A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

PRIDE A PITFALL: Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.—Proverbs 16: 18.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING—FEED THE HUNGRY

In the provision against distress this winter the great private agencies of the country have been mobilized again. The generosity of our people has again come into evidence to a degree in which all America may take pride.

PARNELL AND FEDERAL FARM BOARD

Gov. Harvey Parnell of Arkansas is on the warpath. Parnell is a cotton grower. He is the executive of a cotton growing state. He has asked the governors of all cotton producing states to join a movement to ask repeal of the farm board act.

ANOTHER WARNING FROM CANADIANS

Canada is on the firing line now. Canadian authorities informed the United States government that Canadian cooperation in preventing liquor smuggling to this country may end if the American government persists in making 12-mile-limit seizures of foreign rum runners.

SPEAKING OF AUTO LICENSE AND FEES

An important organization, nationally speaking, is the American Automobile association. There is a Texas division of the association. It is said to have thousands of members, and is officered by representative citizens of the commonwealth.

Every citizen of your community is sort of a relative. As a unit they are responsible for what work is done and what is left undone.

There still seems to be quite a number of people in this country who are trying to make it appear that all our disabled war veterans are athletes and millionaires.

Fire Marshal Issues Warning For Christmas

AUSTIN.—Raymond S. Mauk, state fire marshal, has sounded a warning of the danger of fires during the Christmas holidays. His statement released today reads as follows:

"Be Careful, don't let fire mar your Christmas joy. Fire prevention, like charity, begins at home. Business men and merchants are so engrossed with the idea of Christmas rush and business that they are not careful of the danger of fire and they should be reminded that it pays to prevent fires. Also, the average home is filled with the Christmas Spirit and unless every precaution is taken, carelessness is likely to creep in and turn some house of merriment into a house of mourning.

"DO YOU KNOW: "That evergreen trees decorated with highly inflammable materials often ignite? "That cotton or lighted candles should never be placed on the Christmas tree?

"That the cotton beard of a Santa Claus frequently catches fire with serious results? "That the old yuletide custom of placing a lighted candle in the window near curtains has cost many a cloud of gloom?

"That small children should never be permitted to handle fireworks?

"That wrappings from Christmas packages should not be allowed to accumulate?

"That Christmas bonfires constitute a serious danger to both life and property?

"That it is dangerous to start grass fires at any time?"

"That toy electric trains, motors and other appliances should not be attached to light sockets until all fuses and connections are in perfect order?"

"That pennies or wire should never be used in replacing blown-out electric fuses?"

"That the fuse is the safety valve on your wiring system to protect you against fire?"

"That the Christmas holidays which should be a period of unmixed cheer, may become one of sadness because of the thoughtlessness of someone about fire hazards?"

"That about one fire out of every ten during the Christmas season results in a fatality?"

The UNITED Ranger, Texas

Washington Circus
David Wright

WASHINGTON, D. C.—If we have heard out of the trenches by Christmas, a miracle will have been performed. Many of the Elders and some of the web-foot gentry with the trimmed feathers, men who were sluced out of their seats and deposited high and dry on the sad shores of prison life by the receding Democratic tidal wave, are sore at the thought that was their undoing. There is now much muttering and mysterious moaning in various groups of these disappointed legislators. A few of them, figuring that their political goose is cooked, anyway, are busy with the receding Democratic tide, organizing filibusters, in sundry amendments and every possible trick and device to delay or prevent action.

At Arcadia Today Only

With the knowledge that he can never realize his dreams, Warner Baxter attempts to clear himself with Miriam Jordan, the woman he loves, in "Six Hours To Live," the new Fox Film production.

The occupant of the White House can do much to lighten the burden of the Washington correspondents and they on their part have it in their power to paint him larger than life. The public likes to believe that the Chief Executive of these United States stands a notch higher than ordinary men, and, if the President be genial, the press is more than willing to gratify the popular taste for hero-worship. So it behooves the President to pick his liaison officers with care. Before Grover Cleveland began his second term a correspondent said to him that he hoped he would choose a private secretary who would "be good to us boys." Cleveland replied: "I had a notion that I'd choose one who'll be good to me."

