TRIPINGS

YCE HOUSE was in this neck of the woods this morning. He was chatting about the "Old Settlers' Reunion at Desdemona" and gave me a beautiful story of how the city got its name. I use the big words like Boyce or can I say them as fast, here's his version as to the measure of Desdemona:

THE DAYS of yore, when about corpus was regarded something besides a campaign, that beautiful little stream water flowing lazily through southeast part of the county along the giant oak and pecan was known as Hog Creek because it was a hog wallow many people thought, but because of the abundance of pecans across beneath the trees and along the banks of the stream it was a rendezvous (that's not a word) for the precise relation of that section. And in a sleepy village grew into a city on the banks of Hog Creek, it quite naturally took on the name of Hogtown and a better name in the eyes of the people in quest of flowing gold.

ONE OF the old settlers had taken a great liking for the life of Shakespeare and in honor to the Bard of Avon had named one of his daughters Desdemona. This young lady said to be fair of face and with azure blue eyes and curly white teeth and a voice soft as asider down. Small and that one of the younger members of the law profession was a residence was Eastland and she said to her father as his transportation would permit to the fair Desdemona, whose age stood before him in her face even as her fair complexion did when he was with her. The young lawyer was preparing the city charter for a new city and when it came to write in a name other than Hogtown, he felt that he would do itself no greater honor than to name itself after the belle of the county, Desdemona. And thus it was and thus it is.

THE ABOVE IS, of course, a touching narrative replete with love and interest, but is yet another example of the kind of city which is probably as authentic. It seems that two men of He-descent had financed the building of a well. And the men in the work had drilled the well and found no oil. The two Hebrews were in their Dallas office that was nothing in the hole but bottom.

THE TWO JEWS were jubilant for the lease, which was just the side of the city of Hogtown. They could imagine all sorts of things and someone suggested that they put in a shot of nitro. They poured a 10 quart shot and by whilst the shooter was firing the shot. The disturbance at the bottom of the hole was a success and the dull thud knew what a thud is) was used by the well's flowing.

OLD SETTLERS' REUNION TO BE FRIDAY

The second annual Old Settlers Reunion will be officially opened at Desdemona Friday with an address of welcome by Mayor J. H. Rushing. County Judge Clyde Garrett will respond to the welcoming address.

An entertainment program consisting of Rodeo and baseball has been arranged. Candidates for county offices will speak on Friday afternoon and speakers representing the candidates for governor will speak during the Saturday program.

Acceptances of invitations sent out by the committee have been received from former residents of Desdemona from all parts of Texas. The old timers will return and enjoy reminiscences among themselves of the days before the oil boom and during the boom.

Desdemona was originally called Hogtown because of its location on the banks of Hog Creek which was made famous by the publicity given Hog Creek Caruth who promised and drilled the wells in the first primary, in big production there in 1919.

After the town grew into a sizeable settlement with hotels, a newspaper, electric lights, amusements, etc., the citizens thought it should have a more inviting name than Hogtown and the name of Desdemona was selected.

When the Jake Hamon railroad was built through that section an attempt was made to move the original townsite to the newly laid out plat of Jakehamon, which was on the railroad and had its depot. The attempt was unsuccessful and after a short time Jakehamon dwindled to nothing and the railroad was connected up with Desdemona and the depot moved there.

Desdemona has, of course, lost considerable in both population and business volume since the oil boom. But it is still one of the liveliest communities in the county and its citizens take an active interest in all county affairs.

PROSPERITY FLASHLIGHTS IN THE HEAVENS

There never was a depression in history that was not blotted out by adjustment or re-adjustment and there never will be. There never has been a period of fat years that a period of lean did not follow in its wake.

For instance, a Boston searchlight tossed this ray to the wool and the mohair growers: "Millions of pounds of wool sold at a price of 30 cents a pound."

Grain and commodity markets are on the hike. Butter and eggs futures have been lifted to new heights for the year.

There has been a steady advance in bonds and stocks with both bears and bulls said to be flabbergasted by the remarkable change which has taken place in mid-summer.

