A GOVERNOR FACE TO FACE WITH PAGANS

North Carolina is a very conservative state. Governor Gardner is a very conservative executive. According to the political economist, North Carolina in recent years has been among the best governed of all the American states.

Many mayors signed the petition; many bishops and leading churchmen signed it; three or four merchant princes signed it; three pious and God-fearing sons of the fourth estate, meaning prominent editorial personages, signed it.

North Carolina has made rapid strides in recent years. Its lawmakers have taken over the highways. They have taken over the public schools. They have made agriculture pay. They have made tobacco raising a marvelous industry.

FACES IN THE POLITICAL PICTURE

Senator William E. Borah, "the mystery man of republican politics" except on general election day, is vacationing in his mountain state. He told an interviewer that "the West is any man's fight."

Gen. Smedley D. Butler, known the wide world over as a fighting marine, made the race as a republican for the senatorial nomination in Pennsylvania. He was defeated by order of the republican bosses of the state.

AN ACID TEST OF INTELLIGENCE

Intelligence and ability are the same thing and both are inborn, according to Prof. W. McDougall, a noted psychologist of Great Britain. Indeed he said that the man with the highest intelligence is the man with the greatest number of inborn abilities.

A FORTUNE IN THE McCORMICK DIAMOND

Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick is in her grave. Appraisers of the estate are busy. They opened a safety deposit box of the woman who ruled as queen of Chicago society for 30 years. They found a collection of diamonds that originally cost her $5,000,000.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

A parody on "The Litanies of the Poilu," famous during the World War, might be of some encouragement to the coaches or the football fans during the early season.

Why Worry? Either you have a good team or you haven't.

If you have a good team you have nothing to worry about.

If you haven't a good team there are only two things to worry about.

Either the line or the backfield is weak.

If the backfield or line is not weak there is nothing to worry about.

If the line is weak there are only two things to worry about.

It will either be strong enough or it won't.

If it is strong enough there is nothing to worry about.

If it isn't strong enough there are only two things to worry about.

Either you will have a good enough backfield to make up for the weak line or you won't.

If the backfield is good enough there is nothing to worry about.

If the backfield is not good enough there are only two things to worry about.

Either you will win the district championship on breaks or you won't.

If you win the district championship there is nothing to worry about.

If you don't win you will have so much company you won't be alone.

So why worry?

The New York Yankees have won the American league title by taking their 100th game, thereby clinching the pennant.

And in the Texas league Beaumont and Dallas are in the play-off, each winning one half of the league season.

The winner of the play-off will represent the Texas league in the annual encounter with the winner of the Southern association.

Chatanooga will be the other team in the Dixie series, which is due to start as soon as the Dallas-Beaumont conflict is ended.

As far as we have noticed no definite date has been set for the opening of the World series, as yet, but it is to be much earlier this year than in past seasons.

Those who are used to a World series around Oct. 8 will get their thrills, if any, around the latter part of September this year, maybe.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON - The economy law with its salary cut, elimination of vacations with pay and many instances appears thus far to have had two observable effects on 650,000 federal employes involved:

1. It has depressed their morale and

2. Increased their efficiency.

The average federal worker is likely to be in a low state of mind these days for reasons which are by no means confined to the fact that he or she has had a salary cut.

For one thing, the government workers resent all the criticism and the wisecracks that have been directed against them since it first became imperative to cut federal expenses.

Although living along on a relatively low salary scale, they have been painted as a group of largely unnecessary drones, working on easy jobs and fattening off the populace.

MOST employes seem to be more angry over their loss of leave with pay than at the loss of pay. They used to get 30 working days off with pay and now they get 24 off without pay.

That's a loss of six days and next year all leave is likely to be cut to 15 days. The 30-day leave has always been considered the greatest single privilege of government work. It has applied principally is advising his customers that the "outlook at Ranger is very favorable, although the Bulldogs are not supposed to be as strong as Amarillo, which is the outstanding paper team of the state at this writing."

Amarillo, so reports say, has practically every man of the 1931 team back this year and the team is expected to show much improvement over that of 1931.

And the 1931 team was no slouch, though they did have a hard time nosing out the Bulldogs in the early season encounter, winning by a scant three points, and that in the last part of the game.

Speaking of a game being won in the last stanza reminds us of a class B game we saw in East Texas several years ago. Center was playing Tenaha and the score was 7 to 6 in favor of Center. There remained but three or four minutes to play and the ball was in Tenaha's possession on their own 20-yard line.

The play was started and one of the fast-stepping backs saw an opening in the line—maybe not wide enough to drive a truck through, but a hole, nevertheless.

