Sunday School Lesson

Pictures of Silver

By BEULAH CHICKS

The great room with its U-shaped table, reclining couches, basin and towel near the door was eloquent in its solemn grandeur as though a spirit of great prophecy brooded over it, expectantly awaiting its moment of fulfillment.

Jesus and the 12 disciples entered and took their places on the couches. Jesus was the host and in place of the servant took the towel and basin and began to wash their feet, dusty from the walk from Bethany to Jerusalem.

"He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief," seemed to whisper the brooding spirit of prophecy.

He resumed his place at the table, thought to be between John and Judas; deepened their feeling of sorrow; for they were ashamed of their disputings by the courtesy of Jesus in washing their feet, by telling them of one among them who would betray him.

As they dipped their little round cakes of unleavened bread into the sauce made of vinegar, figs, dates, almonds and spice, "they begin to say unto him one by one, Is it I?"

"But woe unto that man through whom the Son of Man is betrayed!" is the audible voice of prophecy spoken through the lips of the Son of Man.

Understanding their manner and hearts, and suffering in his own heart, they took the bread and blessed it, likewise the cup, explaining that it was his body and the blood of the New Testament.

He showed them that his death was not accidental but was the purpose of God and his supreme sacrifice through which he wished to be remembered as the central part of his life.

This do in remembrance of me, Luke 22:19.

"He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter," was the anguished, almost audible whisper of prophecy as the great tones of the closing hymn found in Psalm 115-118 rung out doubtless led by the voice of the host, Jesus, singing praise.

"Thou art my God and I will praise thee; thou art my God, I will exalt thee."

"And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives."

Here in the great outdoors he tried to make them understand further prophecies and his resurrection; here impetuous Peter told him though everyone else in the world stumbled he would not.

How it must have added to the load of sorrow on the heart of Jesus, the betrayed of Judas, the denial of Peter; but he knew that the heart of Peter was true and asked him to go as a special guard with James and John as he went to his agony in the garden of Gethsemane.

