Governor Calls Special Session For Monday

HOLLOWAY IS HONORED BY ASSOCIATION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Paul Holloway, superintendent of schools, Indianapolis, Ind., and president of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association, announced today that R. F. Holloway of Ranger has been appointed a member of a national committee on education for the new America. This committee will meet and report at the Cleveland convention of the department of superintendence, Feb. 24-Mar. 1, 1934.

The appointment of this committee is an important item in a fundamental reorganization of the department followed by its national professional organization for many years. The change was made to extend greater responsibility to individual members in the department's attempt to plan more effectively for meeting the current crisis in education.

Seven such committees have been appointed by President Stevenson. These groups will give their attention respectively to problems of teacher training, a comprehensive program of public education, financing the schools, education for the new America, a national outlook on education, the interpretation of the schools to the public, and public education and public welfare.

Sole Witness Of Kidnaping

Sole known witness to the Edward G. Bremer kidnaping in St. Paul, James Quinehan, above, did not know he was seeing an abduction, until too late. While delivering milk, he saw a car speed in front of the Bremer auto at an arterial street stop. Then, after his attention had been distracted, he noticed that the Bremer car was following the other machine.

L. C. Keel, an itinerant speaker from Ranger, was taken in charge by members of the Eastland county Sheriff's department at Eastland this afternoon and is being held for investigation.

Worth Half Million, Sues for Support

She's worth half a million, but that didn't deter Mrs. Houston Dunn, Philadelphia social registerite, from going to Domestic Relations court to demand that her husband contribute to her support. She said it was her mate's duty to provide for his seven children, two of whom, Elizabeth and Newbold, are here shown with her.

U. S. NAVY TO BE BUILT TO TREATY SIZE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Relations of the United States with Japan were brought to the fore today after passage by the house of the naval appropriation bill, which paved the way for the greatest peacetime naval construction program in history.

The bill, carrying an appropriation of $284,747,244, provides for bringing the United States navy to full treaty strength, to serve as a springboard for negotiations which will take place in 1935 when the next naval limitation conference is called.

The explosive situation in the Far East and Japan's desire for a larger navy than the 5-5-3 ratio provided in the Washington treaty, were important factors behind the program.

Refused Offer To Be a King

John Kelly hopes there'll be no hard feelings in the realm, but he's sorry he'll have to decline that invitation to be a king. Offered the chieftainship of the Swahilis in Nairobi, British East Africa, Mr. Kelly regrets that his hot dog stand business will detain him in Central Park, New York, where you see him here. Kelly's nomination for the throne came about through a little string-pulling of two natives whom he befriended on their visit to New York two years ago to take care of animals brought over by Martin Johnson, the explorer. It was then Kelly proved himself a prince by treating the natives to ice cream, peppermint candy and hot dogs.

NEW ISSUE OF RELIEF BONDS IS REQUESTED

Extension of Real Estate Moratorium and "Other Topics" Mentioned.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 25.—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson today issued a call for a special session of the Texas Legislature to convene Monday noon.

The proclamation convenes the session for the purpose of issuing additional relief bonds and passage of a new moratorium against real estate foreclosure.

Provision includes "such other topics" as she may suggest to the session after it convenes.

Announcement of the session was made by the governor after numerous conferences with members of the legislature who visited Austin today.

As worded, her call indicates a desire of issuance of the entire $14,500,000 relief bonds permitted under the constitutional amendment, allowing a maximum of $20,000,000 issue.

An issuance of $5,500,000 was authorized at the first special session of the legislature last September.

A moratorium law similar to that of Minnesota, which recently was upheld by the supreme court, will be offered at the special session. W. E. Pope of Corpus Christi said.

The former state moratorium against forced sale of real estate, does not expire until May 1, but the time to take advantage of its provisions has already passed.

It provided that such application must be made within 200 days from the time the act became effective on May 1, 1933. This time expired at the end of last October.

No mention is made in the call of any intent to submit amendments to the poll tax law, not to extend the time for payment of automobile and truck registration fees.

Cotton Option Pool Closing Time Is Changed to Feb. 1

County Agent J. C. Patterson announces that a telegram has been received at his office from Washington authorizing extension of time for closing cotton option pools from January 15 to February 1. Those who had failed to get their contracts signed by January 15, the previous closing time, have still a few days in which to get them in.