The air is filled with the merry tinkering of the cabinet-makers. Every second man you meet in hotel lobbies, departmental waiting rooms or in the office buildings where the members of the Senate and House think their deep thoughts, has his slate of sure swagers. Among the old-time wheelhorses of the Democracy, the names of Baker, Davis and Ritchie are often mentioned, and, in the opinion of this scribe, two at least of the trio would add strength to the administration. The lone exception? Figure that out for yourself. Al Smith, of course, has his eager partisans. You either feel that way or not where he is concerned. It is my guess that, since he cannot sit at the head of the table, he would decline a portfolio. Would Roosevelt make the offer? Judging by the way he waved the olive branch during the campaign, I think he would if he believed it essential to party harmony.

Another man who appears fitfully in these phantom cabinets is Owen D. Young. Of that gentleman's ability there is no question, but where he fits into the progressive program of the New Deal only a soothsayer could discover. Throughout his professional life he has served the Power Interests whom Franklin Roosevelt and his campaign allies, Senators Norris and Johnson, have so vigorously fought. Moreover, he was the creator and guiding spirit of the Radio Corporation of America, the Super-Trust upon which the Department of Justice has just performed a major operation. Personally, I think Roosevelt keeps his ear too near the ground to take on such a handicap. An ambassadorship, yes; Owen D. Young in diplomacy. Besides, he is rich.

RECEIVES 1913 POSTCARD.
LYNN, Mass.—Mrs. E. P. Reynolds' eyebrows arched in surprise when the letter carrier handed her a postcard depicting a group of Saugent college girls in bathing suits. The bathing beauties wore skirts and stockings and appeared altogether proper. The postmark disclosed that the card had been mailed Sept. 4, 1913.

Out of the Far West there has arisen a cloud, at present no bigger than a champagne cork, that may keep the beer boys in the trenches until March if not later. A little black cloud on the west horizon is caused by the steam and the heat given off by the California growers of wine grapes and the owners of California wine. Before the design is very old the California grapes may have grown big enough to cast its shadow over the entire country.

It reports reaching us from the land of the native son and the highplace of the realtor indicate that Mabel Walker Willebrand, despite the drumming she got at the hands of the Happy Warrior, is doing the sword dance and singing the torch song out in the wide open spaces, threatening to upset the beer truck unless her little duellings, the wine-grape growers, are given a place on the dripping belt wagon.

wines" with their 12 per cent alcohol because the irredentist dregs might gag on this thoroughly soaked morsel or the Supreme Court might point out the obvious fact that a beverage with 12 per cent alcohol cannot be made a soft drink by legislative fiat.

Perhaps you noticed that Attorney General Mitchell waited until after election before he announced the peaceful settlement of the federal attack on the radio monopoly. In Washington everybody had anticipated such an outcome of the suit to dissolve the monopoly as represented by the Radio Corporation of America. The actions of the monopoly had been too arrogant, too stupid, too defiant to be overlooked. Owing almost every worth-while radio patent, backed by a group of the largest, wealthiest corporations in the world, the Radio Corporation management believed that the radio industry was its oyster to be consumed raw, stewed, fried or scrambled to its pleasure. It invited prosecution—and got it. By the terms of the consent decree it practically admits its wrongdoings and promises to be decent and law-abiding in the future.

My esteemed colleagues who cover the three-ring political circus which winters here beside the Potomac are looking forward to brighter days. Although the incoming Roosevelt may not always be good for a story, as was his not now so distant cousin the strenuous T. R., he has a personality of such charm that compared with him Herbert Hoover and Calvin Coolidge appear like undertakers engaged in the practice of their profession. But that comparison really flatters Mr. Hoover. To find a President as ungracious and maladroit we should hark back to the second Harrison.

DERRICK SHADOWS

In a most interesting article in the December edition of The Matrix, official publication of Theta Sigma Phi for women in journalism, Dorothy Dix says "The first qualification for being a good newspaper woman is the constitution of an ox. No woman is of value to her paper who is always getting sick, or having colds, or nervous breakdowns, or who is temperamental." Now, Dix knows best, no doubt. Each profession includes within itself a number of characteristics by which it is popularly recognized: dignity in law, tact in medicine, charm in society, and now we are offered this further strength in journalism. The word temperamental has become an excuse for temper, selfish wants and nerves. Anything the columnist might say is readily accepted. There's your chance, men. If the lady friend has developed the art of using tears to her advantage, assure her she has journalistic ability and give her Mrs. Gilmer's requirements. It sounds ridiculous, but Dix can do a great deal with the weaker sex. Thirty years of consecutive talks have given her an undisputed name among writers.