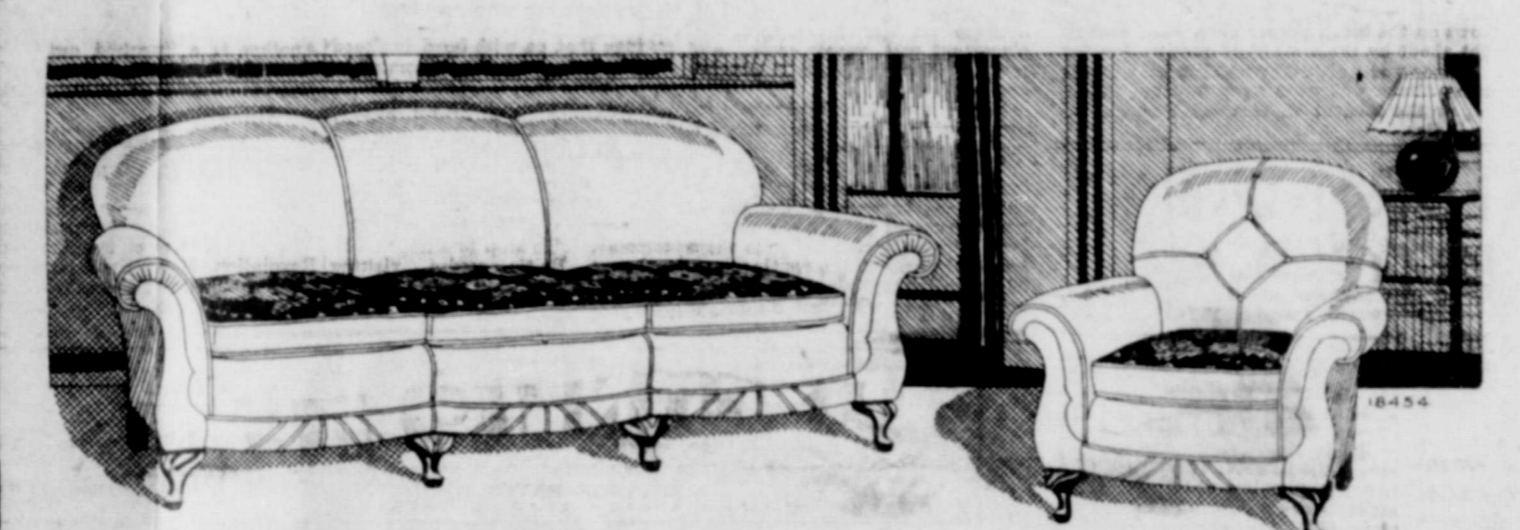

"He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised, for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed," echoed the voice of prophecy from hundreds of years before as Christ went into the shadows of this garden with old and gnarled olive trees.

Well, it certainly seems from the testimony that Banker Charles E. Mitchell is one of those fellows who owes a lot to his wife.

American Derby Next
Big Turf Attraction

CHICAGO.—With Mrs. Silas Mason's Head Play clearly established as the leading candidate for three-year-old honors on the race track, the next turf event of major importance will be the renewal of the ancient American Derby at Washington Park, on June 3.

Since Head Play lost that hair-line decision to Broker's Tip in the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs and then snatched his class with a breezing victory over a strong field in the rich Preakness at Pimlico, those who like to delve into history are recalling time-honored events of a musty past in connection with the American Derby.

For the second time Chicago will boast a World's Fair Derby. In 1893, just 30 years ago, a huge Columbian Exposition crowd thronged to the old Washington Park oval, a gay throng to see Snapper Garrison pilot Boundless under the wire in a thrilling struggle of its color and glory as it is a year after year.

"Garrison finish" was the phrase created by Snapper's ride Boundless that famous year. There was a delay at the post of one hour and 55 minutes, as starter Charley Pettengill struggled with the unwieldy field. It was a fearfully hot day and the mob of 55,000 that jammed the track that is now the site of a huge south side park fretted and fumed along with the horses as they kicked about at the post.

Time after time Pettengill lined up the field, only to see three or four fractious coils bounce off of each other. While all this was going on Garrison kept Boundless near the inner rail. He could sit there on the fence with one foot to east the weight off his front. He kept up this trick for about an hour when Pettengill finally flipped the barrier Garrison had Boundless off in full flight with the early leaders, Boundless was comparatively fresh for the long mile and one-half and around the track.

Boundless leaped into the lead with his long strides at the start mile. As they swept around into the stretch, St. Leonard and Clifford threatened. Although Boundless appeared to be tiring badly, Garrison leaned low over his charge's neck, applied spur and whip as they flew down to the finish line. Boundless had enough in reserve to withstand the challenge of his rivals.

Smiling Garrison rode Boundless back to the judges' stand and cooed the judges. He then rode Boundless to the center of the track, stood up on his back, and plucked the purse of gold from the neck stretched across the finish line, an old custom.

The custom might be renewed this year, when the fleetest of the three-year-olds run at new Washington Park, on the far south side of Chicago.

World's Gadget Makers To Meet And Show Wares

By United Press
DENVER, Colo.—The world's greatest gadgets will be exhibited here June 13-17.

Denver has been selected as the convention city for the 11th annual meeting of the National Inventors' congress, which is expected to bring out about 1,000 of America's leading inventors.

Everything from a self-starting toothpick to a dirigible will be on display.

O. J. Foster of Boise, Idaho, will show off an automatic grocery store. All the customer has to do is sit on a comfortable seat and select the groceries as they go galloping past on rotary shelves.

A zipper-controlled flying suit for women will be the contribution of Edith Foltz of Portland, Ore., the only woman governor of the National Aeronautical association.

The garment is a combination flying suit and street jacket that can be transformed by one motion of the hand.

Breakfast in San Francisco and dinner in New York will be explained by Charles R. Miner, considered one of the greatest authorities on dirigibles in America.

Miner has a plan that would enable dirigibles to attain a speed of 600 miles an hour.