So he went through and started for the goal line, pursued by a Center player. The ball-carrier was gaining ground on every stride. At the 20-yard line he gained about 15 yards on his carrier. Behind the Center man another Tenaha player, who gradually gained on the punter carrier. When the carrier reached the 10-yard line the Tenaha player had caught up with the Center man who was trying to stop the ball carrier.

At that time there was a distance probably 18 yards between the principals in the play, with one yard to go. Then the Tenaha player who had been chasing Center man, tripped the deft player, just as the ball went for a touchdown. The play ended with a score of 7 to 6, through a boneheaded play on the part of their opponents.

And unless we forget it, in row we will tell the story Center tells of the quartet-back won a game by sitting on the

CHAPTER I

The offices in the Equity Building are spacious and attractive. They have the atmosphere of successful business. The corner offices overlooking Tenth street are equipped with homogany furniture, easy chairs and convenient ash trays. A great glass-topped desk stands almost in the center of the deep rug. In spite of this atmosphere on a Friday afternoon at 10 minutes past one the air in Suite 216 was surcharged with something almost explosive.

"Mr. Ball from Blind River, eh?" Asper Delo's face was purple with anger. "Mr. Ball, you are a dirty Irish snoop!" The owner and operator of the Delo Timber Company sprang to his feet and moved ponderously around his desk.

The target of his wrath, a lean young man with a freckled nose and wide, firm mouth, looked the big boss over with amused gray eyes. He shoved his Stetson back as though to allow a shock of unruly, dark hair a little more freedom. It was plain that he was a man more accustomed to the saddle than to the soft carpets of Suite 216.

"I never knew a squarehead who could keep his temper," Stan Ball drawled with mock gravity.

Asper Delo smacked the glass top of his desk with a huge fist and exploded wrathfully. "You came here to insult me!" His words choked him.

"I came here to tell you the truth and I aim to get it out of my system," Stan Ball grinned, showing a set of even, white teeth. With an easy swing of his booted leg he seated himself upon the wide window ledge overlooking Tenth street.

Asper Delo's bony jaws worked until his blue eyes bulged but no words came.

"You have committed several murders and you are a prime thief," Stan Ball made the statement easily. As he spoke his eyes wandered down into the crowded street. He gazed thoughtfully at the tops of the hurrying cars while the timber king spluttered and strove to gain control of his voice.

A shiny limousine pulled up at the curb below. Stan's firm mouth twisted into a sneer as he watched a liveried driver stop out of the car and walk across the street with two very attentive companions. Old Asper Delo, two-fisted lumber man, had gone swanky with a town car and a uniformed driver.

The young man's thoughts were rudely interrupted. "You'll eat those words!" Asper Delo's nose was thrust almost into Stan Ball's face.

The lanky cowboy slid from the window ledge and his high-heeled boots clicked on the polished floor beside the rug. With a short laugh he roused himself and faced Asper Delo. The amused light left his eyes and they glistened as he showed the timber king away with a lean arm.

"Maybe you ever shot a man in the back yourself but your straw boss up at Three Rivers has hired it done. Not once but three times!" Stan Ball's thrust out aggressively. "You own that outfit and you're responsible." He leaned toward Asper Delo and his eyes were hard. "I'm going up there to get a report of your workings, an honest report—get that?" Stan pushed his hat back a little farther. "I came up here to tell you so that you could call your man, Swergin, and have him hire a breed to shoot me in the back."

Asper Delo was past words but he was not past action. In the days when he had run his own crews he had ruled with his fists. Now his Viking blood boiled within him. With a rasping roar he swung a fist at Stan Ball's chin.

That irritating young man sidestepped with lightning smoothness. Without seeming effort he slid in nearer and in a second Asper Delo was neatly tied with his own big arms holding themselves. Stan Ball shoved him back against the desk and his wicked grin returned.

"You will fight, won't you? But you haven't the sand to do your own killing." There was a taunting edge to the words.

Breathing heavily, Asper Delo collected himself. He was not licked by any means but he realized that he was no match for the lean youngster who faced him. He shook his fist impotently and retreated around his desk.

"You'll never set foot on the Three Rivers cuttings, you living whelp! We have that tract inspected and the timber checked by a government man and we don't allow fools meddling with our business." Asper gripped the top of his desk and his words jerked from between his teeth.

"Yes? Inspected and reported? Well, Mr. Delo, we are getting our own report and we are turning it over to the Department of the Interior. You game is up at Three Rivers." Turning upon his heel, Stan Ball left the room with the speechless timber king glaring after him.

