street light touching her gently, he almost gasped. This childhood pal of his was beautiful! Mona, moving toward him in that silent stair, might have been a young queen.

"Get out of sight and out of sight," she whispered when Steve was about to swing out of his seat to assist her. She climbed swiftly in beside him.

"Now drive like the fend you are and let's cheat the Casey! I'm planning to tell you what I think of a young man who sends articles of attire to his young women friends."

The car glided forward but Steve's eyes were on Mona. He approved of her. Three years before she would have said "gentleman" and "lady friends."

"Well, you liked them, didn't you?" Steve asked. "You looked like a million dollars as you came through that door. Steve, I say to myself, is it Gloria Swanson? No. It's only that honey Moran girl!"

Mona laughed in spite of her self. "I feel like a million," she acknowledged. "Maybe I looked it, but the door didn't, Steve. Nothing like it. And I belong behind that door. I'm only playing Cinderella tonight because—well, because I thought it would please you."

"It does please me," returned Steve sincerely. "It so happened," Mona went on precisely as though he had not spoken, "that Mother had sent my one and only evening gown to Alice. She married Jim Hallday, you know and lives up in the Dryckman section. I wore these 'because I had to, but they'll go back tomorrow."

"After you've worn them?" Steve asked, a twinkle in his eye, yet with mock severity.

MONA smiled serenely. "You should see the prayer books and theater programs we've pulled out of 'unworn' returns at Pilgrim's," she averred.

Steve did not reply immediately. Then he laid a gloved hand over her own and spoke softly. "Listen, Hon. Remember the Christmas when all I gave you was a candy box with holly on it or some 10 cent store perfume? Well, those days are over and I'm making up for it. Today (he could not quite keep pride out of his voice) those duds you're wearing don't mean any more to me than the pound of candy did in other days."

"But it's the spirit of the thing, the spirit behind the box of candy, Steve. It isn't the cost."

They were moving through the park now, driving slowly, and Mona enjoyed it. Too often she had walked (for lack of carfare), through that same park. It was luxury indeed to ride thus in costly furs, beside a handsome young man in such a car!

SUDDENLY he put his arm about her—they were in a deserted section of the park—and drew her to him. He kissed her, kissed her again and again.

"When I think of you working so hard, and that brother of yours not helping—" Steve's voice was trembling. "Lord, Min, I've been making money! Let me stand behind you if you need me. It must be tough going, Min, lots of times. Most of the time!"

Mona thought of the rest, the insurance, her father's small fee at the hospital, the quarters Bud borrowed and the bills handed every Saturday to Ma who stretched them somehow to last through the week. She thought of days when she had gone without lunch, pretending she had gained two pounds the week before and was fasting to keep slim.

Then she thought of the ermine cloak she was wearing. She thought of what Mrs. Casey would say to Mrs. Callahan if she caught sight of it. And she thought of Steve's kisses.

She could not admit—even to herself—that she had wanted Steve to kiss her. No, she had merely endured these caresses. Steve's sincerity was unmistakable. It would have been cheap to take offense. He was her childhood friend and, as in the old days he had brought her apples or oranges, now he was sharing his good fortune with her. Still it wasn't to be thought that this could lead to anything more serious. She wouldn't spoil his evening by telling him that now, though.

DEXTEROUSLY Steve swung the car between a pile of cobble stones and a rope hung with red lights. Then Broadway, gloomy in the automobile section but bright and garish in the lower forties.

He said, "I am going to take you to the Halcyon Club."

Mona knew the Halcyon Club. It had opened recently and was at the moment one of New York's most advertised supper clubs.

They left the car in the shadows of the side street into which Steve had guided it and walked the few yards to the supper club door. The doorman recognized Steve and answered his greeting effusively, springing to hold the swinging doors apart.

Mona and Steve walked down thickly carpeted steps into the tiny foyer lined with mirrors. Then through more swinging doors toward the insinuating murmurs of the orchestra.

Their table was near the space cleared for dancing. Mona tossed the priceless cloak from her shoulders and emerged like a sea nymph in her sea green frock.

"Like it?" asked Mona boldly as Steve's eyes registered the answer to her query. She went on, "Little thing I picked up this afternoon. Picked up in my room where it had no—business—to-be!"

Steve emphasized the last four words with little stabs of her finger in the air. She was flirting with him! It was safe enough here where he could not kiss her again.

Steve's eyes, however, turned avid and searched the room speculatively. "I'm expecting my partner," he explained. Steve stepped short.

"Great Guns, look who's here!" he exclaimed.

"Okay. Then it's the spirit behind that handful of clothes and not their value. So that's that!"

It was not that at all but MONA decided on silence. She'd take the clothes back tomorrow and with Lottie's help see that they were received.

"I know you'd feel—well, just right—in any rig Pilgrim picked for you. We almost had every dress in the place on the model before I found just the right one!"

"You went yourself, Steve? Did you see Lottie?"

But Lottie had not been in evidence. Probably she was resting up for tonight's date. Frequently Lottie strained her long connection with Pilgrim's to what MONA thought must be near the breaking point.