Six Questioned In Lynching of Negro

HAZARD, Ky., Jan. 25.—Authorities today questioned six white men whose identities they concealed in connection with last night's lynching in which Rex Scott, 20, negro, was executed for fatally wounding a white man.

Scott was lynched while his alleged victim, Alex Johnson, 32, still was fighting for life in the local hospital.

Johnson died of a fractured skull two hours after Scott's body was cut down.

The negro was strung up to a tree on the edge of a cemetery by a mob of 300 white men. While his body dangled, 28 shots were fired into it.

The Red Cross Works With CWA

CWA workers learn Red Cross methods, we are told by the American Red Cross News Service.

A cooperative safety education program is being extended CWA workers throughout the country, through the Red Cross, which is arranging to provide first aid instruction for Federal Civil Works Administration.

First Aid institutes have been organized in Virginia, in fifteen conveniently located centers, class rooms and other facilities being made available to local Red Cross chapters.

Teachers were selected from among doctors and laymen, qualified and authorized by the Red Cross.

Key workers at regular CWA wages, were sent with transportation and maintenance paid for a week of intensive training.

The purpose of CWA safety officials, is to have at least one employee in every group, equipped to administer first aid in emergencies.

In a letter to State Administrators and Directors of Safety, Harry L. Hopkins, National Administrator said, "Immediate and proper treatment of all injuries is one of the first and most important items in our safety program."

Such treatment will prevent minor wounds from developing into serious cases and reduce compensation costs of more serious injuries, and often prevent loss of limb or even life.

CWA class in Virginia are held three hours a day, thirty men assigned to each class. In that state about 2,000 CWA projects are now under way, in 100 counties and twenty-two cities; 40,000 men are at work and this number may be increased to 60,000.

National Red Cross headquarters has on file, names of about 8,000 instructors authorized to teach first aid courses, according to H. F. Enlow, Director of First Aid and Life Saving Service.

"TORCH DEATH" EVIDENCE TO GRAND JURY

HILLSBORO, Texas, Jan. 25.—The Hill county grand jury heard evidence today in the "torch slaying" of Thomas Gullett, 18-year-old Whitney farm boy, in whose death H. L. Cobb is being held.

The grand jury will seek to determine whether Gullett was killed in Hill county or in Johnson county, where his charred body was found in the embers of a hay barn near Burleson.

Sheriff Jim Freeland of Hill county said he would produce witnesses to testify Gullett had told them he was going to meet a Cobb neighbor, on the night of the tragedy. He said also another witness would testify to having seen the meeting at a point about 10 miles west of Hillsboro.

Freeland believes Gullett was slain in his home county and carried to the barn, 50 miles north. He based this theory on the fact that only one set of footprints led through the mud to the barn.

CWA GRAFT PROBE TO BE BROADENED

DALLAS, Jan. 25.—Widespread investigation of graft among CWA officials and misuse of funds by county boards in various localities is under way, Colonel Westbrook, Texas relief directors, said today.

Westbrook, who came here from Washington en route to Austin, said CWA records were being checked.

Indictments returned Tuesday against two Hidalgo county relief officials in connection with use of funds there were only the first public indication of secret probes which have been under way since last October. He said the Hidalgo men were relieved of their duties six weeks ago. Westbrook also said several officials of the Houston county board were swept from their posts three weeks ago and replaced with men from the Austin office.

"Several other counties are being watched now," he said. "Although investigations have, so far, involved a number of people, the sums of money under question have been small."

IMPOSITION
 (A Word from the Publisher)

There is no need for the editor to lift his head and drop his lower jaw with holy horror just because Mr. John Doe saunters into the newspaper office five minutes before press time with a three page longhanded manuscript on the doings of his eldest son in Kalamazoo, or elsewhere. There is no use for the editor to jump up and down and snatch himself baldheaded; it's a situation that can't be avoided in the newspaper office. Never-the-less, it's an imposition on the editor, from a humane standpoint.

Certain individuals have the idea that a newspaper is a service of the public, which is true to a certain extent, but even then the paper shouldn't be considered a servant instead of a service. Subscribers, correspondents, non-subscriber readers and many times advertisers will take certain liberties which they themselves would not tolerate.

Every newspaper printing office must have certain regulations regarding its routine, and must seek the cooperation of their advertising and reading patrons or else suffer the consequences of many mechanical and clerical handicaps.