Wool men everywhere are confident of a business upturn. All are optimistic about the future of their industry.

This plan would mean that a subsidiary or branch plant of an American concern, whether in Canada or any other nation of the British commonwealth, would have to guarantee that 60 per cent of the total value of its products represented British labor and materials.

The general who led his troops to battle to defend his country armed only with peace treaties would be certain to suffer defeat at the hands of an army armed with heavy artillery, machine guns, tanks and airplanes.

Well advertised merchandise is the kind that brings customers back again and again.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

FREDERICK L. YATES, Publisher of the Sheridan (Wyo.) Press, says:

THAT a newspaper is the biggest slice of life that can be bought for a few cents.

A newspaper is more powerful than the ancient kings and stronger than the law of the land. Ancient kings did things by virtue of force and strength. The law does things by courts and juries. The newspaper does things by education.

The newspapers, therefore, must abandon their gay attitude of irresponsibility, their semi-sophomoric notions of sophistication and smart cracks.

Everyone on a paper from the lowliest cub to the publisher must have a full realization of his responsibility to the age in which he lives. The standards of the eye shade, the shirt sleeves and the loose talk and cynicism often found in the journalistic world are as collegiate as the rolled-neck sweater and the Oxford bags.

The attitude of many sheets toward their obligations reminds me of a small boy smoking cigars behind the barn to show what a man he is.

A newspaper in its function of forming convictions, standards and ideals has the world by the tail. Why give the world a downhill pull?

What Other Scribes Are Saying

The rumor making the rounds to effect football will be abandoned this year at San Angelo high school is unfounded. The story has it F. E. Smith, school superintendent, recently stated there would be no football here the impending autumn because the athletic department is broke.

HERE-- AND THERE

By ELVIE H. JACKSON

What would this world be like if there were no ideals, no unselfish people, and no one who had a sincere desire to better the condition of others?

In this town of Eastland there are any number of women, who are working quietly, faithfully and unselfishly in raising the standards of living, in bringing higher ideals into the lives of the young, and in teaching boys and girls, the beauty of clean play, clean reading, and clean pleasures.

There is nothing that so conserves the morale of a city or town, as the proper and intelligent conduct of its youth.

It is for this reason that so many institutions exist, such as the Young Men's Christian association, Young Women's Christian association, and other social organizations, which are usually semi-educational in nature.

In the Boys and Girls World club, an auxiliary of the Methodist church, there is found a splendid educational program, with many entertaining features, that is prepared for the boys and girls by their directors.

Music is taught these children, and worship in hymn and story is beautifully given.

In the Christian church, the Friendship class is doing marvelous work among the young, through their president, Rev. M. C. Franklin, pastor of the church, and Mrs. C. A. Peterson, president of the missionary society of this church.

The Church of God has fine directors of youth, their young people's organizations, in the wife of the dean of Warner Memorial university, Mrs. E. O. Bailey, and in Mrs. J. T. Wilson, the wife of the president of the university.

The Presbyterian church is doing marvelous work through their Sunday school morning classes, under direction of their superintendent, George Deiker, and which are held during various periods of the year.

Then there are the wonderful mornings that have been given over to children at the community clubhouse, through the months of June, July and August, and known as children's hour, when the federated clubs of Eastland, which support the community clubhouse and library, have been responsible for the educational program presented, during these mornings.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON--It begins to look as if this presidential campaign and perhaps those of the future, insofar as the two candidates are concerned, were going to become bouts between "masked marvels."

There will be very few of our 120,000,000 people who, if they want to get a good look at President Hoover and Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt this year, will not have to content themselves with newspaper photographs and newsreels.

At any rate, the old practice of extended presidential tours is certain to be discarded by one candidate and still a matter of conjecture for the other. President Hoover may not leave Washington at all, although it is possible that he will journey to one or two nearby cities. The plans of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt are not yet completed, but many of his friends are arguing against his personal desire of a coast-to-coast speaking tour.