Max Lowenthal, former associate of Thomas A. Edison, and inventor of the electric iron, will appear as a speaker. Herman Finko of St. Louis, who is noted for his development of gasoline engines and accessories for automobiles, is scheduled for an address.

LONG LOST MEDAL IS FOUND AFTER 14 YEARS
LITTLEFIELD, Texas.—Sixteen years ago Pat Boone, son of pioneer southwestern rancher, won a medal for fleetness of foot in a New Mexican high school meet.

Fourteen years ago Boone, then a cowboy employed at a dining vat vernal at Kenna, N. M., lost the medal. He offered $25 reward to no avail.

Recently Boone, now a city commissioner here, recovered the long-lost emblem. It bore the scars inflicted by many trampling bovine hoofs, but so far as Boone is concerned they enhance the medal's value.

The medal had been found by a living near the corral where Boone worked.

Concrete Roads Mean A Saving In Gasoline Cost

NEW YORK, June 2.—When road users become more fully aware of what happens to their gasoline tax and license fee payments, there will be a decided improvement in road building.

This declaration was made by E. M. Fleming, manager of the highways bureau of the Portland Cement association, which recently held its annual spring meeting here.

"Until recently, road building has been taken for granted," said Mr. Fleming to the association members. "The big job was to get rid of mud and dust and any sort of surfacing was accepted. But now with mud and dust largely eliminated on main highways, the objective of highway administrators is not only to reduce the cost of operating vehicles but to lower the cost of keeping roads in service.

"Most road users are aware of the cost of running their vehicles but unfortunately many do not realize that these costs can be greatly reduced by the construction of highways which bring more mileage per gallon of gas, less car repairing, and lowered road costs through reduction of road upkeep and road replacements.

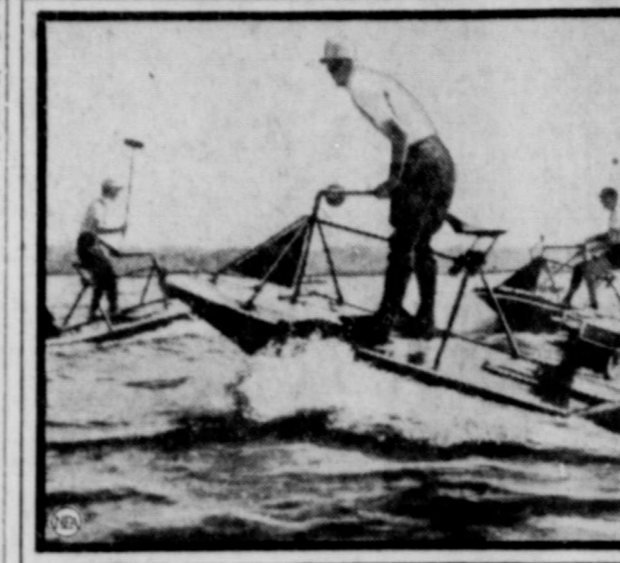

"Rather than think of car operating costs we must think of highway transportation costs, composed of both car items and road items. Road costs are largely, and in many cases, entirely, paid by motorists through gas taxes and license fees.

"Chief car operating costs are interest on car investment, replacement cost, repair costs, and routine operating costs, including gas, oil and tires.

"Road costs likewise include interest on the investment, rebuilding cost, and upkeep.

"Many, many times so-called low-cost roads are actually high-cost roads because of the yearly expenditure of large sums for upkeep and replacement. Also these roads may run on the routine costs of operating vehicles to a considerable figure with less miles per

Huerta's Death Is Still a Mystery

By United Press
EL PASO.—The mysterious death here of Victoriano Huerta, deposed president of Mexico, during the World War probably prevented invasion of the United States by German-supported Mexican rebels, residents here have learned from a book by a famous German spy.

A short while after Huerta had conspired with Capt. Franz Rintelen, author of the book, "The Dark Invader," in New York city he died here. Under terms outlined in the book, Germany was to supply funds and ammunition for Huerta's revolution to reclaim the Mexican presidency in return for Mexico's support in an American invasion.

