DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

REX FIELDHOUSE, advertisement manager of 'The Scotsman,' Edinburgh, Scotland) says:
THAT advertisement managers are frequently approached by existing and intending advertisers for advice. The new advertiser requires very careful handling, inasmuch as, your advice—if wrong—may have the effect of putting a manufacturer or retailer out of love with Press advertising for ever and anon.

During the last 20 years I have seen many appropriations wasted, and many tons of goods left on retailers' shelves, due to an attempt to do without or cut down newspaper advertising. I marvel at the apathy, even today, of some manufacturers toward press advertising. They argue that it is dear and wasteful, or that they "dare not risk it."

Dear? Yes! That is if a manufacturer is suddenly confronted with a suggestion from some enterprising advertising agent that a sum of 20,000 pounds or more will put his goods on the map! But place this same manufacturer in the hands of a more scrupulous agent who knows his job and who is prepared to spend time investigating the manufacturing process, the product, its appeal, price, etc., and then let him suggest a modest initial expenditure as a "try-out." I think the manufacturer will find that his investment will be worth while. There are many sound agents in America and Great Britain today, and it is they who are reaping the reward of developing small accounts into large ones and adding other and larger manufacturers to their list of clients.

Wasteful? What advertising, in any form, does not contain a degree of waste? Does everyone who passes a poster see it, let alone read it? Do all cinema patrons receive the new talkie advertising films with acclamation? And so I could continue. In the same way press advertising has its percentage of waste, but I claim that it has the smallest percentage of any other form of publicity. The return is quicker and, what is of more importance to the advertiser, the results can be keyed. I have not sufficient space to enlarge upon the other obvious advantages. Sufficient to mention: 1. Varied selection of medium. 2. Penetration. Each paper being a personal purchase. 3. New each day. 4. Confidence created by constant scrutiny of advertisements by official bodies. Other forms of marketing are necessary, and good too, but they are all complementary to press advertising.

To quote Sir Charles Higham, the advertising expert who is almost as well known in America as he is in Great Britain, "The Press gives the advertiser the most effective method of reaching the largest number of people in the shortest space of time for the least amount of money."

And Sir Charles has spent scores of thousands of pounds in the Press, and successfully, too.

A. J. DOUD, publisher of the Prescott (Arizona) Journal-Miner, says:

"The major problem today of merchandising is to get action into sales. A sales plan created now must bring in the results within a week; it must ring cash registers instead of merely putting the name of a product or firm in the subconscious mind.

"In yesteryears our population made up a country of buyers; but any brand name before them long enough and they would give the product a trial. Today, as never before, the same people must be sold. Returns from one sales promotion are needed this week to finance next week's promotional efforts.

"Newspaper advertising is 'action' advertising. Personalizing the word 'now' it calls for action today; the same message has reached thousands of others in the city or town. With retailers often short on sizes due to depleted stocks, smart buyers take advantage of opportunities while they exist.

"Newspaper advertising localizes the trite expression 'at your dealer' found so often in national copy. In Prescott, that phrase in a newspaper advertisement tells readers that the product is actually stocked in Prescott stores—not merely in the retail establishments of some far away city.

"Newspapers are 'NOW' media for advertisers who want their results 'NOW'."

It is said that mere man is composed of water, fat, carbon, phosphorus, iron, lime and sulphur. At present prices the whole, reduced to their separate states, would cost less than two dollars in the open market. These facts are interesting and might serve to keep most of us humble.

It is a sound business deduction that the greatest stumbling block to the development of some cities resolves itself down to just the lack of understanding between its citizens.

If you wish to keep in the good graces of a man, do not tell him that he is "good hearted." It would be just as well to call him a sissy. Almost every man likes to pose as being tougher than he really is.

The Second Year of the Arms Conference

DERRICK SHADOWS

By V. MARIE STEPHENS

It was on one of the darkest streets, away from the main streets, away from the glare of lights and traffic... and prosperous homes.

The man wore ill-fitting trousers and a torn shirt, and his somewhat shaggy hair was unkempt in the revealing rays of the moon.

Something tells me he doesn't have a job. I'm sure there must be very, very little money in his pocket... he was thin himself.