Hoover's Position

THE president is in a better position to stay put, as anything he loses by failing to make outside personal appearances is likely to be offset by the favorable impression created of an executive eternally on the job, striving with great, vital problems and too busy working for the public welfare to go off barnstorming.

There is a belief here that the White House also takes into consideration the possibility that there is danger in a president traveling too widely during these troublous times, although there is no encouragement of such a belief from administration sources.

Roosevelt's Offensive

ROOSEVELT has a much more magnetic personality than just so must the morals of the young be guarded, and the papers feel that acknowledgment should be given to those who assist in training the youth of the city, where such acknowledgment is due, through their publishing of the accounts of these organizations.

Tragic 'Swings'

Charles Evans Hughes, now chief justice, went as far as the Pacific coast in 1914--and there encompassed his Waterloo when he was accused to Sen. Hiram Johnson.

The Hughes incident is an example of what may happen to a candidate on tour. There are many such possibilities.

Hoover, however, and a fine oratorical delivery.

While he may not take full advantage of that in a real swing through the country, he is certain to do more "getting around" than Hoover. After all, Roosevelt is on the offensive and although he may reduce his personal appearances to a minimum he can hardly help acting the part.

After all, Roosevelt is on the offensive and although he may reduce his personal appearances to a minimum he can hardly help acting the part.

Roosevelt, who is being hooded in some quarters as a belligerent second Wilson, has had a yen for as wide a sweep as possible. But advisers have told him that no matter how far he went it would be demanded that he stop at every large city en route.

What Roosevelt will do remains to be decided. Of course the radio is the thing that threatens to make "masked marvels" out of our candidates. And if you are only hurling things through the air from the quiet of your study you don't risk the embarrassing incidents which have often injured or ruined peripatetic candidates of other election years.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

with BILL MAYES

Yesterday while trying to find out where a small Texas town was located we ran across one of the reasons Texas geography is so hard to remember. Of course there is the size of the state, the large number of towns and the large number of counties, but there are other factors.

For instance we noticed that the town of Henderson is in Rusk county while the town of Rusk is in Cherokee county and though there is a town by the name of Cherokee it is way down in San Saba county, nowhere near either Henderson, Rusk or Cherokee counties.

Then we got to looking over the map and postoffice guide and found that the town of Cameron is in Milam county in Central Texas while the town of Milam is out in East Texas in Sabine county; the town of Sabine is in Jefferson county. The town of Jefferson is stuck off up in Marion county and the town by the name of Marion is over in Guadalupe county and the town of Guadalupe is in Victoria county.

All of which is confusing because it is hard to keep the towns and counties separated. Now the town of Crockett is in Houston county while Houston is--aw, what's the use!

Anyway, we found that there were 61 counties and towns which had similar names, but where the town by one name was not in the county with the same name. For instance Austin is not in Austin county, Tyler is not in Tyler county and any of the other 59 towns named after counties are not in the county one would think they should be.

Which ends the geography lesson for today except for the fact that the Farmover Post No. 57 of Abilene, which is in Taylor county but nowhere near the town of Taylor, has sent out a pass to the second annual American Legion blow-out at Abilene on Sept. 5 and 6.

The letter accompanying the pass said that newspapermen were to be admitted free of charge, thereby intimating that we are all deadbeats and wouldn't have the money to pay the regular tariff on the rodeo and race meet.

"Take a look at the free pass enclosed herewith," the letter reads, and a casual observation shows it to be a neat looking pass with, signed by C. L. Fowler and which is good for admittance for entire program and barbecue.

"How about closing up shop for at least one day," the letter continues, "and coming along?" We can guarantee you all the good West Texas barbecue with trimmings you can hold, and a line of entertainment and amusement that will make you forget some of the worries newspapermen have been having for the past three years, and it won't cost you a cent."

With a guarantee like that anyone would be tempted to attend provided he could get the boss to close up the shop for a day or so, as suggested by Mr. Fowler.