Stan halted at the sidewalk outside the Equity Building, a smile twisting at the corners of his lips. He had given Asper Delo fair warning of what he was going to do. No doubt the timber king was already rushing a long-distance call through to his boss, Swergin, at Three Rivers, apprising him of the fact that another snoop was on his way to look the operations over.

"I bet the old hard-fist tells Swergin plenty," Stan thought as he fished into his pocket for the makings of a cigaret. "The old fire-eater would be a real timber baron if he weren't a crook."

Stan halted at the edge of the sidewalk beside the Delo town car. He frowned upon a package of "tailor-mades" that he had fished from his pocket. He'd have to get out of town or they would be selling him a suit of store clothes. The liveried driver of the big car was not at the wheel and his place had been taken by a heavy-set man who wore a driver's cap. Stan eyed the man for no reason at all except that he was trained to notice anything unusual. The fellow cast a fleeting glance past Stan and reached toward the dash of the car. An instant later a couple brushed against him. Stan was pushed rudely aside. As he moved he saw a carefully dressed young man hurriedly guiding a girl to the open door of the car. Stan stared at the window of the car as the door slammed shut. A pair of shapely ankles and two trim slippers rose above the sill. A man who had been crouching in the back of the car rose into view and bent over the girl. There was a flashing of kicking slippers and a muffled scream. Then the car leaped away from the curb.

It rocketed into the traffic like a mad thing but it did not get away before Stan Ball had leaped on the empty trunk rack behind the spare tire. The little curtain at the back window was up and he was able to crouch down so he would not be easily seen should it be lowered.

The car sped away, darting through the traffic while curious pedestrians grinned at the spectacle of a big town car dashing along with a cowboy riding the trunk rack. Stan grinned at three successive policemen who deferentially allowed the big car to cut through their warning signals. It was plain all the men on the beat knew Asper Delo's private limousine. Two of the officers waved threatening clubs at Stan and promptly dismissed him as an impudent hitch hiker. He had caught a glimpse of a tip-tilted little nose, a pair of red lips and a mass of brown hair as the girl had been rushed past him. He was sure he had a very diverting half hour ahead.

The car swerved and shot into a side street. As the traffic thinned its speed increased. The back curtain was raised a little but Stan could see no faces. For 10 minutes they raced west, then made a right turn and sped into a tree-lined avenue. From the avenue the driver swerved into a country lane and the dust began to roll up in clouds.

DONA DELO

Stan shut his eyes and clung to his precarious seat as the car lurched and bumped along. The dust was stifling but he grinned and turned on.

When the car turned again the dust clouds lessened and he opened his eyes. They were sliding along an old road choked with grass and weeds. Thick brush and willows crowded close on each side as though striving to close the trail. Their branches switched Stan with a stinging sharpness as he leaned out to see what was ahead. He ducked back when he saw that the road ended abruptly at the door of a dilapidated cabin.

Picking a thick clump of willows, he unloaded feet first and rolled into cover beside the road. Instantly he scrambled to his feet and peered after the car. A wide grin cracked through the dust around his mouth. The car was stopping at the door of the cabin. Both its doors swung open and the three men leaped out. Without delay they pulled the girl after them and rushed her into the cabin.

Stan slapped his belt with a sigh of regret. He had not thought he would have use for his gun in the city and had left it in a saddle pocket at the home ranch. Now he found himself about to tangle with three armed kidnapers. He slid back into the willows and headed for the cabin.

"Elegant!" he muttered as he thrust aside the long willow leaves and looked through them. Two of the thugs ran out of the cabin, a well-dressed fellow and a tall companion. They leaped into the big car and started the engine. With the motor racing madly they swung around and headed back down the narrow road. Stan gave them only a glance. "Now for the rescue of the fair one," he grinned and began a stealthy approach to the cabin.

He advanced upon a brush-covered side of the building and leaned forward to peer through a crack that had lost its chinking. What he saw made his lips pull tight and his eyes darken.

A slender girl sat on a backless chair facing a heavy-set man with beetling brows. The fellow had taken the only chair with a back for himself and was tatted back watching his captive with evident enjoyment. He was armed with a short, black automatic and looked capable of using it.

"You most likely won't get mused up none, lady. Leastwise not for a spell. When the boys get back with a flivver you can write a little note to your old man telling him to slip us 25 grand." The thug spat accurately through a knothole in the floor.

Stan Ball's hands closed hard as he shifted his eyes to see the girl. She was shaking her head and stamped her feet. Her hands were tied with a silk scarf and her mouth was gagged with a handkerchief but her blue eyes were uncovered and they were wide and angry while her nose were untipped up defiantly. Even in his haste to go to her aid Stan paused to note the finely chiseled nose and the curved throat exposed below it. The girl was not afraid, Stan noticed that at once, but she was furiously angry. Noiselessly he slid around to the door which stood open and invited.