From the time the written copy is in the hands of the editor it must be edited and corrected by him, passed on to the linotype operator, who turns the sheet into metal type slugs. The makeup man picks up these slugs and places them in the page of type after a proof has been taken on the set up story. This is a necessary process thru which every story goes before it is in a presentable stage for the readers, even if the story does come into the newspaper office five minutes before press time.

Advertising copy takes more time than does the regular straight matter (reading matter, to the layman) since a great part of the work must be done by hand, including casting of the cuts and handsetting the display type.

Another imposition to which the editor is subjected is lengthy stories, handed in by outsiders. Once the publisher grants Mr. Doe that his article will be published there is no telling how long Doe's stories will be thereafter. He immediately takes the matter in his own hands and begins to send in stories that are long enough to fill up half the front page and by the time the editor has to cut them down to legitimate size they are past the state of recognition and the author doesn't know his own child. There's an imposition both on the part of the correspondent and the editor.

The life of the publisher is not a bed of roses, and when he begins to feel that it is, he usually arouses from his peaceful slumber and pleasant dreams to find several large thorns planted in his pants.

The editor is not the only one who suffers an imposition in the newspaper racket. The readers are often times subjected to an imposition in the form of reading matter that is neither interesting nor enlightening. About the only way they can relieve themselves of this hardship is to kick to the publisher and unless they do they might as well expect to keep right on reading the same sort of dry chronology, at cetera.

Imposition as applied to newspapers is a disease which might be relieved but not permanently cured.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

ALBERT JOHNSON, publisher of the Hoquiam (Wash.) Grays Harbor Daily Washingtonian, who was for 20 years a member of the National House of Representatives and on the Committee for Immigration and Naturalization during that entire period and chairman of that committee for 12 years, says:

"This country is daily being criticized throughout Europe in every conceivable manner. Various European newspaper cartoonists depict 'Uncle Sam' as a veritable 'Shylock' and the customs and mannerisms of the United States are prodigiously ridiculed. Yet—there are thousands of European immigrants who are annually waiting a chance to land on these shores.

"Many laborers from the West Indies and from the Orient, who come over here on British vessels as seamen each year, stake their all in an effort to smuggle themselves into the United States. Some are successful, and are soon swallowed up and lost from the watchful eye of the immigration officials in our larger cities.

"Under our constitutional rights, we, the citizens of the United States, criticize our highest officials and growl about almost everything that is attempted to be done by law. In spite of our many misfortunes in the great collapse of five years ago, we are still the greatest and freest nation in all the world."

Now is the time your city and business need advertising more than ever before.

Married Flirts

By MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GYPSY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married the same day as LILLA HUTALING and DEBBIE BLISS. Lilla expects to live in luxury, while Gypsy fancies to go on with her teaching in a settlement. After returning from a honeymoon which she takes ill and the doctor tells her she is going to have a baby, Tom laudably must give up her job at the settlement. Gypsy is happy keeping house with Lilla, and she goes to luncheon. Gypsy realizes her clothes are shabby in comparison with Lilla's. Tom spends a week-end with her parents in their suburban home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER XIII

THERE was the cabin at Wading Hollow, of course. Let it not be thought for an instant that the young Weavers had forgotten that. But while it was ideal for week ends, perfect for a brief vacation. It was not to be thought of as a regular living place. For one thing, it was much too far from the city—70 miles on the railroad. The commuting would be both difficult and expensive and on those nights when Tom was kept late, Gypsy would be quite alone in an inaccessible and lonely place. It was a delightful place to camp, however, and on several spring Saturdays a small car might be seen ploughing through the sandy road, spilling bundles at it went.

Sue Canavan and Hunt Gibson came down one bright, blowy Sunday in May and Sue raved over the place—the smell of the sea and the snug little cabin with its bunk and its oil stove and its blue curtains. They had a merry supper out of doors, Tom broiling steaks over the coals and Gypsy lading out potato salad.

"If I owned the place," Sue said reflectively, lying luxuriously on an army blanket, "I'd never leave it. I'd dig myself in and live on roots and berries." Sue was red-haired, blue-eyed, enthusiastic. She was some lucky man's good secretary, down in the city.