But while I sat behind the wheel of a car and thought disgruntled thoughts about the things the depression makes one do and the things it prevents one from doing, this happier man shuffled down the middle of an unpaved street whistling... "Happy days are here again."

I suddenly felt very little and insignificant and mean behind that wheel. Some of the rest of us need to display our torn apparel in honest defiance.

It wouldn't hurt us to stroll unpaved lanes and whistle. Laugh, brother, laugh... for it was written in the stars, man shall not live by bread alone.

And, we have a new employment system. In and out, it winds its fays through the house and senate, is amended, is perfected.

If it gets the desired o. k. everywhere, it means jobs... lots of jobs for the jobless. The combination will not be hard to take.

It is a Washington product, not merely a state or locality relief. The nation is working in one big effort to make the world safe for prosperity.

There have been an unusual number of plane wrecks within the last few weeks, it seems. For that reason should we avoid the air?

Perhaps we should, and return to the safe and steady automobile. No, that won't work. Highway fatalities run into the hundreds... horrible hundreds.

One step back to the horse, and we'll have the subject running away with us before long. And should we resort to our own straying feet... think what happened to the cave man. Shall we, too, become extinct?

There's nothing wrong with our aviation. It is merely still in its comparative infancy. All babies stumbled... but they learn to walk by falling.

Glimpse-glances: It is to be remembered that there are certain things called ethics. They wind themselves in and out of your business, social, church, and private lives...

To ignore them is fatal. The other fellow gets the laugh... at you. Don't be stupid...

If most of us go where we're planning on our 10-day, two-week get-away, we're going to be so worn out when we return, we'll have to ask for a vacation...

Most of our vacations are taken behind our desks or counters, as the case may be, anyhow. We do our work when the family goes along and we see the world, the cities, the mosquitoes, and the fading bank account.

...THE POET'S... CORNER...

IN MEMORY OF ONE I LOVED (Mrs. Marion Peters)

When the evening shadows gather And the twilight softly falls Then I wander down the lane of memory Where your voice so sweetly calls.

I meet your lovely spirit In a restful shadow's place I listen to your singing voice I view your smiling face.

We turn back the pages of time We talk of those we loved You speak to me in expression and rhyme And tell me, of Heaven above.

You say "I am happy here In God's choir I am engaged I'm waiting for the great reunion Deaths battle I have already waged.

I have taken up the work My Master had for me planned I am working with His children In His playhouse "The Golden Strand."

David plays upon his harp The accompaniment to my songs My programmes are well attuned Angels are there in great throngs.

Some day I too shall have conquered The battle I'm fighting now, And I shall see you in your loveliness With your crown upon your brow.

We shall walk the streets of Heaven As we walked them here at home We will be happy in the knowing That we never more shall roam.

We will bask in the sunlight Of God's Gracious Throne That will never be a tragedy To shadow our lovely Home.

Until then my beautiful sister I shall bid my time and wait For I know you are ever watching At Heavens own Pearly Gate. —HORTENSE MATTHEWS.

How To Make Cut Flowers Last Longer

INCINNATI, O., June 3.—The increasing use of cut flowers in ceremonies and public-gathering places has accelerated research activities of botanists for years have sought ways of prolonging the life of flowers after they have been severed. If many discoveries that have been made by botanists and their search for methods of keeping flowers fresh long after they have been cut. The "aspirin treatment" is one that has come into universal favor. This treatment, one-half of an aspirin tablet is dissolved in two cups of water. It has been used with definite success on many kinds of flowers, notably chrysanthemums and dahlias.

Prof. E. H. Runyan, botanist, the University of Cincinnati, has developed a list of chemicals which may be effectively used by persons who desire a special technique in the care of cut flowers.

For those whose flowers are picked from private gardens, Runyan advises cutting the stems in the early morning or evening when the stems are cold. A sharp knife is recommended. The sharper the cut the less the bruising of the conductive vessels and the greater the absorption of water. The sliming of ragged edges will lessen the loss of bacterial action.

