NEW YORK DEATH RATE IN DEPRESSION YEAR

Wall Street is on Manhattan Island. New York is the financial city of the American world. Regardless of the depression and its ills, the New York City death rate for 1932 was the lowest in history. In 1931 the respective death and birth rates were 10.92 and 55.6. During the year just closed the general death rate was only 10.3 per 1000 population, and the infant mortality rate was 50.9 per cent per 1000 births.

SOUTH DAKOTA TAXPAYERS TOLD PLAIN FACTS

Attorney General M. O. Sharpe of South Dakota has made a report to his governor in which he declared that the failure of the rural credit system in the commonwealth now being liquidated at an estimated $38,000,000 loss to taxpayers, should be attributed primarily to the administrations of Gov. Peter Norbeck and W. H. McMasters.

HE WOULD CHLORFORM THE AGED

Dr. David Weschler, a famous medical scientist of the Bellevue hospital of New York, pot-shotted the intellectual aged as the old year was passing out. He declared the popular idea that old men are particularly fitted by wisdom and virility for leadership was largely a myth.

At present this country appears to be subjected to a wave of violent crime. Bank robberies and holdups are quite frequent, and if conditions do not improve the law-abiding citizen will find it necessary to pack a gun as a life preserver.

I note in an eastern city a movement to have weekly pay-days instead of monthly ones. In many sections the people would be glad to have any kind of pay-day.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

Every business man owes it to himself, to his business and to his community to take an active part in the building of the home city and the surrounding country.

Some people should think before they act. If they did they wouldn't lost much time in joining the home city builders.

The man who tries to get something for nothing usually gets nothing.

To think that a city can get something without co-operation is just a dream, and so long as that dream stays with them they will get no real development.

Nothing worth having can be secured without being worked for, traded for or bought and paid for.

A whole lot of people should think for themselves instead of having someone think for them.

Every community should in every way possible patronize, protect and encourage the business and industries they already have.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

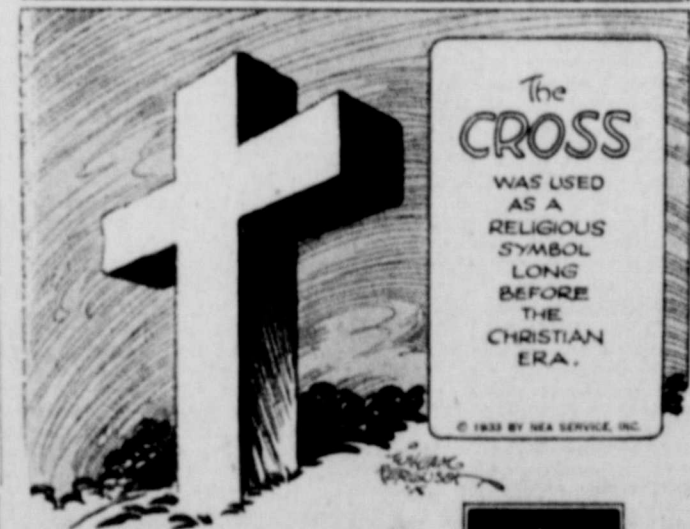

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—The theory that private business is vastly more efficient than the government is not faring as well as it did in the days when large corporations were making money hand over fist.

Argument as to that point is beginning all over again. The visit of President-elect Roosevelt and Senator Norris to Muscle Shoals, center of a long fight between advocates of government ownership and those of private operation, draws renewed attention to it.

So do such developments as the report of the Committee on Social Trends with its suggestion of social-economic planning and the popularization of technocracy with its inevitable vision of a controlled economic structure.

HERE--- AND THERE

By Elvie H. Jackson

These are desultory days, when the mind goes visiting, even though the body stays at home.

The yen for an open fireplace is evidenced and these damp, chilly mornings and evenings, remind the householder of the warmth and cheerfulness that an open fireplace brings, and the quick comfort obtained when the sparkling crackle of the flames from the wood on the brick hearth snaps out.

Pictures can be painted and dreams visioned in the dancing blaze that in a neighborly friend within itself, even in an untenanted room.

Here come the cries of children; they are piling bricks, in readiness for the workmen, who has been taking them off the chimney, preparatory to making over the flue on south side of the Walter I. Clark residence, and building an open fireplace.

Such fun! All the kids in the neighborhood helping, scampering over the roof of the house like so many kittens; flinging down bricks, trundling bricks in wheelbarrows and yelling "intermission" during the breathing spells, when all hands took a resting space. Great place, the Clarks, full of young life and activity and always sure of a welcome.