"You would not!" Hunt roused himself lazily to contradict her. "You're a Fifth Avenue hound and you know it. You like this in small doses but, deep down, you want to live a stone's throw from Times Square."

"There's something in that," Sue admitted. "But honestly, Gypsy, I'm mad about this place. Why didn't we ever come before?"

"Well, Rosina was here most of last summer," Gypsy told her. "It's Tom's property, really, but the family love it so they sort of have it on shares. The children adore it. Tom taught her eye and she smiled at him, thinking of the child who might—who most certainly would—be with them here the following summer. Darling Tommy, how handsome he was with the sunburn blotting out his winter pallor and his long legs stretched out on the sand! What a pity they couldn't stay here all summer long, forget the job and the apartment and everything else. Well, there was no use wishing for the moon. You just had to enjoy things as they came.

"Tom drew the green chair beside her and sat down, staring at her worried eyes. 'It's this dam' place,' he said in a beaten voice. 'You must get away.'"

"She essayed a weary smile. The mountains? The lake country? Out of the question. If she could get someone to stay with her at the Hollow. But she didn't want to leave Tom. He would be alone in this hot, stinging city.

"Everything's out of proportion just now," she faltered, laying one thin hand on his. "You're tired out and I'm fidgety and we're not seeing things as they really are. Don't worry. It will be all right."

But he was not convinced. He made her lie there. He brought her supper on a tray. Cold meat and string beans (she had prepared these earlier) and lead tea and fruit.

Gypsy ate and drank with him. The curls lay damp on her hot forehead. Her dotted Swiss frock, many times washed and now guileless of crispness, fell in limp folds around her. Her eyes were ringed. Sleepless nights were being to make their mark upon her.

"You'll wilt away in town," Mrs. Morell said in melancholy tones. "I don't know what Tom Weaver's thinking of."

Gypsy interrupted gaily. "Mum, don't be silly! You know the apartment is comfortable as can be. We have awnings, we have refrigeration and electric fans and the river nearby. You talk as though I were in the Mojave desert."

This was all very well but when best settled down like a blanket her resolution was shaken. Tom found her one night, lying on the dazed, white and exhausted.

"It's nothing," she told him. Not for worlds would she admit the weakness and nervousness that had swept over her that day like a tide. The city had, all at once, seemed a giant octopus with bery fingers reaching out to destroy her.

"Tom drew the green chair beside her and sat down, staring at her worried eyes. 'It's this dam' place,' he said in a beaten voice. 'You must get away.'"

Careers On Lakes

Beckon to Youths

By United Press

SUPERIOR, Wis.—Young men are taking careers on the Great Lakes seriously these days. Capt. Fred Des Jardins, who has sailed the lakes for 32 years, claims, "Younger men are enlisting in the lakes service, and they don't leave the boat after a trip up from down below and go West to see."

"One particularly hot afternoon Gypsy was aroused from a siesta doze by the ringing of the telephone. Tom's voice, joyous, renewed, came to her.

"Darling, what do you think? Pack up your duds—we're moving to the Island."

"Not to the Hollow?" Had he gone suddenly mad? He knew he could never commute from there.

"No," he sounded exultant. "I've made a dicker with Mac. He's letting me have his place at Port Washington because he wants to be in town."

Mac was McKinnon, one of the men in Tom's office. His wife, Tom explained, had gone out to her people in St. Paul for the summer, taking the children. Mac was tired of commuting. He fairly leaped at the idea of the Weavers' trim little apartment. Gypsy had seen his house once and had fallen in love with it. It was a tiny, blue-roofed cottage on a high hill with a sweep of bay just below it. Apple trees dotted the hill acre beyond.

Well, it was too good to be true, but there it was!

Tom burst in upon her half an hour later, charged with electric energy. He found her languidly packing and took the bags, the bottles and brushes out of her lax hands.

"Go and lie down, woman," he commanded her. "I'm doing all this. We're moving to the country."

She didn't mean to, but all of a sudden tears came. Cooling, blinding, healing tears of gladness and relief.

These are only two of a score of companies operating boats on the lakes."

Frants H. Brogniez, who is president and master brewer of the Houston Brewing Company, will be remembered by "old time" Texans as the brew artist who brought to Texas international recognition in 1913 by winning the world's much coveted prize for brewing fine lager.

