DOLLY GANN AND THE MODERN MODE

Dolly Gann, the heavyweight sister of Brother Charlie, is shelling the woods on the Canadian border line. She visited Duluth, then she unfolded her great secret. She said, with a sunflower smile, "President Hoover has become not only the leader of our own country, but the whole world, upon whose advice the governments of other nations have repeatedly acted."

CALLEES KEEPER OF THE OPEN DOOR

General Calles is the keeper of THE OPEN DOOR in Mexico. He introduced Ex-President Rubio to the open door. Over the door is this inscription, "The way out."

PRESIDENT HOOVER ADVISES VIGOROUS DRIVE

President Hoover has advised the chairman of his national committee to launch a more vigorous drive the country over and to present the facts and issues which confront the nation to the electorate.

SPEAKING OF THE WOOL SITUATION

According to a Texas exchange, sheep and goat men are encouraged over the situation. They are urging growers not to jeopardize further possibility of price gains by shearing fall wool.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

GEORGE A. MARTIN, president of the Sherwin-Williams Paint Company, says: THAT a letter that deeply impressed me came to my desk today. It was from a mother in a typical American family.

Nothing will pay better dividends than a little investment of time and money now to protect property. And nothing will make you and your family feel so uplifted and cheerful.

"Move Over"

HERE--- AND THERE

By ELVIE H. JACKSON

The word "beauty" suggests beauty within itself. So many things are beautiful in this world, not only to the eye, but to the heart, the imagination, the mind, and the soul.

Beauty can be found in the lowliest places, and humblest occupations. Even in the prosaic duties that engross the housekeeping woman in her busy day, beauty may be found hand in hand with the sordid details of work.

Just outside the kitchen window, a trailing branch from the rose bush, taps gently against the pane. Lift your eyes from the task of paring potatoes, and through the clear glass in front of you, you will catch a glimpse of the distant blue sky, of the graceful darting butterfly, as he settles on the generous rose, that blushes against the window.

All about you beautiful things are to be seen and appreciated. What is there more lovely, than a shining, polished dish, fresh from its hot bath of suds and water, and sparkling from the care expended upon its surface?

Does this not make you think of the cleansing we can give our minds and hearts, by bathing our imaginations, between the leaves of some wonderful book, and polishing our thoughts, through the perusal and study of some fine poem?

We have been told that beauty is in the eye of the observer, but the poet did not go far enough, for beauty is in the heart of the observer.

The little urchin playing in his tattered garments, on the street curb, knows beauty.

In his untutored way he appreciates the graceful lines of the passing horse, its flowing freedom of movement, and spirited lift of the head. We are told that the merest ragamuffin in France can describe nearly all the paintings of the famous masters, that the lad is privileged to see in any public art gallery.

This lad has not been taught art, but he instinctively appreciates beauty, and knows the real thing when he sees it.

And what is there more beautiful to observe than the life and movement about us? The happy days of youth, with their lack of responsibility, and keen enjoyment of the moment, taking no care for the morrow.

It is beautiful thing to see, to those of us, who have responsibilities and must provide for possible happenings, and must take care for the morrow.

But even in this thought there is beauty; the beauty of the opportunity for another chance, for another day, to put forth another effort, to live up to those requirements, we make of ourselves, within ourselves.

What is there more beautiful, than to see your furniture brightened beneath its daily cleansing with the polishing cloth; to know that dust is removed, and that you are helping to keep clean air, free of dust and disease giving elements; that you are maintaining your home in spotless beauty, ready with its shining welcome for the chance visitors, and the loved members of your household.

Stand on your veranda some sombre fall evening and look up, upward at the sky; beauty, beauty, everywhere, greets you.

For the sun is sending his rays through layers of opalescent clouds that melt from rosy hues, to the blue of heaven and look, in their pearly radiance, like masses of shimmering jewels.

The tender sight of a young mother with her babe in her arms, has an appeal to the hearts of souls of artists, musicians, and authors.