At the proper stage of the flower's development should be observed in cutting. Gladioli are best cut when the first floret is in flower, when the petals are closed, roses, before the buds are fully open; dahlias, when fully open; lilies, the night before they are cut.

Flowers after they are cut should be plunged stem-deep in water. All arranging should be done until after the stems have been thoroughly soaked. Flowers should be kept in a cool room and never in sunshine. This reduces the evaporation to a minimum. It is well to keep them in degrees Fahrenheit. If they are kept cooler than that during the night, the lasting quality is improved. Containers which permit free entrance of air through the stems are recommended. Narrow-necked vases should be avoided. Stems should be cut each day and changed with water. The aspirin treatment may be used with each change of water.

To prolong the freshness of flowers. In cutting stems, cut them squarely on the bottom of the vase. All leaves which are submerged should be removed to prevent decomposition and foul water.

Revived flowers may be revived by cutting their stems short, dipping them deep in water and placing them in a cool dark place for 10 or more hours. The so-called "hot water treatment" is also useful in

OUT OUR WAY

THE EMPTY FULL DAY

RESERVATIONS MAY STILL BE OBTAINED FOR CHICAGO SPECIAL

ABILENE, June 3.—Although Saturday was the final date set by the Pullman Company for ordering sleeping cars for the West Texas section of the special train leaving June 11 for the World's Fair, Chicago, West Texans will be able to obtain accommodations on the section at least to within two or three days of departure.

With the minimum limit for the train only lacking thirty being reached Saturday night G. B. Sandifer, manager of the Simmons University Cowboy band, who is sponsoring the section, guaranteed the minimum number of tickets, which makes certain the section will be run.

The West Texans leave Abilene next Sunday at 9:40 a. m. on the Sunshine Special, T. & P. crack passenger train. They join the special train at Fort Worth and will spend four days at the Century of Progress exposition.

Although accommodations will be supplied as long as they last it is imperative, Sandifer said, that reservations be made as early as possible in order that prospective members of the party may obtain the accommodations they desire. A special low rate, topped at $395, which includes lower berth to and from Chicago and during the four nights there, is offered on the section.

FISTS USED TO SETTLE CASE

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore.—Attorneys D. E. Van Vactor and E. R. Ashurst forsook legal points for fists during a case in the local juvenile court. Each objected to the other's language. Ashurst struck Van Vactor in the mouth, and Van Vactor returned with lefts and rights that landed Ashurst on the floor. Mae K. Short, county clerk, tried in vain to restore order, then called the sheriff.

restoring wilted flowers. Immerse the stems in hot water (not boiling) for half an hour, keeping them in the dark, and then change to cooler water. Usually several hours are required for restoration.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McCELLIOTT

WE'RE just so worried about you—how you're taking it." Monnie laughed, and the sound wasn't pleasant. "Sandra will be there," she said without stirring. "Sandra will hold his hand and smooth his pillow. Won't she?" Kay shook her head. "She can't," she said faintly. "She's badly hurt, too."

"Oh, is she? Is she, indeed?" Monnie turned a white, sleep-walker's face to all of them. Her mother, looking small and old, began to whimper, a frightening sound. Monnie felt a dreadful calmness.

"Don't do that, Mamma," she said in a more natural tone than she had used since first she heard the news. "I'm all right. Really I am. I'm sorry to worry you all so. It was the shock—"

She was grateful to Charles. His presence seemed to give the scene some reality, some substance. Kay's eyes flashed. "Yes," Kay said and again "Yes" and "Yes" and "Yes" Mrs. O'Dare's frayed nerves could bear the suspense no longer. She went up to her daughter and plucked nervously at her sleeve. "What is it?" she asked tensely.

Kay hung up the receiver and faced the group, head erect. "He's calling for Monnie. His father heard she'd got back. That was Mr. Cardigan on the wire. He wants to know if Monnie'll come."

"Yes," Kay said and again "Yes" and "Yes" and "Yes" Mrs. O'Dare's frayed nerves could bear the suspense no longer. She went up to her daughter and plucked nervously at her sleeve. "What is it?" she asked tensely.

THE telephone's ring split the silence of the little hall and Kay flew to answer it. Monnie listened apathetically, almost dreamily to the one-sided conversation.

