An increase of sixteen per cent in the sale of new cars and trucks in the first ten days of August over the same period of July was reported by Chevrolet dealers, W. K. Kaudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, announced today.

In the period, dealers' stocks of used cars were substantially reduced and stocks of new cars in the field also showed a slight recession, the Chevrolet president stated.

NEEDS OF THE FAMILY CAN BE HAD HERE
Montgomery Ward & Co.
Ranger, Texas

for LOVE or MONEY by H.W. CORLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MONA MORAN, receptionist in a Wall Street law office, receives an amazing proposal of marriage. Her employer tells her a wealthy client wishes to marry her immediately with the understanding that for a year she shall occupy her own apartment, have unlimited charge accounts, do as she pleases. At the end of that time she is to decide whether to become the man's wife in actuality or secure a divorce.

Mona is in love with BARRY TOWNSEND, rich and socially prominent, who is the business partner of her friend, STEVE SACABELLI. Barry and Steve operate a diamond mine in South America. Steve, who is rich, has recently sold a huge diamond called "The Empress of Peru."

When Mona asks the name of the man who wishes to marry her she is told it is Barry Townsend. Not until the ceremony is about to be performed does she discover the betrothed man is young Barry's uncle, of the same name. Steve and young Barry have returned to America. Mona, believing her sweetheart lost to her, marries the uncle, LOTTIE CARR, a fashion model, in Mona's own restaurant.

Some months pass and Mona touches with her husband. It is the first time she has gone anywhere with him. The first to see her has bought the diamond, "The Empress," for her. Mona, knowing the bitter truth between uncle and nephew, tries to bring about a better understanding but fails.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXIX
MONA raised startled eyes. "When you are gone?" she repeated. Her husband surveyed her gently. "My dear, do you believe for an instant that I think I shall live forever?" His tone was light but for all that Mona knew he was aware of that which had been concealed from him so carefully. He knew he had been given only a year to live.

For a moment neither spoke. Then the man said cheerfully, "Since life is short and time is fleeting there are several things I would like to do. The first is to see you as frequently as possible. I want to take you about, to show you off if you don't mind the phrase—to provide you with gifts. I want to meet your family, too. I'd like to feel that this rather abrupt move of mine has benefited them in some way. Of course," he added hastily, "I know you are busy, but perhaps for them you—"

"You are so kind," replied Mona uncertainly. "But you haven't promised to do the one thing I want most. Will you arrange things for Barry?"

He glanced sharply toward her. "Change my will, you mean?" She nodded.

Townsend looked away. "One thing at a time, my dear," he said. It came into the girl's mind that not once had he ever called her "Mona." "One thing at a time," he repeated. "Today let's drop in to call on your family."

He moved forward to give the order to the chauffeur but Mona stopped him. "Maybe I'd better telephone first," she said, trying to hide her confusion. "You know it will be a great event for Mother."

"Why, of course. We'll telephone then," Jackson, will you stop at the next corner?"

MONA was to discover that her husband fitted in with the life of the Moran household beyond her most optimistic expectations. After their first visit when Ma had hurried into her room all eyes and with a single sweep, cleared up "that trash of Kitty's" from the dining room table, when Dad had apologized for his lack of a shave and Mona herself had tried not to show her nervousness, the Townsends came often to the Third Avenue flat.

It seemed strange, indeed, to Mona to see that her husband, with his splendidly erect carriage and distinguished air, was really little younger than her father. The two men had, it seemed, skated on the same park pond long years before.

Kitty admired her brother-in-law and told Isabel Flynn she was almost tempted to call him "John."

That was the name by which Mona addressed her husband in the presence of his family. With a little tact they had succeeded admirably in presenting a picture of complete happy married life. Even Ma's sharp eyes failed to detect any variance from the usual picture of domestic harmony.

Ma, in fact, was deeply impressed by Mona's "fine man." She would scurry about serving the inevitable tea—in this case now, at Mona's gentle insistence—with delicate slices of lemon. Once the Townsends started to dinner and Mona was pleased and even touched to observe her husband's ease in the stuffy little dining room where the obviously "company dinner" of not and heavy foods was spread before him.

THE next came the "grand day" as Mrs. Moran expressed it when the family piled into the big car and was whisked away to Long Island for a shore dinner because Mr. Moran had, in a conversation with his son-in-law, mentioned his

BASEBALL HERE—AND THERE
By ELVIE B. JACKSON

Whistling in the dark: How many of us have whistled to keep up our courage, when we walk through dark streets, in unfamiliar places, when we enter a silent unlighted house, when we open the closet door, in the dark, and whistle and "whistle, either to warn the intruder that might be lurking there, to scare away evil spirits, or bolster our spunk."