We are in receipt of the most autographed book we have ever received. It is called "Joe Bailey, the Last Democrat," and is autographed both by William McCraw, district attorney of Dallas, and by Sam Hanna Barber, the author in San Antonio.

So far the autographs are all we have had time to read, but intend to put in some interesting hours on the book real soon.

The following letter is quoted from a column called "Head on the Street Corners," in the Marshall Morning News. It was sent to the conductor of the column and is reproduced without comment either by the street corner observer or the knothole peeper. Here it is:

"Dear Head: Just a few words on the political outlook. Last week I traveled more than 500 miles over this part of East Texas. On how they voted in the first primary and how they would vote in the second primary. Out of this number I interviewed 40 men who said they voted for Hunter in the first primary; 32 of these said they would vote for Sterling in the second primary. Four said they would go fishing, and four said they would hold their noses and vote for Jim Ferguson. And by the way I might add that I interviewed four men who said they voted for Ferguson in the first primary, but would vote for Sterling in the second primary. Four said they had changed their minds and they said that they had become better posted since the first primary. In my travels over the country I find a decided trend in favor of Sterling. This continues until the 27th of August Sterling will defeat the Fergusons by at least 50,000 votes. Respectfully, A Democrat."

The actual mileage covered by the 15 miles of roots amounts to but a square foot, ever, for most of the immense mileage is made up of delicate hairs, almost microscopic in size, which are to be found sticking of the larger roots. By the process known as "osmosis," these hairs absorb the food compounds so necessary to the growing plant.

for LOVE or MONEY by CORLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY. Mona Moran, receptionist in a Wall Street law office, is in love with Barry Townsend, rich and socially prominent. She met Barry through Steve Saccabelli, her childhood sweetheart, who has returned to New York after three years' absence. Steve has been in South America where, largely by chance, he has become associated with Barry, owner of a diamond mine long believed worthless. Together they have made the mine pay and are now business partners. Steve owns a huge diamond called 'The Empress of Peru.' Lottie Carr, fashion model, joins Mona, Barry and Steve on several dinner and dancing engagements. Mona's brother, Bud, becomes involved with gangsters who plan to steal the big diamond. Steve suspects this, traps Bud and when he confesses they escape to South America where he is to have a job at the mine. Some time later Barry invites Mona, Lottie and Steve to spend Sunday at his uncle's palatial country home. It is a delightful day but Barry fails to propose to Mona as she had hoped he might. He asks her to dine with him next week but when they stay overnight she falls to her from him. Barry is ill with influenza. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XX had just talked to Mrs. Faxon who said Barry was feeling better. "I can't tonight, Steve. I'm going to see Father." Declining Steve's suggestion that she should drive to Twilands after visiting the hospital, Mona put down the instrument and set off for lunch. The Savarin was empty and she found a secluded seat at a corner. Without consulting the menu Mona ordered briefly a pot of tea with lemon, eggs Benedictine and toast. The cool green of the room, the music, faraway but insistent, the spotless linen gave her the sense of luxury her mood required. Presently the waiter brought her order, lifted the silver cover of the dish proudly and poured the tea. Mona drank the beverage slowly. Holding the cup to her lips she noted that she was not, as she had thought, alone in this section of the room. Directly across her Mr. Garretson chatting with another man. Mona noticed that the stranger was slim with a slightly military crested and that he was regarding her as he flicked ashes from his cigar into a tray. For an instant his eyes met Mona's. Swiftly the girl looked away and again considered her tea cup. As she rose to leave she glanced toward Mr. Garretson who bowed. "He'll think I'm extravagant," Mona thought with alarm. Hurrying away, she had the uncomfortable feeling that the two men were discussing her. She didn't want Mr. Garretson to think she wasted money—today of all days! For Mona had decided to ask for an advance with which to finance her father's treatment. She would, of course, approach Mr. Garretson about it. It had been Mr. Garretson who had hired her, arranged her work, and given her frequent (Continued from page four)