The heavy-set thug had placed his chair close to the opening and his back was partly turned. It was evident that this enjoyment of his captive's irritation had diverted him from his job of watching the clearing and the road. Possibly a feeling of security made him lax. At any rate he was totally surprised as a lanky form shot through the open door and descended upon him.

Stan landed at the fellow's side at one leap. With a smashing blow to the butt of the ear he sent the kidnaper reeling from his chair. Grinning a hard smile, and with a boot ready to kick the automatic out of the ruffian's hand should he go for it, Stan Ball stood over the wilted man and waited for him to rise. The prostrate enemy failed to move a muscle. Stan's blow had been a knockout punch and what had looked fair to be a he-man fight had fizzled.

Gurgling sounds from the captive caused Stan to start guiltily. He sprang across the room and freed her. She did not faint or fall into his arms. Instead she stamped over to the prostrate thug and bent over him. With a savage jerk she relieved him of his gun. Stan Ball burst out laughing in gaud his freckled nose wrinkled until the brown spots danced.

"You have a way with gunmen, Ma'm." He bowed with a flourish of his wide hat, then held out his hand for the gun. "Better let a man from the mountains have that gat, Miss."

They faced each other for a second. Then the girl joined Stan's laugh with a soft alto voice. "It is really funny, isn't it?" She passed him the gun without hesitation.

"Great fun, but we better herd ourselves out of here,

"Better let a man from the mountains have that gat, Miss."

Miss——?" Stand was no glib-tongued modern youth. Women were beings to be met properly in his little world. Even such unusual circumstances did not alter the case.

"Delo. Dona Delo." They were at the door as she spoke.

Stan had his hat off again and was about to present himself but her words halted him abruptly. He looked upon her slender beauty and her wind-blown tan that had not come from city air and his lips parted as he realized who she was. "Old Asper's daughter—with all the old boy's spunk," he thought as he followed her outside without speaking.

Dona Delo did not notice this omission. She was still angry and excited. She wheeled and laid a small hand upon his arm. "You must not think me silly or unappreciative but I'm mad clear through. That cad, Graham, put it over on me that he was a college chum of Dudley's and got me out to the car. But for you I'd most likely have stayed tied up and Dad would have had to pay." She smiled up at him so radiantly that Stan became at once aware of his dust-covered clothing, his freckles and his shock of unruly hair.

"Nothing out of the way that I did," he stammered uneasily.

"How did you happen to be here?" She removed her hand but continued to smile.

Stan opened his mouth, then closed it and gripped her arm. "I hear a car coming. We'd better hit for cover." With a strong arm he pushed her into the willows.

He struck through the timber in the direction he remembered the highway to be. A half hour's breathless hiking brought them to a main road and Stan flagged a passing motorist. Dona was eager to get to a telephone and call her father before the two missing thugs could send him a note. They stopped at a lunch stand and filling station and Dona rushed inside with Stan at her heels.

Asper Delo was appraised of the kidnaping and rescue at the same time. Dona turned from the phone and called to Stan. "You haven't told me your name?"

"Stanley Black," Stan lied without batting a single freckle. He was not going to have Asper Delo hand him the keys to Three Rivers on a platter. He would get his report and make the old war horse like it.

Ten minutes later he was kicking himself for what he had done. Her anger gone, Dona Delo was a very alluring, feminine creature. As she munched a hot dog and sipped soda from a bottle Stan thought her the most attractive girl he had ever seen. He made up his mind to tell her so as to be able to see her again. Of course she was unattainable for one of his standing but he was sure she would be friendly; He just sat and looked at her for what seemed only a few minutes. She broke into his thoughts abruptly by leaping up.

"There's dad!" With a wave of her hand she darted outside.

Stan looked through the window and saw Asper Delo striding across the patch of gravel between two red pumps. He watched Dona smothered in her father's arms and saw her take his hand and lead him toward the lunch room. With a half smile at the turn of his luck Stan slipped through the back door, tossing a dollar on the counter as he hurried by.

"He's gone!" There was more than surprise in Dona's voice as she entered the lunch room with her father behind her.

"What's his name?" Asper Delo pulled a green-backed memo book from his pocket. "I'll mail him a check." He slumped down heavily beside one of the tables.

"His name is Stanley Black but I didn't ask his address." Dona was close to nervous tears now.

Old Asper grunted and wrote down the name. "He'll be underfoot from now on, don't worry. He and Dudley will be fighting a duel." He squeezed Dona's hand affectionately. This had been a hard day and he was tired.