They were moving through the park now, driving slowly, and MONA enjoyed it. Too often she had walked (for lack of carfare), through that same park. It was luxury indeed to ride thus in costly furs, beside a handsome young man in such a car!

"When I think of you working so hard, and that brother of yours not helping—" Steve's voice was trembling. "Lord, Min, I've been making money! Let me stand behind you if you need me. It must be tough going, Min, lots of times. Most of the time!"

MONA thought of the rent, the insurance, her father's small fee at the hospital, the quarters Bud borrowed and the bills handed every Saturday to Ma who stretched them somehow to last through the week. She thought of days when she had gone without lunch, pretending she had gained two pounds the week before and was fasting to keep slim.

Then she thought of the ermine cloak she was wearing. She thought of what Mrs. Casey would say to Mrs. Callahan if she caught sight of it. And she thought of Steve's kisses.

She could not admit—even to herself—that she had wanted Steve to kiss her. No, she had merely endured those carresses. Steve's sincerity was unmistakable. It would have been cheap to take offense. He was her childhood friend and, as in the old days he had brought her apples or oranges, now he was sharing his good fortune with her. Still it wasn't to be thought that this could lead to anything more serious. She wouldn't spoil his eyening by telling him that now, though.

DEXTEROUSLY Steve swung the car between a pile of cobble stones and a rope hung with red lights. Then Broadway, gloomy in the automobile section but bright and garish in the lower forties.

He said, "I am going to take you to the Halcyon Club."

MONA knew the Halcyon Club. It had opened recently and was at the moment one of New York's most advertised supper clubs.

They left the car in the shadows of the side street into which Steve had guided it and walked the few yards to the supper club door. The doorman recognized Steve and answered his greeting effusively, springing to hold the swinging doors apart.

MONA and Steve walked down thickly carpeted steps into the tiny foyer lined with mirrors. Then through more swinging doors toward the insinuating murmurs of the orchestra.

Their table was near the space cleared for dancing. MONA tossed the priceless cloak from her shoulders and emerged like a sea nymph in her sea green frock.

"Like it?" asked MONA boldly as Steve's eyes registered the answer to her query. She went on, "Little thing I picked up this afternoon. Picked up in my room where it had no—business—to be."

She emphasized the last four words with little stabs of her finger in the air. She was flirting with him! It was safe enough here where he could not kiss her again.

Steve's eyes, however, turned away and searched the room speculatively. "I'm expecting my partner," he explained. Steve stopped short.

"Great Guns, look who's here!" he exclaimed.

Lead U. S. Girls in Olympic Games

Helene Madison Katherine Rawls Eleanor Holm Babe Didrikson Ruth Osburn Jean Shiley

America's chances of ruling the Olympic competition in women's track and field and swimming depend largely on the showings these girls make in the international games. Ruth Osburn, Babe Didrikson and Jean Shiley are three of our best bets in the track and field contests. Helene Madison and Eleanor Holm hold most of our women's swimming records and little Katherine Rawls, although only 14, tops our fancy diving field.

Jap Land Deal In the Philippines Is Declared Legal

By JOSE M. MALONZO, United Press Staff Correspondent.

MANILA, P. I.—Extensive Japanese landholdings in Davao, Mindanao, made the subject of a legislative investigation, were acquired under the old land laws permitting foreigners to buy or lease agricultural land, according to Serafin Hilado, director of the insular bureau of lands, and accordingly were obtained legally.

Hilado's opinion was sought after charges were made that the Japanese gained ownership of the land through illegal transactions, and that government officials, notably those connected with the land bureau, participated in the deals.

The director of lands pointed out that the law now is modified so as not to permit foreigners acquiring Philippine public lands.

It was revealed that there were many cases in which Filipinos applied for purchases, leases or homesteads, and then made arrangements with the Japanese for the latter to cultivate the land.

At present such arrangements are carefully scrutinized and investigated, and drastic action is taken if violations are involved, Hilado said.

Japanese land interests and the influx of Japanese immigrants in Davao necessitated the establishment recently of a Japanese general consulate there to look after Japanese interests.

TEXAS TOPICS Spring Primary Drew Few Votes

By RAYMOND BROOKS.

AUSTIN.—The East Texas oil field was demoralized before conservation and proration could be started. . . . The railroad commission now has a new field in which it will put regulations before production gets started—the Conroe field—in which a full test of the benefits of orderly production and withdrawals can be had.

Counting all local candidates in each county, nearly 20,000 people in Texas are now running for office. . . . About one-fifth will be elected. One of the big financial drains upon a large element of people is the election campaign.

Platform demands for the consolidation of counties and merger of the city-county governments, and previous recommendations that will be revised by efficiency organizations, for a short ballot, would limit the number of candidates to be elected to 800, instead of 4,000.

Words and subsequent deeds sometimes combine to make a bizarre picture.

Witness James E. Ferguson, just after the Ferguson highway commission had taken office in 1925, saying (Aug. 5, 1925):

"When the new highway commission came in, and I was free from the legislature, I had time to cancel the highway programs." He said he sat with the highway commission in its meetings. "I thought it necessary. The commission cordially invited me to sit with them as my wife had appointed all three of them. . . . It ought to be borne in mind that the highway department spends more money than all the other departments of your state combined. I thought I could not in any better way redeem my promise to the people for an economical administration of their affairs than to identify myself with the commission. . . . The highway commission now has a full understanding among themselves, with one another and with me, and nobody is employed or discharged, no contract is let, no expenditure of funds decided upon and nothing is done in any way which does not take place at a full meeting of the commission. . . ."