An idle glance out of the Sunday window, reveals a startling glimpse of a most dignified black horse poised in a fenced trailer. The animal wears a self-conscious look, but stands quietly as the motor pulling the trailer flashes by.

Here dashes along Agnes Harwood Dayle, returning from Ranger in her car, and wishing the hangar was located in Eastland. Agnes has been doing flips, slants, and spirals in her Commandant over Ranger. At least that's what the terms sounded like. We are not aviation wise, but we do know a good pilot when we see one. Agnes has recently acquired the pilot honors, and is encouraged in her efforts for an aviation hangar for Eastland by the engineering department of aviation bureau of Fort Worth instructing her to take up the hangar problem with the engineering department in Washington, and then meet with the Eastland citizens and present her plan.

Eastland is going to lose clever Luther Thomas, who has been instructing Agnes and Bob Martin in the ways of aviation. Thomas likes Eastland and has known her since August. He says young Bob is practically ready for his examination for pilot license. He will be one of the youngest pilots in this section of the state, and is a natural aviation mechanic.

Eastland high and the high school hill is all dressed up, and no place to go; the R. F. C. certainly put a new dress on the building, grounds, and streets approaching the campus.

No wonder the boys and girls are feeling pert, and the school clubs taking on new life and ambition.

One of the busiest clubs, the boys Literary club, boasts a membership from all four classes. Miss Lesbia Word is the patient and able director, and her word is law to the boys headed by Keith McLaughlin, president; Eugene Haynes, vice president, and Bob Martin, secretary.

This active organization meets each week, now that flu, Christmas, New Year's, and vacation are things of the past (perhaps).

The Girls Literary club, also directed by Miss Word, who is a very busy and competent lady with divergent tastes, has L. G. Tucker, the president, and Merline Braxton for secretary. Bessie Marlow was president, but she got so busy with literary duties that she side-stepped the honor.

The Debating club is doing some tall work guided by Prof. George Taylor. Eastland is due to hear some new ideas and arguments pretty soon. Curtis Terrell, president of the club; Gilbert Clark, vice president, and Frank Hatten, secretary, are practicing on their families, and unprotected neighbors, to good advantage.

The essay contest workers are doing some hard thinking, guided by the capable Miss Verma Johnson, who will not let her flock stray far afield. Pencils are being nibbled, ears pulled, and flax brushed; and sweater necks yanked in the throes of composition by Florence Perkins, Barbara Ann Arnold, Ellen Pearson, Joan Johnson, Eleanor Ruth Ferguson, Elva Lee Jones, and Thelma Nabors.

Yes, here and there, we catch glimpses of what our little world is doing.

Robbery Insurance Rates Given Hike

By United Press. FORT WORTH—Bandits will cause Texas financiers to pay heavily for robbery insurance during 1933.

Insurers have increased their rates to banks from $1 to $15 per $1,000 for the first $10,000 protection, according to Walter H. Wallerich, assistant vice president of the First National bank here.

Increased rates ordered by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, which embraces most of the bank holdup insurance writers, were based on the expectation 1933 robberies will exceed the high record of 1932.

During the past year, according to the American Bankers association, 631 banks were robbed with a gross loss of $3,385,117.

Casualties numbered 38 gunmen, two bank customers and nine peace officers killed, 124 persons wounded.

Increases in bank robberies, if any, probably will center in smaller towns.

SPOTLIGHT

BEGIN HERE TODAY Sheila Shayne, 18, whose parents were well known vaudeville actors, is in New York looking for a job. Sheila is a dancer. In spite of the fact she has spent almost her entire life on the stage her ambition is to marry and have a home like those she has seen in small towns in which she has played.

On a few hours' notice she is hired to take the place of Daisy Gleason, another dancer, who has sprained an ankle. Sheila goes to Joe Paris' office "Tin Pan Alley" to rehearse. There she meets Trevor Lane and Dick Stanley, both rich. Lane asks Sheila to dance at a party he is giving but she refuses, knowing that after a day of rehearsing and the performance that night she will be too tired.

She goes to the theater and there meets Phil Short, an old acquaintance. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VII Sheila was glad to see someone she knew—even an old sweetheart like Phil Short. A sweetheart who, as a matter of fact, had dropped her suddenly without warning. Why had Phil stopped coming to see her? Why had he stopped telephoning? Sheila had never known.