Dona shook her head. "He's not that kind, Dad. I won't see him again unless I find him."

"Well, I haven't time to look him up now. I have to go to Three Rivers on business. A dirty-mouthed whipsnapper insulted me not two hours ago and I aim to settle with personally." Asper's spleen rose as he remembered his conversation with Mr. Ball of Blind River.

"But you have Swergin at Three Rivers and you've ways said he was your most efficient man! You have been up there since the work started. Why go now?" protested. She was more interested in locating Stanley Black and repaying him in a proper manner than in her father's rush off to an obscure timber camp. She would be just the person to handle Stanley Black, seemed to have many traits in common.

"Swergin is all right but this is a personal matter. Asper Delo's face began to purple again as he remembered.

"What was it all about?" Dona asked resignedly. It was clear that the Three Rivers affair would have to be settled before anything else could be considered.

"A whipsnapper nosing around for a report on the Three Rivers tract," Asper grunted.

"That is supervised timber. Why not let him help himself?" Dona was impatient.

"The Three Rivers tract is paying and it's been here right but that brat doesn't get to check it over or anything else! It is a tough stand to make a profit on. That's I have Swergin there." Suddenly Asper bent over and kissed Dona's hand. "I'll leave orders to find Mr. Black. He'll have him shipped out to the house tomorrow." He rose and held out his arm. "Now we must get back and report the mess to the police."

WILLIAM C. DEMING, president of the Cheyenne (Wyo.) Tribune-Leader, says:

"Most people think there is something mysterious about a newspaper and the manner in which it is assembled and prepared for the public. Perhaps that accounts for the fact that the average person thinks a newspaper is a paper regardless of its news service, where it is published or the total of its circulation.

"It is no exaggeration to say that there are but few men who cannot understand why an advertisement in the Denver Post or the Cheyenne Tribune costs more per line than an advertisement in the Pine Bluffs Post, for instance."

"Only the other day a young and inexperienced representative of a Colorado product called upon the Tribune-Leader and seemed perfectly amazed that our rate per inch is higher than that of the Loveland and Longmont weekly papers. To him an 'ad' is an 'ad,' regardless of circulation, which, as the Tribune-Leader has stated before, would mean that the New York Times or the Chicago Tribune, with their hundreds of thousands of readers, should publish a page ad for the same price as the Cheyenne Tribune.

"The circulation and good will and confidence of a community in established newspapers are not of a momentary growth. They are the result of years of effort and newspaper, for instance, grows in circulation and influence with the community it serves.

"When the present ownership and management of the Wyoming State Tribune, it had about 500 subscribers and less than eight employes. Today it has nearly 10,000 subscribers, which means that more than 30,000 people read it every day. The Wyoming Tribune likewise has more than 40 full-time employes and more than 40 news carriers. That means that, at least, 200 people in Cheyenne are supported wholly or in part by their positions with the Cheyenne-Leader and patronize Cheyenne business men.

"No, a newspaper is not the result of magic. Having listened to an old-fashioned campaigner of a member of the audience rushed up and exclaimed: 'Great! I call that the result of genius.' The speaker replied, 'I call it the result of hard work.'

"That's the way newspapers are made."

The children of today are the public of tomorrow. The better educated they are, whether they be children of the country or children of the city, it is the nation as a whole that benefits.

HERE-- AND THERE

By ELVIE H. JACKSON

Are you careless about the possibilities of fire in your home? There are so many ways in which fire can catch on, due to carelessness or ignorance on the part of the householder.

One of these is in leaving a box of matches uncovered on table or counter, so liable to reach the flame, and a flame would result from just one nibble of the box.

Another happens to be set on fire by the careless use of a cigarette. If the cigarette is not held in the hand, it may be blown away before the match is awakened.

There is the negligent hanging of a lamp. Many housekeepers have of late hung lamps with which clean furniture, on the floor, is in contact.

When the weather is hot, or it is a kitchen closet, then the fire is liable to be kindled by the careless use of a match.

Another way for the busy housekeeper to care for the polishing of the floor is to use a brush, rather than a broom, when not in use, to drive into the carpet, and hang up to dry.

Arcadia Now

Ann Harding, featured in "Unashamed," at the Arcadia today only.

"Unashamed" Is Engrossing Drama

Foibles of modern youth, infatuation versus reality, and suspense to the nth degree figure in "Unashamed," in which Bayard Veiller, famous author of "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and "The Thirteenth Chair," has created another thriller for the screen.

The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, at the Arcadia theatre Thursday and Friday, is remarkable not only for an outstanding characterization by Helen Twelvetrees, and excellent work by a splendid cast, but for the daring originality of the story.