And a short time later, after Dan Moody had recovered for the state over $1,000,000 in cash and cancelled contracts on contracts let by this commission, an outburst of public opinion forced Mrs. Ferguson to accept the resignations of the remaining members of this commission with whom Jim had identified himself.

A reduction of 1,577,000 acres in Texas cotton planting this year below the 15,769,000 total of 1931 is indicated by July estimates of the federal-state crop reporting service. . . . This 10 per cent cut may be allowed by a far greater than 10 per cent drop in production, since in many sections the yield in 1931 was far above usual.

Senator Will Beck of Texarkana, who has rendered outstanding service to his state, whose leadership to establish the psychopathic hospital has prepared the way to save thousands of afflicted people, will continue his race for re-election to the senate, despite the fact that he has been stricken with a malady that is sending him to a hospital for several months.

His work alone of looking after health matters in the East Texas oil area under the martial rule—he is a lieutenant colonel, medical corps, in the national guard—deserves the appreciation of every Texas citizen.

POPULAR BLUFF, Mo.—When Eddie Allison caught a good sized perch he tied it to the back of his boat and started for home to show his catch to his mother.

When Eddie arrived he went to pull in his catch. The chain tightened and the river started to foam. Eddie couldn't figure out how so small a fish could cause such a disturbance, but when he hauled it in—it was not his perch, but a 18½-pound catfish. It had swallowed the perch.

Judge and Mrs. W. P. Leslie Open Home to W. M. S.

The hospitable home and premises of the Judge and Mrs. W. P. Leslie, were thrown open to the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church, and their families Monday evening, when a picnic supper was served at 7:30 o'clock on the lawn of the home.

Through the handsome trees glistened twinkling electric lights that interlaced the branches, and shed a pretty glow upon the dozen or more small tables, linen covered and centered in vases of bright hued garden blossoms, and that were scattered over the lawn, in readiness for the delicious supper, served from the long buffet table, presided over by Mrs. Charles C. Robey, assisted by Misses M. B. Griffin, C. Fell and Everett, and one of the choruses of the evening, Mrs. W. F. Davenport.

The buffet table was laden with trays of fried chicken, cold meats, sliced ham, salads, sliced tomatoes, pickles, sandwiches, pies, cakes, a big freezer of ice cream that stood at the end of the table, being the last course of this delicious repast. Iced tea, was served by the committee from a large container. Flowers centered the table, and small bouquets interspersed the table's length.

As guests entered they were met by house host and hostess, Judge and Mrs. Leslie, and Mrs. Frank Crowell, acting president of the missionary society, who presided at the registration table, assisted by the hostess.

Paris Is Planning Two Big Fairs

By United Press.

PARIS.—Two great world exhibitions are planned for Paris during the next five years, a first world's Labor Fair, in 1935, and the second International Decorative Arts Exposition, in 1937. They will be followed by a third International Colonial Exposition between 1940 and 1942.

Modern decorative arts, particularly in furniture, interior decoration, jewelry and architecture, have changed so rapidly that the fairs which existed in 1925, the year of the first arts exposition, are already out of fashion.

That exposition developed modern arts to such an extent, however, that it is felt a second exposition is necessary to carry on this development. Unlike the first exhibition, the next one may not be held right in the heart of Paris, but the buildings covering the planade des Invalides and near-neighborhoods and bridges. A site at the edge of Paris is favored, so that some permanent buildings may remain.

The Labor Fair is intended to give the trades and corporations of other countries, to re-establish the hands of each branch of industry. It will also revive the greater part of the European calendar of the days of kings and emperors, the annual harvest fetes, grape picking parties, and other celebrations which went out with the revolution.

A slight chill running up the spine is brought out in the first emphasizes the headache strain in the second part, the manuscript reveals, and the preparation motif, always a part of the disease, is played by oboes, clarinets and strings. A brilliant delicious crescendo closing the third act prepares for the noble theme of the convalescent theme. The finale is stately and noble, depicting the patient a bit wobbly and weak, but glad to be alive.

Red Headed Woman Is Lyric Feature

There are traitors in the ranks of the blondes!

Anita Loos and Jean Harlow have deserted.

Miss Loos appears as the adapter of the Katherine Brush novel, "Red Headed Woman," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen production now showing at the Lyric theatre, Eastland.

And Jean Harlow has changed from platinum blonde to a red-head to portray the title role—the girl who wrecks the home of Chester Morris.

As Lil Andrews, the "Red Terror" of Kenwood, Jean Harlow toys with the hearts of Chester Morris, Lewis Stone, Henry Stephenson and diverse other men. Even in her most platinum of blonde days she never raised such havoc.

Her conquests in this film are at the expense of two charming blondes in the person of Leila Hyams and Una Merkel. "Red Headed Woman" was directed by Jack Conway.