Yes, beauty is not only in the eye of the beholder, but beauty stands ready with open hands, to shower blessings on all who may see, hear and thin kin terms of beauty.

Shakespeare says, "The uncertain glory of an April day, which now shows all the beauty of the sun, and by and by, a cloud takes all away."

Study the beautitudes: Nothing more beautiful has ever been written.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate, may have the privilege of causing the re-election of Herbert Hoover to the presidency.

If Hoover is re-elected the vote as between the two major parties is almost certain to be very close. The Socialist vote in any event is expected to be larger than ever before. It is not unlikely to exceed the popular plurality of the winning candidate.

But it is in the individual states, where a margin of a dozen votes is enough to swing the state's entire electoral vote one way or another, that one discerns the possibilities of a third party candidate.

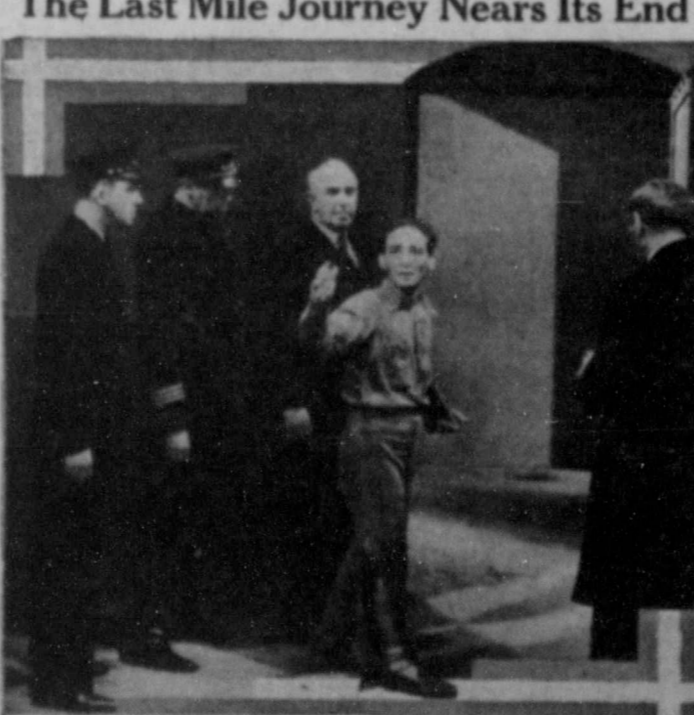

Startling as it may sound, a close contest might easily allow Mr. Willie Uphaw, the Prohibitionist candidate, to lick Mr. Hoover.

The chances are that most of Uphaw's votes normally would go to Hoover, who is drier than Roosevelt. And there is no question that most of the Thomas votes would go to Roosevelt if there were no Socialist ticket in the field.

If Hughes in 1916 could only have had 409 of the 789 votes polled by the Prohibitionist ticket in Minnesota he would have been president of the United States, for Minnesota's 12 electoral votes would have elected him by a margin of one.

Wilson won the state by a plurality of only 392 popular votes in a total of about 280,000 cast. A change of 197 votes, in other words, would have elected him.

The Last Mile Journey Nears Its End

Scene from "THE LAST MILE," at the Columbia Theatre, Ranger, today. The play is well known to Texans as it deals with one of its citizens who died in the electric chair at Huntsville.

Anti-Dance Law Is Repealed By One Texas Town

By United Press.

SEAGRAVES, Texas.—Repeal followed recommitment of the question as to whether dancing should be permitted in Seagraves.

A year ago, the city commission adopted an ordinance forbidding dancing within the city limits. The citizens, however, recently indicated a desire for repeal of the measure in a referendum.

Accordingly, the commission repealed the ordinance. The reason given was that the city is hosts to number of transients for whom there is no other form of entertainment available.

Arkansas Angler Uses Chewing Gum For Fish Bait

By United Press.

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—"Where there a will there's a way," "To this age old saying," J. C. Allen, Jr., attributes his success in fishing at Atkins Lake near here.

