CARTER GLASS PUTS OVER HIS BANKING BILL

Sen. Carter Glass is a former secretary of the treasury. He is one of the high aces of Southern democracy. He is a dry pro and a consistent democratic regular. His banking bill was passed by the senate with less than four hours of debate. It carried provisions for both emergency and permanent insurance on bank deposits and calls for the severance of banking and investment business. That is, it would divorce national banks and their affiliates. Now the bill is in the hands of the conferees. This committee will reconcile differences between the senate bill and the measure passed by the house.

Incidentally, the two are similar except for slight differences in deposit insurance provision.

An amendment providing or the insurance of deposits in all banks for one year, beginning July 1, after which time the last permanent insurance fund would begin to operate was put into the bill. It provides for the insurance of deposits up to $2500 in federal reserve member banks and state banks certified by state authorities to be solvent. The Glass insurance clause to become operative July 1, 1934, creates a corporation with assets approaching $2,000,000,000 to guard deposits in reserve member banks and to speed up the liquidation of closed institutions.

Away down here in Texas the veto of the Hopkins bill placed state banks in a sorry plight. Those whose officials desire to bring about liquidation and go out of business must close their doors before they are permitted to liquidate. William Jennings Bryan in his lifetime was the champion of what was known as "the guarantee deposit law." It was given the acid test in Nebraska. It was a rank failure. It was given the acid test in Oklahoma. What happened to it is ancient history. It was a failure and the lawmakers repealed it. Texas tried the Bryan plan. It cost efficient and successful bankers a vast deal of money to meet the losses of the inefficient or the crooked or the indifferent who invaded the state banking field.

Huey P. Long voted for the Glass bill as amended. He led the filibuster against the Glass measure last year. He has an alibi. He said he favored and voted for the new measure because it contained "protection for the little banks which the former bill didn't have." Well, maybe the Glass protective guarantee measure will succeed regardless of the colossal failure of the Bryan plan adopted by the lawmakers of a number of American commonwealths.

"MILK IS MAN'S FIRST FOOD"

"Milk is man's first food and, throughout life, milk and milk products are considered man's chief food," declared Commissioner of Agriculture J. E. McDonald. "Milk is one of the foods that has the highest quality when consumed in the immediate section where produced unless adequate refrigeration is provided for during the period of transportation. Very wisely our state and city officials have established milk laws which require that milk which is to be sold to the people should be produced under very sanitary requirements. These requirements prescribe the manner in which dairy barns and milkhouses must be constructed and maintained. They also require the dairy herds be regularly tubercular tested."

Commissioner McDonald's verdict, speaking of needed legislation: "In order to get the highest quality of milk to the consumer at the lowest price consistent with good business, there must exist between the consumer and distributor complete harmony and accord." Commissioner McDonald appears to be in hearty accord with the New Deal gospel given to the American people by the president of the United States.

A whole lot of people seem to forget that everything comes from the land in the first place, that agriculture is a basic industry and that the prosperity of the country cannot be put on a stable foundation unless agriculture is prosperous.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT great progress, increased population, industrial and commercial development and prosperity are ahead for the city that is wide-awake and whose citizens are up and doing all the time.

The speed of this progress depends wholly on the local people. Keep ALIVE!

Every city must think ahead; it must plan for the future and have a vision of what can be accomplished.

Now is the time to build a greater city, to make it greater for both the present and the future. There is no progress in sight for the city that builds for today only and does not look for its future needs and requirements.

No city would be what it is today if the early settlers had not built for the future.

The city that keeps well-thought out plans for the future constantly before it is the city that amounts to something today and will be a bigger, busier city in the days to come.