Many tales abound as to how Huerta met death. One is that he was poisoned. Rintelen relates he was warned in New York, "You are being watched. Look out. Don't wait for Huerta. He has been poisoned."

Another version is that a mysterious man slashed him to death. Huerta's attorney, Tom Lea, insists the deposed president died a natural death.

FRESH fruit served in the simplest possible manner is the most desirable and most logical dessert for warm weather meals.

PERFECTION OF LUSCIOUS STRAWBERRIES is tempting when they are served in a border around a cone of snowy powdered sugar, and the fragrance of golden ripe pineapple cut in segments and served in the same fashion is most inviting.

But perfect fruit is not always in the market. With the less desirable fruits in order to serve attractive and seasonal desserts? These desserts make use of just such fruits in simple concoctions that are delicious and economical.

Sugared Cherries
Sugared cherries are a delicious dessert that the country housewife has used for years when there were extra "hands" and no pie in the pantry. Use the sour pie cherry for the most delectable results. Of course, the large, sweeter varieties can be used if preferred. Wash and pit the fruit. Sprinkle heavily with granulated sugar and let stand an hour or longer in the refrigerator to chill. Serve with plain sugar cookies or unsalted crackers and cream cheese and black coffee.

Rhubarb Compote
Four cups diced rhubarb, 2 cups granulated sugar, 1 orange, 1 inch stick cinnamon, 2 whole cloves. Cut orange into dice without peeling. Remove seeds. Put all the ingredients into a baking dish, cover and bake in a moderate oven until the fruit is tender but not broken. The juice will become a thick syrup. Chill and serve with toasted crackers and cream cheese. Cottage cheese is excellent with both sugared cherries and rhubarb compote.

Pineapple Betty
This is a simple dessert that is sure to please. Two cups finely chopped or shredded pineapple, 2 tablespoons butter, 3 cups soft bread crumbs, 1-4 cup water or pineapple juice. Melt butter in frying pan, add bread crumbs and brown lightly. Put a layer of crumbs in a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of pineapple and sprinkle very sparingly with cinnamon. Continue layer for layer of pineapple and crumbs until all is used, making the top layer of crumbs. Pour liquid over the pudding and dot with bits of butter. Cover baking dish and bake forty-five minutes in a moderate oven and then remove cover to brown top. Serve warm with hard sauce or cold with cream.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY IN WORLD'S FAIR ARCHITECTURE

Fashion in architecture and clothes may change, but visitors to the new Pabst Blue Ribbon Casino will find the same standard of high quality of service, food, and entertainment as was set in the old days at "Pabst On The Midway."

Four great name bands will be featured at the Pabst Blue Ribbon Casino: the opening schedule press (ing) Bob Bernie, the Old Squares, and all the lads, Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, Buddy Rogers and Hollywood music and Tom Green and his Californians. There will be dancing continuously from noon until closing.

The Mummy Tale Of Mysterious Egypt

when Universal's amazing drama of reincarnation, "The Mummy," opens a feature engagement Saturday.

"The Mummy," conceived by Nina Wilcox Putnam and Richard Schayer and adapted to the screen by the eminent British writer of the occult, John L. Balderston, deals with an ancient sacrilege committed by a high priest of Osiris and a priestess of Isis. A British archeological expedition unearths the mummy of the priest who had been embalmed alive as a penalty for his crime. When a sacred scroll is unearthed, the mummy comes to life, bringing to the modern world his ancient occult secrets. He discovers the re-incarnated soul of his unholy love in a beautiful Anglo-Egyptian girl, and his efforts to carry her back through the ages so that their love may be consummated provides one of the most singular and strangely fascinating themes of any recent screen drama.

The film is replete with spectacular sets of ancient Egyptian splendor executed by the noted stage designer and artist, Willy Pogany. Costumes and relics of the past enhance the unusual beauty and effectiveness of "The Mummy," which presents the great make-up artist, Karloff, in the starring role of the reincarnated mummy. His amazing make-up is his greatest achievement, surpassing the unforgettable monster of "Frankenstein." Zita Johann, alluring Hungarian actress, and David Manners provide the love interest of today, which struggles against the power of the past, exemplified by Karloff. Arthur Byron, Edward Van Sloan, and Bramwell Fletcher enact the other important parts in the film under the direction of Karl Freund, whose artistic camera eye is evident throughout "The Mummy."