The heroine is a millionaire's daughter, imbued with the modern youth's idea of "freedom." She is infatuated with a fortune hunter. When their marriage is forbidden the two court disgrace, trying to force consent. The brother, learning that his sister has been ruined, kills the lover and faces trial with sealed lips to protect her reputation. The girl must choose—her reputation or her brother's life.

Out of this is woven an amazing bit of dramatic writing, with suspense, mystery, comedy, heart interest, all worked into a remarkable piece of entertainment.

Informal Evening

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Dennison entertained informally for their daughter, Miss Raye Dennison, at their home in the Bean apartments Friday evening, with dancing to radio music.

Piano selections were given by Miss Dennison and tap dances by Miss Geraldine and Miss Maxine Francis.

A delicious buffet supper was served to Misses Lottie Rogers, Marie Pierce, Geraldine Francis, Maxine Francis, and Miss Jean Servors of Dallas, who was the guest of the Francis family; Truet Fulcher, Jimmie Watson, Joe Simmons, Jack Heath, and Carrol Allison.

Motored to Fort Worth

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Francis, Miss Geraldine and Maxine Francis, accompanied by their recent house guest Miss Jeanne Servors, motored to Fort Worth Friday for a short visit with Mrs. Harry Burton, who accompanied them to Dallas, where the entire party were guests of the Servors family from Sunday over Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis and their daughters returned home Tuesday, accompanied by Charles Johnson of Hillsboro, who met them in Dallas, and who will be the guest of his sister in Eastland, Mrs. Veon Howard, for several days.

Prominent College Man Visiting Here

Dick Rubotton of Brownwood, arrived Tuesday to remain over Thursday, the guest of his cousins, Winston and Pettit Castleberry, en route to Southern Methodist university.

Young Rubotton is president of the Lambda Chi fraternity and is editor of "Campus," the college journal.

Little Card Club

Informal Meeting. Mrs. Carl Angstadt was hostess to the Little Contract Bridge club, Tuesday at her home, entertaining with a noon luncheon, preceding the game, which occupied two tables.

A delicious plate luncheon was served at the round luncheon table, laid for 16 covers.

Mrs. P. G. Russell, club member, and Mrs. Neal Day, guest, for luncheon, did not stay for the afternoon.

Tables were occupied by Mrs. Alex Clarke, Mrs. Curtis A. Harbin, Mrs. Bryan Brelsford, Mrs. Theodore Ferguson, Mrs. Carl Angstadt, and Mrs. McMurray of Cisco, and club substitutes, Mrs. Walter I. Clark, and Mrs. L. E. Edwards.

New Plans for Nettopaw Group

The Nettopaw group of Camp Fire Girls will meet hereafter, beginning with this week, on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, instead of on their former day, Tuesday.

Immediately after school dismissal they will be met by their guardian, Mrs. Tom Harrell, at the junior high school building, where the sessions of the Nettopaw will be held.

This makes it very convenient for the girls in this group, most of whom are junior high students.

An interesting echo comes from the recent camp outing of the Nettopaw and Talahi group of girls.

All those camping were required by the counselors of Fort Worth to keep a record of the work in camp, and enter same neatly in a book. All Camp Fire Girls, camping or outing units must meet the same requirements and a certain number of the best of these reports, from each district are chosen by the counselors, and sent to the national headquarters for permanent exhibition.

The book of Miss Carolyn Cox was considered so excellent that it was chosen by the Camp Fire counselors of Fort Worth for this honor.

Officers Home Makers Class Plan Many Things.

The officers of the Home Makers class held their conference on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Baptist church, and attended by the president of the class, Mrs. William Sherriffs, the vice president, Mrs. E. R. Weatherford, and the following officers, Meses. Claud Maynard, C. T. Lucas, L. V. Simmonds, W. T. Morgan, and R. L. Slaughter.

A social was planned as the last affair of this nature that will terminate the present fiscal year of the Officers Home Makers class.

The social was set for the Tuesday evening following the fourth Sunday in September, and to be held at the home of Mrs. C. T. Lucas, with Mrs. Robert Webb, captain of group 2, as assistant hostess.

The social will honor the retiring officers of the class. New officers who assume their places the first Sunday in October are: teacher of class, Mrs. Clyde L. Garrett; president, Mrs. L. V. Simmonds; first vice president, Mrs. W. T. Morgan; second vice president, Mrs. Ardie Liles; third vice president, Mrs. Claud Maynard; fourth vice president, Mrs. O. E. Scott; assistant teacher, Mrs. Ben Ham-

Lucas

The group captains are to be appointed at the class meeting next Sunday in the Baptist church.