It started around the corner, just a whispered belief. Someone, casting about for gossip, caught it in the air and passed it on, adding another thought to it. It made the town and finally came back to the man who started it, but it had so changed, so developed, he did not recognize it... but gasped in horror at the scandal story, and muttered, "Who would have thought it!" And someone was hurt, a wound that all the time of the ages could not erase, nor sympathy heal. It started around the corner, but it enveloped the town... the little corner could not hold it. Just idle words carelessly spoken... by you?

It is getting quite popular to kill one's self. The paper are filled with weird stories about those unfortunate ones who find life unbearable and end it with a convenient gun or knife or overdose

Let us hope fervently that history will not repeat itself, but the world, growing wiser with each new difficulty, will manage to steer clear of the breakers the next time.

HEROES ARE MADE - NOT BORN.

Week-end MURDER

GABRIELLE E. FORBUSH

BEGIN THERE TOMORROW

LINDA AVERILL follows her elderly cousin, AMON PLABODY, who was murdered when he fell from the second story balcony of the Averill's Long Island home because of a few words he spoke before his death. Linda rushes upstairs. Someone tries to strangle her and she faints.

There are four guests in the house—all suspects of the crime. They are: DR. STANLANDER, business associate of TOM AVERILL; CAPTAIN JIM VAN HANDBONE, Reagin; MARVIN PRATT, former editor of Linda's; and LIAN SHAI GINENSEY, Irish writer.

Since there is no evidence on which to base an arrest, Linda and Tom, her husband, agree they must keep the four men in the house until they have discovered who is guilty. They promise to take the case to an accident. They are aided in their plan when DR. BOYLE, medical examiner, sends word that everyone must remain until he has questioned them. Boyle is on a fishing trip and can not return for several hours.

Linda finds the towel with which the attempt was made to strangle her—identified by a number of sundown citizens. It was in Stanlander's bathroom. She overhears BOYLE, the maid, talking to Shaughnessy about a chair Holt has promised to loan her.

FLEEB STONER and DOLLY AVERILL come to play bridge for the evening. Linda talks to Stanlander about the happenings of the day—and Linda, that's really what I wanted to tell you.

"Yes—what?" "He's watching the bridge and may take in but hasn't so far. I've got to take a chance and beat it over there. But, Binks, something is up! As I went to the phone I saw the service door into the hall was open and automatically stopped to close it. Just then Rosie rushed down that little hallway and up the back stairs, crying as though her heart would break."

"Good heavens! What do you suppose—?" "I don't know and can't stop to find out. You've got two jobs on your hands—to keep him from following me and to get at Rosie and pump her. Come on inside."

THEY stood a moment at the threshold of the case-work door. The unlighted room looked dark by contrast with the outdoors where daylight still lingered.

"I'll hold him till you get back and then go upstairs. You won't be long?" It was both a question and a statement, and as they stepped across the sill, Tom started to answer, then halted as he almost collided with a figure standing just inside the door.

"Mr. Shaughnessy!—coming out on the terrace? That's right. There's actually a bit of breeze there."

Tossing, broad-shouldered and bulky, in the gloom of the indoor twilight, the Irishman looked at his host in silence. Linda sensed some tingling undercurrent of suspense in his momentary pause and his

ACID AIDS OIL PRODUCTION. BRECKENRIDGE, Texas.—Hydrochloric acid baths given oil wells in this area have resulted in great production increases, operators report. Wells that pumped but four or five barrels of oil daily increased their flow to between 200 and 300 barrels following the acid treatment.

Molasses Used to Combat Fruit Fly. SAN BENITO, Texas.—Molasses consumption has been increased by the government campaign to eradicate the Mexican fruit fly from citrus orchards in the Lower Rio Grande valley. In the campaign, extending over a period of about four months, a total of 41,935 gallons of molasses was used.

With the molasses, 18,000 pounds of nicotine sulphate was applied. A total of 3,645,034 trees were baited the first application and 3,255,480 the second. P. A. Haidale, U. S. department of agriculture official in charge of eradication work, believes the campaign has effectively exterminated the pest.