Summer Session Of Ranger Schools Gets Underway

The summer session of Ranger high school and junior college is in full swing. Several students enrolled on the opening date, May 29, and others are enrolling daily. All students who are expecting to take work in the college or high school are urged to enroll not later than Monday, as they will be almost too far behind to catch up, if they don't enroll soon. The summer term closes on July 22.

The summer school is conducted by members of the regular faculty, and courses are offered according to demand. The small classes make it possible to give more individual attention to the needs of the students and much good work is done in the summer terms. Students may take two or three courses in the college, each course giving a full semester's credit value. This work is transferable at full value to other institutions. The summer school offers special opportunities for students who are irregular in their work or who wish to earn additional credits permitting them to graduate in less than the usual time required. It affords special advantages to teachers of this section. A certificate expiring in 1933 may be extended one year by taking two courses in the summer school. Any student who has not had 60 semester hours in a junior college will receive full credit for work done in Ranger Junior College, and those who have had two years' work in a junior college may take an additional six hours or two courses in the summer school and yet full credit therefor provided they have had some work in a senior college also.

(MEDICINE SMELL)

New Way Ends Body Odor by Removing Cause, Stale Perspiration Curds, with Deep-Pore Cleansing

THERE are certain people who refuse to believe that a medicine is any good unless it is strong and bitter!

Perhaps you have thought this about remedies for Body Odor—that you could correct it only with a strong and evil-smelling soap...

Now happily the cause of body odor—Stale Perspiration Curds—has been discovered. And research chemists have developed a quick and odorless way to end it instantly.

Stale perspiration contains calcium, salt and particles of fat. The thick and sticky lather of most ordinary toilet soaps is unsuited chemically to mix with this waste material and set it free. Instead, it hardens into clogging curds!

That's why deep-pore cleansing is needed to remove the objectionable curds—and it is a scientific fact that there is only one way to accomplish this. Kirk's Coco Castile,

Old Act Revived To Provide Work

NOGALES, Sonora, Mexico.—An agrarian act enacted by the Mexican federal government at 10 years ago, was revived here to employment to more than 100 families.

Under the act—unapplied until now—persons who have a knowledge of agricultural pursuits are provided with rent-free land, aided to plant a crop—seeds furnished by the government.

Lands in the Pesquiera ranch, known as Cuchuta, and located near Esqueda, south of Nogales, have been taken up by Mexican families under this old enactment. More than 100 tracts of 10 acres each are being cultivated.

The law provides that no landowner may hold unused large acreage if there are those who can be provided with work and sustenance, and it commands the use of the acreage, but leaves the title to the original owner. Tenancy is from year to year, as long as the owner is agreeable and does not want the land for his own use.

The place is branded "ZOO" its immense grounds are lit with cages around which goggling, delighted children impish faces.

The keeper walks about the place, punching the revolting exotica with maddening monotony. Animals growl. They shake bars and growl again. They are captive.

They are the young men and men of today, walking about in cages of Unemployment, led by the children of Fate and War Debt. . . and countless celebrities. And nobody to feed them the peanuts of hope.

Within the last few months they have been slowly moving. A few inmates have managed to slip out. . . and it is surprising what domestic qualities they possess once outside the bars of their cage.

Some of us realize just how great the hand that must pull the rope raise the doors of the cages. A timid disciple of wit and common sense, Will Rogers, seems to have grasped the significance of a fident.

It isn't merely a matter of feed-families and filling offices pushing prices upward. It is a problem of saving the world from a freight somewhere and steering its mental and physical sales for the great day when peace are going to laugh.

From amateur observation and experience, we believe the more you know the more you tell, and more you tell, the less benefit it bestow upon humanity.

Someone we give the credit to the most sensible observation to one Rastus Jackson, I believe. "What a nice, peaceful world this yer universe would be if it wasn't for de movement ob de human under jaw."