"Yes," Kay said and again "Yes" and "Yes" and "Yes" Mrs. O'Dare's frayed nerves could bear the suspense no longer. She went up to her daughter and plucked nervously at her sleeve. "What is it?" she asked tensely.

Kay hung up the receiver and faced the group, head erect. "He's calling for Monnie. His father heard she'd got back. That was Mr. Cardigan on the wire. He wants to know if Monnie'll come."

IT WAS all part of the dim dream that the day became later in her mind. The trip with Charles to the hospital through the familiar streets. Charles driving silently and expertly, not saying a word.

The low building of white stone. "The Judith Lawrence Memorial" that had been erected after Sandra's mother had died. Ironical, wasn't it, that it should now be housing Judith Lawrence's daughter?

"How badly is Sandra hurt?" Monnie didn't really want to know but she had to talk, had to keep herself from thinking.

"I don't know," Charles' face was turned away from her. "Not seriously, I think. Her face—cut—flying glass."

The doors opened to them as though someone, waiting, had observed their arrival. A tall, gray-haired woman in crackling white, her cap banded narrowly in black velvet ribbon, received them.

"Miss O'Dare? Yes. Will you come in here?"

This was the waiting room, bright, cold, impersonal. The whole place, the corridor, everything reeked of disinfectants. A cart moved by on rubber tires. Monnie shivered.

Hosts of friends of Mrs. S. E. Snodgrass will be glad to know that she is improving after ten days serious illness. Her son-in-law, J. E. Hecter, had his mother, who is a trained nurse, to come down from Breckenridge and stay all last week with Mrs. Snodgrass. Her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Hecter, who was also ill a few days is now well.

Mrs. J. R. Buchan and family drove down to Hico Sunday and visited her sister.

Sherrad Stover who has been teaching the past year near Lubbock came home on Tuesday of last week and on Wednesday night he was licensed to preach by the Desdemona Baptist church. His many friends wish him success in this great work in which he is entering and feel that he will become a great preacher. He left Thursday to enter the Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth.

McKinney Gibson, who has been working at Dallas the past year, came home Saturday to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gibson.

Miss Lillie Terrell of San Benito, arrived Friday for a visit with her grandmother, Mrs. A. C. Brown.

The Baptist W. M. U. met Monday, May 22, at the home of Mrs. Floyd Daniels for a business and social meeting. The meeting was opened with a song followed by prayer by Mrs. S. T. Stover. Reports were given by the leaders of the childrens and junior departments. Miss Bonnie Wayne Daniels, who is leader of the Sunbeams gave a splendid report as did also Miss Lois Henry, leader of the Junior S. T. Stover. Mrs. Ellis Rouse, leader of the intermediate G. A. S. After an enjoyable social hour the hostess served a delicious ice course to the following: Mrs. A. L. Greenhaw, S. T. Stover, R. N. Watts, W. B. Hilliard, Joe Gibson, Dave Parks, Z. C. Chambliss, Roy Rushing, Ellis Rouse, Misses Lois Henry, Bonnie Wayne Daniels and the hostesses.

Miss Johnnie Buchan is spending this week with her aunt at Breckenridge.

The Methodist Missionary Society met at the church Monday afternoon observing stewardship with a playlet which was interesting as well as instructive.

The members of the society as well as others of the church wish to thank all members and friends who helped make the offering for the Methodist orphanage so large, the value of money and food being $45.

PLUMBER UNWITTINGLY CAUSED KIDNAPER HUNT

MARTINEZ, Calif.—A plumber who lost his way caused authorities to swing into a frantic hunt for a kidnaper here.

"A man just kidnapped my seven-year-old boy," Mrs. Lizzie Diesty excitedly told police over the telephone. "I saw him pick my boy up in front of our home and drive away."

Officers swung into action and authorities in neighboring cities were advised by radio to join the search. After an hour's hunt, the seven-year-old lad was again seen playing in his front yard.

He explained to his worried mother that a plumber had asked him to show him a house he could not find. After getting in locating the house, the boy watched the plumber fix a leaky pipe, then returned home to play, oblivious to the widespread search he had caused.