STALE GAS SHORT-CHANGES YOU ONLY fresh GAS GIVES YOU ALL THE POWER YOU PAY FOR How much power's in a dollar's worth of gas? Maybe a dollar's worth. Maybe 80 cents worth. Maybe less. It all depends upon the FRESHNESS of the gasoline. For as gas gets staler, it gets weaker. It loses volatile "easy starting" elements. And—due to a chemical change in gasoline—the staler it gets—the less power it gives! It gets stickier, too—and more apt to knock. Gulf, after long study of gas deterioration, has now perfected a system that assures you of getting FRESH gas—packed with power. How? By refining out of its fine gasoline certain complex elements that have been found to cause rapid deterioration. And by making sure that you get this FRESH gas in a hurry—giving it no time to get stale. Gulf has geared its distribution system to high speed—has placed its huge refineries in many sections of the country, so that every Gulf station is close to a source of FRESH gas. A huge fleet of speedy trucks rushes FRESH-MADE gas to Gulf pumps every day. Get all the power you pay for. Get FRESH gas—delivered FRESH—get Gulf. And have a faster, cleaner, quieter motor. get THAT GOOD GULF GASOLINE—it's fresh

Boys and Girls World Club
Out of Doors Meeting.
The Boys and Girls World Club enjoyed their regular morning session on the lawn of the Methodist church, instead of having the program in the classroom.

The smooth, pleasant shade and novelty of surroundings, made it all very pleasing to the children.

The meeting was directed by Mrs. Fred L. Drago.

A group of songs prefaced the program, numbers used were, "I Want to Send a Whisper Song," "Jesus Was a Baby Boy," "Friends," "Summer" and "Prayer Song."

The devotional period was concluded with the Lord's Prayer recited in unison.

Each of the training of this class is done through the songs they are taught and use. The meaning of these songs is analyzed by their directors.

Mrs. Stablesfield told a very interesting story of a small negro boy, called "The Tarn," which the children greatly enjoyed.

A round robin of personal notes was written by each child, to Mary Nell Crowell, who is ill at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crowell.

These were sent with flowers and sympathy to the little girl.

Some delightful games were played and led by the directors. Children attending were, Lucy May Cottingham, Ray June Stablesfield, Nan Mickle, Dorothy McGlamery, Virginia Ferguson, Mildred McGlamery, Annie Joe Tildeman, Ruth Hart, and Wendell Hunter, a new member.

Thomas Coleman Harrell
Has Birthday Party.
Mrs. Tom Harrell entertained a number of little friends of her small son on the lawn of her home at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon in honor of the little lad, Thomas Coleman Harrell's all important fifth birthday.

Many games were played on the lawn, shaded by fine trees and gay balloons were given as favors.

Mrs. Harrel was assisted by her young daughters, Elyzabeth Ann and Mary Jane, in entertaining the little group.

A pretty birthday cake, white iced, topped with five pink tapers, lighted by Thomas Coleman, graced a lace covered table and was served with iced fruited punch to Patsy Weigand, Mary Helen Armstrong, Sybil Patterson, Betty Weigand, Jimmie Armstrong, Neal Patterson, George Brelsford, Homer Meek, Fred Patterson, Shirley and Jimmie Patterson and the daughters of the home and their guest Elizabeth Ann, Mary Jane and Dorothy Aton.

Young Girl Visits
State Capitol.
Mildred McGlamery in enthusiastic over her first visit to the State capital at Austin, which she visited with her father, B. E. McGlamery on Tuesday.

The constitution was of peculiar interest to Mildred, as it was signed by her great grandfather, H. S. Kimble, at that time secretary of the convention, that drew up the constitution.

Mrs. Green Leads Program
At Club On Parents Program
A complete and well-carried out program was given under the leadership of Mrs. E. R. Green yesterday afternoon when members of the Child Study Club No. 1 met at the home of Mrs. C. O. Hollin, East Main street. The hour was impressively opened through the topic, "What a Good Parent," given in a forceful and instructive way by Mrs. E. L. Fontaine. A division in relative topic came when each member present gave a three-minute talk, with each touching upon the chosen lesson subject. This feature came as something a bit different from the usual program and afforded profitable suggestions in exchange manner.