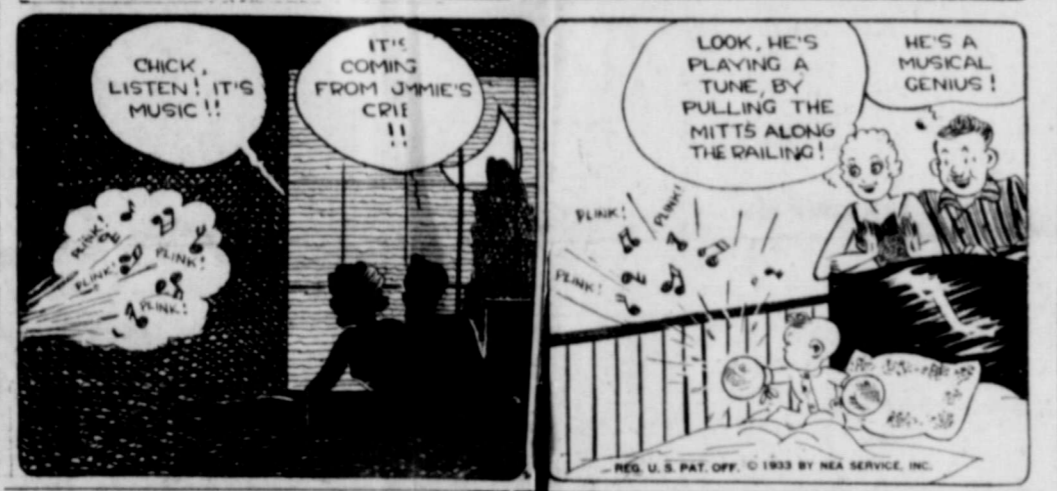

You must throw things at your wife and argue over pictures, and if you can't squelch the fire to swear long and loudly to such an extent that it has become a second nature with even the best of us.

For glass houses make it difficult for us to judge. We unconsistently throw ourselves open to the gossip.

Every front page proves to us Benjamin Franklin knew his secret when he said, "Three may keep a secret if two or them are dead." There are being lots of secrets kept these days.

DARLING FOOL by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY MONNIE O'DARE, young and beautiful, sailed for Europe as the companion of MISS JUSTICE COLEY, an old friend. Monnie is trying to forget DAN CARDIGAN, believing he has fitted her for SANDRA LAWRENCE. Sandra, pretending to be Monnie's friend, has been trying to win him from her. Dan's parents who took care of Monnie because the O'Dares are poor favor the match with Sandra.

THE train stopped. Monnie, marshalling her forces and making certain her bags were all in order, felt a curious surge of excitement. She was home! Home at last after the long ocean voyage, the dash across New York to make the morning train to Belvedere. Arthur Mackenzie had been everything that was kind and thoughtful. Monnie had felt, on leaving him, a pang of compunction. It seemed unfair that she should be able to give him nothing in return.

"Write me," he had said, holding her hand, on parting. "If anything goes wrong—if things don't fall out as you expect. And Monnie had promised lightly. Why should anything go wrong now? She and Dan would be reconciled. They would be married directly after Christmas when his uncle's legacy set him free. She had no fears now. All the way seemed to be clear for her. The trip already seemed like an agreeable dream.

No one knew she was coming. She had not wired—she had thought she would surprise them all. It was strange, arriving on the platform with no one to greet her. Strange and exciting, too. Old Marley Brockway who drove the "Rapid Fire Taxi" took her bags, looking at her a bit curiously, she thought.

"Been away, I see." That was old Marley, always. As if you'd be getting off the train otherwise. Monnie said yes. "Folks know you was comin'!" She shook her head. The ancient automobile rattled along Main street. Monnie felt self-conscious, riding alone. How strange to see the town exactly as she had left it five weeks ago! Nothing had changed. What should she say to her mother—to Kay—about her sudden return? They would think it extremely odd. Well, she was in for that now, for all the explanations. They would be glad to see her and so perhaps would not ask too many questions. After she had satisfied them she would let Dan know she was back. Dan! Every man on the street, walking in her direction, might be Dan!