Following the announcement of the list of the incoming officers, the present, Mrs. Sherriffs, arranged that each one attending, Tuesday meeting, would visit those members who have been absent from the Sunday school class the past two or three Sundays.

Officers meeting will be held at 4 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon in the Baptist church.

Steak Fry and Movie

A delightful outing was enjoyed at the Eastland city park, by the members of the Tuesday Luncheon club, and a few of their invited guests, who had a steak fry at the park lodge at 7 o'clock with an evening of fun, which terminated in a movie party at the Connelley theatre, where "Miss Pinkerton" was enjoyed.

The outing was arranged by Mrs. James Horton and Mrs. B. M. Colie, in honor of Mrs. M. L. Keasler's guest, Miss Margaret Wilburn of Austin.

The combination supper with the juicy steaks provided a most delectable table, with salads, cakes and everything good to eat, carried by those going. The steaks were cooked by a master chef.

Personnel of party included Mr. and Mrs. James Horton, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Colie and daughter Mary Joe, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Colie, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Pipkin and two sons, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Haley and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Gray, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Keasler, Mrs. J. E. Hickman, Mrs. J. M. Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McDonald, and honoree, Mrs. Wilbur.

Young Woman's Association

Has Interesting Program. The Young Women's association met in the lower auditorium of the Baptist church, Tuesday evening with session opened by Miss Irene Williams, their president.

Reports of committees included that of a visit to a "shut-in," Mr. Clarke, to whom books were carried, and who was entertained with a program of songs, and talks.

The group will visit Miss Sallie Morris, who has not been well for some time, at 5:30 p. m., tomorrow.

A program was presented Tuesday evening, opening with the subject, "Into My Heart," the hymn, followed.

The subject, "The Trust—God's Gospel," was given by Miss Irene Williams.

"Translators Trustees of the Bible," Miss Aline Williams.

"The Feet of Our Trust in Our Personal Lives," Miss Lucile May.

"The Feet of Our Trust as a Denomination," Miss Mamie Armstrong.

The next meeting will be held two weeks hence at 7:30 p. m.

Those present, Meses. Ruth Butler, One Hunt, Lucile May, Modelle Donny, Mamie Armstrong, Hassie Graham, Irene Williams, Rowena Cook, Aline Williams, Thelma Wood, and Mrs. L. J. Lambert, counselor.

Training School at First Baptist Church Next Week

Beginning next Monday night, the First Baptist church will conduct training classes for all who are interested in the promotion of Sunday school work. The school will continue through Friday night. Scheduled to run through the first week in September, the school was postponed, pending the arrival of books at level for the course. A large attendance is anticipated from the first night, as interest appears to be running high.

Workers from the various churches in town are invited to take advantage of whatever benefits may be derived from the occasion.

The Sunday school of the church has made encouraging progress during the past year, in a few instances the attendance having almost equaled the entire membership of the church. Offerings have been such as to make the church a remarkable example of achievement, when it is remembered that the budget as a method of finance has been adhered to by the church only during the past year and a half.

With the strongest organization the Sunday school has ever had, and the work more thoroughly departmentized, the church will face the coming associational year with bright prospects still. Almost complete rearrangement of the church basement has been made recently through the voluntary services of some of the younger men of the church, which will greatly reinforce the work of several departments of the Sunday school.

The church has been facing a serious handicap during the past year or two because of prevailing economic conditions. But with the total indebtedness on the church building and street paving in front of the church reduced to less than $2,500 with small semi-annual payments, the congregation hopes to be able during the coming year to contribute a larger amount toward the support of the missionary endeavor of the denomination.

P-T-A Meeting Manifests Interest Among Patrons

The program rendered at Hodges Oak Park Ward school Tuesday afternoon through the arrangement of the Parent-Teacher association, with its president, Mrs. J. S. Reynolds in charge proved very interesting and profitable to every mother present.

The public health nurse, Mrs. George Armstrong, who was in charge of the lesson presented Dr. C. C. Craig, prominent Ranger dentist, who gave a clear and profitable talk on "The Proper Care for Children's Teeth."

To each member present Dr. Craig presented a guard list, especially prepared for this occasion.

With all officers in their respective places a business session composed the latter part of the hour. All details for fall and winter work are materializing nicely, and the present is grateful for the full co-operation given thus far.

It was decided and approved by the principal, Mr. P. O. Hatley, that all P-T-A sessions throughout the year be called to order promptly at 3:30 o'clock and last exactly one hour. Those who were unable to attend the meeting yesterday should reserve the next meeting day and enter into the constructive program planned for your child.