"Can a Child Read Too Much?" was discussed from a splendidly prepared paper, given by Mrs. J. S. Reynolds.

With all necessary business subjects discussed in brief, the hostesses served ice cream and cake to the following: Meses. Gay Earp, D. W. Nichol, W. S. Murray, S. J. Reynolds, E. R. Green, D. Joseph, F. N. Hansen, O. G. Lanier, H. S. Euse, Ed Barrett, Edwin George Jr., and E. L. Fontaine.

During the refreshment course a special favor was offered when Miss Gillian Buchanan presented three young pupils, Ernest Green Jr., Fern Allen Heroney, and Doris Vesich, in three violin selections, accompanied at the piano by Miss Buchanan. The well chosen numbers from famous composers were "Volga Boatman," at which time the teacher gave an interesting resume of the Russian song, in a manner which lent color to the beautiful themes "Old Aunt Syne" and "Home Sweet Home."

This rendition met with one round of applause followed closely and warmly by another, affording an appropriate and touching inspiration to the unusually interesting program.

In Honored
On Birthday.
The home of Mrs. C. C. Cash, 618 Fock street, presented a party and gay setting, Tuesday afternoon, when Mrs. Cash entertained with a prettily arranged affair in the form of a surprise shower and luncheon party, honoring her sister, Mrs. Pauline Fry, on her birthday.

At tables dressed in colors repeating the color note of pastel tints high score was won by Miss Velma Brown, and low by the honoree. All gifts presented the delighted recipient were enclosed in white and tied with bows and bits of var-colored ribbons to make a variety in the balls of whiteness.

A plate of ice cream and cake were passed to the honor guest and Meses Margaret White, Effie Mae Williams, Ora Mae McGee, Ruth Elmore, and family members of the honoree. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cahler and Aubrey and Jimmie Fullwood, and hostess and husband.

Woodman Circle Meets
With Mrs. Cash Presiding
The Julia Alexander grove of the Woodman circle met at the hall Wednesday afternoon, with Mrs. C. C. Cash, guardian presiding.

The resignation of the outer sentinel, Mrs. Francis Sexton, was accepted with deep regret, since her office has been filled with decided efficiency since she assumed work several weeks ago.

During the business period of the session, Mrs. Pauline Fry, was elected outer sentinel, and Mrs. Annie Vaughn, auditor.

Due to the warm weather and many taking vacation the attendance has fallen to a low number.

Every member of the grove is asked to be present next Wednesday.

But when you consider that your father will be here under obligation for several months that sum becomes nominal. However, we are not concerned over the payment. You can take your time for that. Dr. Frederick, who comes to the hospital frequently will be consulted from time to time. All you need do, Miss Moran, is sign a document signifying your agreement to the plan of treatment. The money can wait on your convenience.

Dr. Fredericks entered the room then. He looked the antithesis of Dr. Dean—older, jovial, dark and stocky. Save for his amie and general air of efficiency, he might have passed anywhere for a badly dressed grocery clerk.

But when he spoke Mona's attitude toward the man changed completely. Here were knowledge, experience, quiet assurance. Moreover, Dr. Fredericks was frankly pleased by Miss Moran's beauty.

The girl felt that at any cost she must place her father under this learned man's care. As Dr. Fredericks talked the younger doctor nodded solemnly and the nurse, glancing up from her files, smiled approval.

"I brought my father a few little things," Mona told Miss Folsom after she had signed the agreement and said good night to the two doctors who were discussing other matters. "I don't suppose I can see him so late as this."

"He's asleep," Miss Folsom smiled, "and nothing is more important to him just now than sleep. However," she eyed the packages conscientiously, "I'll leave some on the table near his bed so he will see them the moment he awakens."

"And tell him I'll be back to see him in a few days, won't you?" Mona said. "Give him my love."

Mrs. Folsom agreed and returned to her vigil. Why in the name of heaven, she wondered, did a girl as pretty as that one continue to remain "Miss Moran"?