As nonchalantly as though nothing had happened, as though he had seen her only a few days before, Phil stood there. Well, nothing had happened, really. After what the most caustic observer would have called a rush Phil had simply disappeared.

Perhaps he had had a bad year, though now he seemed prosperous. Saxophonists are well paid even in off-seasons. And Phil himself had once pointed out that it isn't what an actor earns but what he saves that counts. Living had become cheaper, her.

In spite of the hearty greeting and the nonchalant manner, Sheila saw almost at once that Phil wore a harassed look. Even with an old score to pay off, she felt sorry for him.

"So you're taking Daisy's place?" he was saying. "That's fine, Sheila. I've often wondered what you were doing."

"Wasn't the telephone working down your way?" she asked, half vexed, half laughing.

"I couldn't call you," Phil began. "Daisy had a car accident."

"But that doesn't mean I didn't think about you," he said. "Well, thoughts keep a person warm in the winter," was her response, the caustic phrase borrowed from Ma. Lowell. Then Sheila related her own dinner with you. We can't be long, though."

"There's a little place near," Phil explained.

During the dinner he explained other things. Upon leaving Ma Lowell's dining room, Phil had married. Yes, married. His face clouded a trifle as he said the word, and it was evident that the marriage was not, for some reason, a happy one. He was vague about it. The girl's name was Mildred. She came from his hometown—somewhere near Des Moines.

Just now, with conditions as they were, Mildred was living with Phil's parents. Sheila gathered that the daughter-in-law—strangely enough—had a more desirable place in the hearts of the Short family than did the son.

"The folks think the world and all of Missy," was the way Phil put it.

The dinner was excellent, though hurried. Sheila ordered lightly, as Phil did also, for both the performance to think of. The act would go on in three-quarters of an hour.

The young man was friendly, agreeable. It was nice to see Phil again. In show business one couldn't always account for sudden departures—failures to explain, omitted farewells. By the time she reached the dressing room Sheila felt rather friendly toward her old admirer and a little sorry for Mildred. Though his attitude toward Sheila, though his above reproach, their scars, energetically passing, their scars, their classic robes in pastel shades tossed about in confusion. They talked a great deal, completely ignoring the others.

Back in the dressing room, the "arty dancers," as Lottie had somewhat scornfully dubbed them, had returned from a half hour's energetic posing. Their scarves, their classic robes in pastel shades tossed about in confusion. They talked a great deal, completely ignoring the others.

Sheila stood in the wings. Roscoe waved his baton. Phil nodded and the band crashed into melody. Two bars. Three bars. How did it go? Oh—this way! Sheila ran on. Now she was dancing! Dancing to a full house, too. "Don't

SPOTLIGHT

The art dancers, billed as the "Classic Nine," were not regular troupeurs. That is, they were not regularly booked, but instead were trying out a new number. It was soon clear that all of them were down on their luck, stretching every penny as far as it would possibly go.

Lottie confided to Sheila, busy with her cosmetic pan, that the only good number in the "Classic Nine's" act was a scarf dance done by the two little blonds. Lottie was a blond too, but there was a difference. The two youthful dancers had honey-colored hair which obviously grew that way without benefit of art or fake that last turn there, Baby!" She could still hear Bill Brady's admonishing tone, still hear his "ta-ta, ta-ta!" Sheila didn't fake the turn. It was glorious. Skimming like a bit of thistledown. Dancing on a breath of wind.

Across the stage, then back again, this time progressing slowly. "Hands crossing in front, head bent just a bit, feet flying. She had it down pat! Tum-tum-tum-tum! Tum-tum-tum-tum!

Now a run up the stage, a few steps around Roscoe, who beamed as she skimmed past him, his baton flicking in approval. She darted toward him, whisked away coquettishly as Bill had taught fluttered toward him on her toes, smiling, bowing. They advanced toward the footlights, bowed to the house, to each other, her finger tip in his moist, fat palm.

Applause, loud, clamorous, insistent. It broke in sudden gusts, now here, now there, and rippled over the entire house. Another tornado as Sheila stood still. Was she going to dance an encore? Bowing again, a low sweeping, skipping bow. Sheila ran off to change for the next number. But not before she had seen the man in the front row who was still applauding vigorously.

Sheila had seen him! There in correct evening attire, a strange sight in that cozy little neighborhood house, sat Dick Stanley. He was alone.