Whatever the reason, whistling in the dark is extended in many ways, and is used in various fashions to stiffen the resolution, the courage, and to exercise a potent influence for good and cheerfulness over one's own physical ill feeling.

We had a neighbor once who whistled hymns when standing at her pantry window, washing and drying her dishes, and strange as it may seem, those whistled airs, "Nearer My God to Thee," "Jesus Loves Me," "Near the Cross" and other old familiar strains, impressed the heart of a hearer who had long neglected church duties, and that brought a renewal of her church fellowship.

That woman was whistling in the dark, though she did not realize it.

The darky whistles in the dark, when he carries his rabbit's foot to ward disaster; the Sicilian is whispering in the dark, when he bends his right thumb in the palm of his hand, to ward off the evil eye.

People whistle in the dark, when they throw salt over the left shoulder, after having accidentally spilled some salt. The Catholic whistles in the dark, when he sees an evil thing, and with his hand draws the swift sign of the cross over his breast.

History tells us that magic among the Asiatic nations, carried with each cult, its own peculiar sign to ward off evil. In the days of the Puritan Fathers when witchcraft was believed in, "whistling in the dark" was resorted to by those who had fear of some persecution.

Our president Herbert Hoover is whistling in the dark, in his candidacy and announced platform, stride that crosses mug-wumpum, prohibition, certain classes of licensed liquor, and an anti-alcohol platform.

Walker, the mayor of New York city, is whistling in the dark, when he has his charming wife accompany him during his public appearances and radio speaking tours, and during the course of his trial for splitting fees.

We all are whistling in the dark, when we refuse to walk under a ladder, and we certainly whistle in the dark, when we won't start on a journey on the fatal 13th of the month, or start anything on Friday.

Whistling is one of the oldest accomplishments in the world, and one of the first human musical utterances.

Dutch Treat Party at Lyric.

The Lyric theatre is a pleasant retreat these warm afternoons and evenings for the women who are shopping, and who drop in to be cooled by the ice chilled air, and enjoy a moment of rest, and is very popular with the young people in the evening, as well as grown-ups, who have been assembling in informal little parties throughout the summer, and attending the show in a bunch.

Saturday evening a little group of young people gathered at the home of Miss Cecil Seale and made up a regular Lyric theatre party, for the introducing "Beauty and the Beast," which drew a crowded house both matinee and evening. The debutant meet of David Marnes, and the devastatingly charming attack on his affections by Mae Marsh, were thoroughly enjoyed.

Birthday Dinner Party.

Mrs. J. Dick Deck arranged a birthday dinner party, the last of the week, honoring her husband's birthday.

The round table was set in a private room at Comelie hotel, of which Mrs. and Mrs. Deck are assistant managers.

Places at table indicated with attractive cards, covers for Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Doughtie, Mr. W. A. Deck, Mrs. Joan Deck Dackin of New York city, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Dick Deck.

A mound of roses and ferns centered the table, and later a birthday cake, topped with twinkling tapers, held the honor place.

After dinner the party was joined by C. E. Condit, and two tables of bridge completed the evening, a very delightful one.

Entertaining Family Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kimble of Gorman, week-end visitors of Mr. and Mrs. E. McGinnery, were entertained with a swim and watermelon feast, at Lake Trianon, Olden, Saturday evening, with a picnic supper afterwards, enjoyed by the honor guests, host and hostess, and Mildred and Dorothy McGinnery.

Sunday evening, the family and their guests, enjoyed a picnic supper at the Lake Cicco dam, with a swim afterwards.

Mrs. Pitts gave the children the story of Christ in the Andes. A group of Sunbeam songs closed the morning.

Talented Young Musician.

Clara June Kimble, of Eastland, is substituting with the heavy accompaniments and music for the Methodist church services, during the absence of the regular pianist, Mrs. Joe A. Gibson, who has been away the past eight weeks.

Those attending the church have observed a small child of 12 or 13 years of age, perched on the piano stool in front of the big grand piano, and playing with ease and brilliancy, such heavy compositions as Mendelssohn, Grieg, or Bach in her preludes, offertory, or postlude numbers.

Clara June has studied piano only four years, and this under Wilda Drago, our famous Eastland artist.

Clara June Kimble has taken several prizes in state and district piano contests in Texas.