Mrs. Jamison and Mrs. Bryan Give Missionary Society Lesson

Mrs. Roy Jamison gave a complete and interesting lesson on the missionary study during the first period of the meeting Monday afternoon when 20 members of the Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church met at 3 o'clock.

With the topic of discussion completed Mrs. Gid J. Bryan took charge of the remainder of the hour supplying added enthusiasm with a well rounded lesson from the Bible.

A business session finished the hour at which time the co-leaders for the afternoon were in charge acting as supervisors during the absence of the president, Mrs. B. A. Tunnell.

Opening P-T-A Reception Is Outstanding Affair

From every indication Young Ward school will enjoy equally as enjoyable and successful term this year as they did during 1931 and perhaps more so after the pretty and well carried out reception and program given at the auditorium on Monday evening which was attended by approximately 150 parents and friends.

The setting for the stage and attractive auditorium had been lavishly decorated for the outstanding occasion by the splendid decorations, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Golden. Standing baskets and table centerpieces were brightly filled with mixed clusters touched with sprays of glensery entwined in effective designs.

The program was opened with the song, "America," Mrs. H. D. Reese, club president, in a well poised manner presented to the appreciative audience Mrs. C. E. Maddocks, who in her ever pleasing custom acted as toastmaster during the delightful program.

A number was perfectly given by Miss Nannie Katherine Newham at piano. After this selection Mrs. Maddocks, in turn introduced the principal, Mr. Jarvis, who added to the feature of the hour with a number of pleasing remarks and introduced the teachers who compose the school's personnel.

Mrs. F. A. Bell, well known in Ranger and throughout the state and who lives in the neighboring city of Thurber, offered an address of interest and impressively constructed. Mrs. Bell is president of district No. 1 of the Parent-Teacher and Child Study club associations.

A fitting address was heard from Prof. R. F. Holloway, closely followed with two solos given by Gaston Dixon, accompanied at the piano by his sister, Miss Beva Dixon. An outstanding favor was given by Miss Marjorie Maddocks, when she sang the P-T-A state song, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them."

Mrs. Maddocks took added pleasure in also presenting the board members for the year, namely Messrs. F. P. Brasler, R. S. Balch, A. N. Larson and Dr. Bob Hodges. Others holding prominent positions with the organization and individually introduced were P-T-A officers.

During the social drawing to a climax one of the most impressive meetings ever to have been held in the history of the P-T-A, refreshments were served, while the high school orchestra played.

Buffet Supper to Honor Younger Set

A delightful function in the form of a buffet supper will precede the dance at the Ranger Country club Friday evening in honor of the younger set when the Roy Jamesons entertain at their Elm street home.

Receiving with the host and hostess during the hour will be their son, Roy Jr., popular member of the social group.

"We needn't rush home—

my electric range has started dinner"

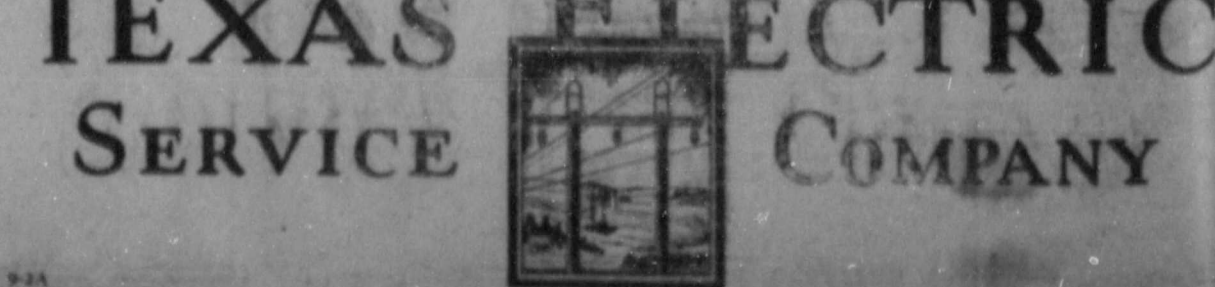

Fall shopping days are here and for the first time you needn't fret about dashing home in the middle of the afternoon to fuss and worry about dinner—all you need to do is to put the dinner in the oven early in the day, set the automatic controls and go on your way.

At the proper time, the heat comes on, the proper temperature is attained, the meal cooks itself perfectly and the heat turns off. When you return from downtown, the only thing left to do is to set the table and enjoy the food. Call for a demonstration of electric cookery—don't stay tied to your kitchen any longer.

Two Startling Appliance Bargains

The best buy of the season in electric percolators. Two standard makes, real $10.00 values, as low as $3.95. Others slightly higher. $3.95 and up