Wedding Unites Two Popular Young People.

Carl Foster of Dallas, son of Mrs. J. D. Foster of Flatwood, and Miss Joyce Quinn of this city, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gay Quinn, were married Sunday morning in the First Christian church in Ciseo, by the former pastor of the bride, Rev. Moore, at one time pastor of the First Christian church of Eastland.

The happy young couple were accompanied by intimate friends from Eastland, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Dean Allen, Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stansell.

The bride wore a handsome going-away suit in periwinkle blue with black accessories and black hat, and carried a beautiful bouquet of bride's roses.

Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left for Dallas, their future home.

The former Miss Quinn is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gray Quinn, and came to Eastland with her parents 12 years ago, when Mr. Quinn assisted in the erection of the Texas Electric Service company power plant at Leon lake, and in whose employ he has remained.

Miss Quinn graduated from Eastland high school in 1930 and returned home last August from the Woodbury college in Los Angeles, Calif., following a business course of a year.

She is a popular member of the younger set, and has a large circle of friends, who extend their congratulations.

Mr. Foster was formerly with the Figgly Wigly of Eastland and is now with that company in Dallas.

They will go immediately to their apartment, secured some time ago and began their honeymooning in this, the happy new year.

Saturday Night Class Party.

The Lorraine Taylor Sunday school class of the Methodist church enjoyed a pleasant social at home of Miss Taylor Saturday night when games, contests, and music were the informal diversions.

At close of the charming evening Miss Taylor served a dainty lunch of salad, pimento cheese sandwiches, and coffee with whipped cream, topped. Plate favors were were Cinderella slippers. Those present were Misses Betty Perkins, Joyce Newman, Betty Stire, Joan Johnson, Carolyn Doss, Ina Ruth Hale, Virginia Stewart, Dorothy Sparr, and Miss Lorraine Taylor.

Junior Missionary Auxiliary of Baptist Church.

The Junior Missionary Auxiliary of the Baptist church had a most interesting meeting Saturday morning, with an assembly period, and song service, led by Mrs. W. J. Herrington.

A circle assembly developed the subject, "Game," and repeated in unison, "My ship came in and was loaded with 'R'." Each child was privileged to guess what "R" stood for, and each described a different nation, starting with China, and taking up the different countries.

A devotional based on the word "nation" was interestingly led by Mrs. Herrington. Individual references were searched by the children, and were read in connection.

"Lost That Tired and Weary Feeling"

"I was tired all the time; had misery in back and sides that kept me feeling bad; was in a nervous and weakening condition," writes Mrs. H. H. Penn, of Portsmouth, Ohio. "I lost in weight until I was very thin. During girlhood, mother had given me Cardui and it helped me so much that I decided to take it again. I took several bottles and my strength began to return, and I gained in weight. Soon I lost that tired and weary feeling. Cardui did me a great deal of good."

Take Cardui to improve the general tone of the system in cases of run-down health and "tired nervousness." Women have found in Cardui that Cardui helps them to overcome pain and make the monthly periods easier.

Reveal Triangle in Kidnap-Murder

Chicago authorities believe they are nearing a solution in the mysterious murder of Captain Edwin Schildhauer, school bandmaster. Mrs. Frances Schildhauer, his widow, shown above with her mother, Mrs. Louise Birkinshaw, faintly eight times during questioning by detectives. Carl Bradberry, former deputy sheriff, lower right, volunteered to tell all he knew of the domestic relations of the Schildhauers. It was learned Schildhauer had found his pajama-clad wife in Bradberry's apartment. Paul Walton, lower left, Chicago attorney, also is sought for questioning by police, who were told he had been friendly with Mrs. Schildhauer. The bandmaster was kidnaped and shot in death Dec. 10.

Texas Has Already Reached Half Way Mark With Roads

AUSTIN.—Texas already has passed the half-way mark in her fight for good roads, it is revealed in 1932 figures released by E. J. Amery, state highway statistical engineer.

The state now has 3,956 miles of concrete and brick, as well as 6,809 miles of asphalt surfacing, or a total of 9,865 miles of paved roads. This is considerably more than half of the entire designated highway system, which covers 19,148 miles.

In the two-year fiscal period just closed, one-fifth of all the state's paved roads were laid. This included 1,769 miles of new concrete, or far more than the total amount up to that time, and 9,936 miles of surfaced types, an increase of nearly 50 per cent.