When Allen arrived at the lake he found he had no bait. So he pulled a wad of gum from his mouth, placed it on his hook and threw the line in the water.

"Well, gee," he said, "it just wasn't any time until that cork went under and I pulled a large white perch from the water."

The TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN PICTURES BY JOE K...

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

THE tiny lionesse grew mad 'cause Scouty painted it. It had big spots all o'er its body and you couldn't blame the beast.

Then Duncy grabbed it by the tail and, my, but it let out a wail. "Hey, don't do that," cried Coppy. "We should treat it nice, at least."

"Why, sure we should," snapped Windy. "Gee, it's just as cute as it can be. Let's rub the paint off right away. It looks an awful mess."

"I wonder, though, how we can get the spots off when the paint's still wet. We're going to have a lot of work before we're through, I guess."

AND then they heard the zoo man roar. "Gee, whiz, what are you laughing for?" asked Scouty, and the zoo man said, "I've played a trick on you."

"Those spots will easily rub out. You thought that you used paint, no doubt, but it was merely berry juice." The Tinies then laughed, too.

The zoo man soon said, "I will get some water and I'll gladly see you scrub the little animal. Won't that be very long?"

The Tinies had a lot of fun soon the scrubbing task was done. "We're through with you, lionesse," said Coppy. "Run along, won't that be very long?"

"WELL, well," cried Duncy, "look at that!" He pointed to a little cat that came up to drink of milk. "I'll bet it is a cat."

The cat began to take a drink and Duncy shortly said, "I'll make friends with the fellow. What a petting it will get."

He stroked the cat a little and then it seemed to throw a look at him right up toward Duncy and he was a frightened child.

"You'd better run," the zoo man cried, "or you'll have scratches your hide. You teased the lionesse. That's what it did."

CALL of the WEST BY R. G. MONTGOMERY

REGIS HERE TODAY STAN BALL, an agent for estate interests, faces ASPER DELO in his office. Asper is accused of killing men sent to check his timbering operations along Three Rivers. Ball announces he is making a personal check. DeLo says he will personally see that he does not make the check.

on his face and had not moved. With shaking hands she turned him over. His face was white and his lips parted in a blue line. When she moved him he groaned and tried to move but his eyes did not open. Dona tore at his jacket and pulled it open. A red stain met her gaze and she began to rip away his shirt. She found a ragged wound high in the shoulder. It was bleeding profusely and would have to be bandaged at once.

PASS CREEK canyon led down on the south side of Folly Mountain. A rugged rim divided the creek country from the timber lands of the DeLo Timber Company. None of the pine or spruce had been cut in the canyon and the trail was narrow, twisting in and around great trees and close under towering walls. Dona pushed the big roan as fast as he could travel with safety.

PANIC gripped her. It was plain that the roan above was not concerned with her at that instant. He was pushing his horse to head off her father. Dona strained her eyes to catch a glimpse of Asper but the dense growth held him in its green fastness. She sank her spurs into the roan's flanks and he responded with his last ounce of speed. Crashing through the brush Dona pulled her horse up with cruel sharpness. She could see her father ahead in the open. Facing him was a cowboy on a black horse. Both men had swung broadsides and were pulling their rifles free. It was plain that they intended to shoot it out.

She returned to her father's side and slumped down in the grass. The man on the black had all the advantage for he had ridden out prepared to shoot while Asper DeLo had been taken by surprise. Asper was struggling with his gun which seemed to have caught in the tangles of the saddle. Dona forced the roan to a dead stop and her carbine flashed up. The roan saw it and plunged. Here was something she had overlooked. She had failed to try her horse with a rifle. The roan was certainly gunshy and panicky. Some one had carelessly fired close to his head and had ruined him. Dona struggled to swing her rifle around and bring it down upon the black horse. The shot was a long one but she had to take a chance. Then the roan cut loose and began bucking. With grim anger Dona set the rifle rattle to the ground and reached for the saddle horn. She fought the roan savagely and without giving him a chance. This was no time for showmanship. This was a desperate stand with her father's life at stake.