OLD Marley seemed inclined to gossip. Driving cautiously alone, he threw comments over his shoulder. "Not really?" Monnie was incredulous. The mother nodded. "Yes, Angie went back to her husband two weeks ago. She'd been acting rather queerly lately. When Bill called her she was never in. Do you know, Monnie, I really think she cared about Bill and that she decided this was the best way out for them all!" She knew Angie—that's her husband's name—was a vicious temper and that he'd make trouble for her. He never wanted to let her go, really, and had threatened Bill. Yet, last night, how relieved I am about it all! Although I'm sorry for the poor little thing! Angie really has some fine qualities!"

"So that's one more mountain turned into a molehill," Monnie murmured, fluffing her hair before the hall mirror. "How I worried about that situation all summer, thinking Bill's life would be spoiled by such a marriage! You say he's taking it all right?" "Yes, I think he's really relieved deep down," the mother explained. "He was infatuated with Angie at first. She is pretty! And then the excitement of knowing she was forbidden fruit, another man's wife kept up the feeling. You know how Bill is! Stubborn as a mule. He got the idea Angie was being mistreated and that he was her champion. When we accepted her—what else could we do?—the thrill wore off. He wasn't really in love with her and seeing her all the time quite casually rubbed the bloom."

"You're a wise woman," Monnie marveled. "You see through all of us." "Never that," Monnie embraced the small figure with vigor. "I'm fine and I've had a wonderful time! But I thought I'd loafed long enough—" "But Miss Anstice?" Mrs. O'Dare's brow wrinkled anxiously. "She found those old friends of hers in London and is going to see lots of them. She didn't mind." It wasn't many mothers, Monnie reflected, who would ask so few questions as hers. Mrs. O'Dare appeared satisfied with the vague explanation though no doubt she was thinking her own thoughts. "We've got a pick-up supper," she worried. "Nothing like what I would have had if I'd known you were coming."

THE girl laughed joyously. This was getting home—having mother worry about what you ate and how you looked. She had missed it—oh, how she had missed it! The shabby little house, warm and cozy, the deep chairs, the books under the lamp. How familiar and yet how strange it all looked after the salons and cafes! Monnie wondered fleetingly what Arthur Mackenzie would have thought or her home. Then she tossed her head! "Kay will be here soon," Mrs. O'Dare told her. "Mark's working at the Boston store. I told you that when I wrote, didn't I? He runs errands after school. He's saving his money for Christmas." "And Bill?" Monnie was almost afraid to ask Bill. Maybe he had gone off and married Angie while she'd been away. "Bill is like a different person these days," said Monnie's mother. Her face lightened. "He's—Monnie, I must tell you! It's all off between him and Angie." "Not really?" Monnie was incredulous. The mother nodded. "Yes, Angie went back to her husband two weeks ago. She'd been acting rather queerly lately. When Bill called her she was never in. Do you know, Monnie, I really think she cared about Bill and that she decided this was the best way out for them all!"

Says Eastland Has Opportunity to Be "Flying Center"
Mrs. Agnes Doyle, Eastland flying enthusiast, has returned from San Antonio where she has been for some time having her plane reconditioned. She was accompanied on her return by J. R. McDaniel, who will spend some time in Eastland.
Mrs. Doyle, herself a licensed flyer, has been interested in creating more interest in flying among Eastland people with a view to establishing this as an aviation center and it is for this purpose that she induced Mr. McDaniel to come here.
Mr. McDaniel is an experienced flyer, having trained as a cadet in the United States army and has been flying for many years. Much of his time since obtaining his license he has engaged in instructing others in flying. He believes Eastland has a splendid opportunity, with the field that it has and with the interest already here, to step to the front in flying circles. "Flying is simple once you get used to being off the ground," Mr. McDaniel says.

"Already famous as the finest lounge cars in America these cars have been made still finer through the installation of air cooling and air conditioning equipment that maintains a temperature of 70 degrees inside the cars and extracts all dust and impurities from the air."