Officials of the Texas Good Roads association expressed jubilation over the record, especially since the brunt of the expense has been borne by the gasoline tax, through which the roads develop their own revenues. But they voiced a warning that this huge investment can go for naught if the people permit their legislators to cripple highway work by taking away more of its gas tax revenue.

"These roads must be maintained," said W. O. Huggins, president, "and we must build enough new ones to get our share of federal aid. We already pay the government more than the amount of this aid in the federal gasoline tax. If we don't match dollars and get it back, it will go to other states while we keep on paying it."

"We must keep for road work the amount the roads now get. This is only one-half the money developed through the gas tax. The taking away of any more of it will ruin the state's program. It will appeal to the people of the state to impress their legislators with this fact."

again undertaken during Birthday week, celebrated from March 11 to 17, when dress, health, manners and food will be demonstrated. The girls will work on these projects from now on, in preparation for an exhibit during Better Homes week.

Mrs. Harrell served delicious refreshments of apple sauce cake, and hot chocolate with marshmallow topping to Kathleen Cottingham, president of group; Helen Butler, Lurline Branner, Margaret Frye, Catherine Utz, Joyce Newmark, May Gates, and Elizabeth Ann Harrell.

Closing Demonstration of Pressure Cooker Entertains Many Guests

Judging from the many guests who were entertained at Montgomery Ward's local store, Saturday afternoon for the closing demonstration given on pressure cookers, there was several housewives and cooks who derived much benefit from having attended the demonstrations of valuable and impressive demonstrations.

A large number of discoveries were made even to those who are owners of the cookers and those who were not were soon seeing the wise investment. Mr. Devitt, in so pleasing in giving the food demonstrations and recipes it was indeed a pleasure to see one work so smoothly and quickly in a well and modernly equipped kitchen.

For those who might be interested in the Household Science Institute who favorably approve the method of pressure cooker lists in this month's edition a lovely recipe for fruit cake baked in a pressure cooker. The quality of fruit cake depends not only upon the perfect blending of the right proportion of ingredients that will produce the satisfying rich fruity flavor but also upon the perfect cooking of the cake so quotes Successful Home Making magazine.

No doubt there are a huge number of ladies who cook have discovered it is most difficult to bake good fruit cakes but many other pastries in an oven. Saturday demonstration was attended by a large number of appreciative and attentive visitors who are more than grateful to Mr. Harham, associates and Mr. Devitt for the week's instructive entertainment.

Some Technocrats Claims Refuted By Business Leaders

NEW YORK.—In advancing their theories that civilization is verging toward a breakdown because of the unlimited productive capacity of mankind, due to the machine age—and because the "price system" is incapable of coping with this situation—the technocrats have presented figures, charts, graphs, and formulas.

The "facts" are impressive—if they are facts. It is worthy of note the very figures presented by some technocrats have been challenged as inaccurate to the point of absurdity, by some of the industrialists whose businesses have been analyzed by the Columbia group.

Technocracy says "a modern straight-line conous brick plant will produce 400,000 brick a day per man." R. S. Tilden, New Jersey Brick association engineer, says few plants in this country, even of the best design, can produce more than 2,000. Other similar statements have been assailed by trade magazines such as "Iron Age," and by textile mill operators.

On the other hand, many of the facts elicited by technocracy are readily susceptible of proof, and are of unquestioned importance in any consideration of the present state of the economic world.

The technocrats say they have studied 3,000 leading commodities, ranging from wheat and cotton to steel and power; that several hundred charts have been completed, tracing the energy used in production of each commodity.

These charts reveals they say, the decline in man power needed to produce a unit of each commodity, from year to year. They embrace the total amount of installed horsepower for each unit, and the total horsepower for the entire industry.

The conclusions reached by these charts are these:
The United States today has installed horsepower for 1,000,000,000 engines for doing work. Operating at capacity these machines can produce 50 times the amount of products that could be made by the entire population of the world, by human labor alone.

With these machines, we would produce sufficient for the consumption of our population if every adult from 25 to 45 years of age should work 16 hours a week.

Other theorists, basing their conclusions on a lesser pretense, through analysis, arrived at the same decision years ago. Thilo Thorstein Bellen, in 1911 enunciated the same principle. Fred Henderson, another reputed economist, has agreed to similar conclusions.

But having accepted these conclusions, the technocrats have not the same decision years ago. Thilo Thorstein Bellen, in 1911 enunciated the same principle. Fred Henderson, another reputed economist, has agreed to similar conclusions.