Extra Fines to Pay For Police Patrol Are Discontinued

By United Press

JUAREZ, Tex.—The new administration has discontinued extra one police court fines levied to pay for "La Julia," the police patrol wagon.

Countless persons arrested on intoxication charges in the last several years were assessed an extra one on each fine for riding to the station in "La Julia," regardless of whether they actually rode in the patrol wagon.

At least two patrol wagons were bought with such levies.

Mayor Daniel Quiroz Reyes explained that evidence indicated the extra fines no longer were going to "La Julia."

Uses Dogs to Get Lost Balls

By United Press

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland.—The lost golf ball problem seems to have been solved over the historic links, here.

Dogs, chiefly spaniels, are used to retrieve the balls from whins, bushes, the burn, or from among the sandhills. The dogs are very clever, and it is not unusual for one of them to find three dozen balls in a morning's search. And three will not be a single tooth-mark.

Recently their limited numbers were somewhat depleted by a mysterious epidemic of poisoning.

Britains Food Dictator Takes Over Marketing

By FREDERICK KUH
 Staff Correspondent
 LONDON.—Almost unnoticed, British agriculture has been placed under state control with Walter Elliot, Minister of Agriculture, as food dictator.

Nothing less than an agrarian revolution, peaceful and systematic, is in full swing, although the 5,000,000 Britons have not yet begun to grasp the portent of this rigid governmental planning which has replaced chaotic individual competition in the United Kingdom's agriculture.

This momentous change has been unheralded by the strident propaganda of the blue eagle, the year plan, the corporative state or national socialism. In fact, the British—except those who share the aims of the Labor party—are inclined to frown upon "government interference" in realia heretofore left to private enterprise. But Britons have not yet realized that this is precisely what is happening on their own doorstep.

The state has already regulated the marketing of important agricultural products and the prices at which they are sold. But key industries, too, are facing the alternative of accepting state supervision or succumbing to economic anarchy. Schemes are either ready or maturing for reorganizing the steel, iron, coal and textile industries and the paternal hand of the government is guiding this hand that drafts these plans.

Tending Toward Mergers
 Legislation is likely to be introduced in parliament within the next few weeks, designed to compel more speedy fulfillment of these projects. The result would be merging of individual concerns into large units, the shutting down of inefficient enterprises and centralized administration for selling finishing products.

Britain has been buying 60 per cent of her food abroad. But she has set out towards agricultural self-sufficiency now.

In the former days of free trade, the British paid for lavish food imports by selling an endless flow of manufactured articles in foreign markets. Tariff protectionism, Japanese competition and subsidies showered on foreign competitors are depriving Britain of vast external markets, and so she is bent on developing her own food resources and making her farmers the pampered children of the nation. By higher tariffs and imports quotas, Britain is steadily curtailing the influx of foreign foodstuffs.

What Is Subsidized
 The government began its quest of autarchy by paying subsidies to British wheat growers. As a result, during the past year the wheat area under cultivation rose from 1,250,000 to 1,660,300 acres, while the actual production of wheat increased by 42 per cent in the same period. The nation still imports nearly four times as much wheat as it produces; but dependence on foreign wheat is declining.

Walter Elliot, 45, is the "young Tory" in charge of the country's agricultural policy. By throttling imports and controlling the marketing of home output, he is virtually able to dictate food prices.

His fellow-conservatives, many of them, consider Elliot a socialist; the socialists call him a fascist. He is in fact, a planner with the same readiness as Roosevelt to test new avenues of escape from economic misery and from the partial collapse of private capitalism. Nor is misery too harsh a British agriculture when Elliot took office in September, 1932. Now, many experts predict prosperity for Britain's farmers after another two years of planned economy.

Supervises Marketing
 But he knows that his countrymen will have to forego choice foreign morsels on their breakfast tables until British agriculture is able to improve its quality. He bluntly told a Manchester audience lately that Britons would have to swallow "a lot of terribly nasty food, bought at extraordinarily high prices" in order to make this country agriculturally self-reliant.

But he is forging ahead with his policy. Hops were under a marketing scheme when he assumed office. He established marketing boards for pigs and bacon. He created state supervision for the marketing of all milk. A potato marketing plan is being prepared. Poultry and eggs are coming under state control. And a big scheme for state surveillance of meat marketing is on the way.

Admitting that some of the steps he has taken in agriculture were drastic he has just announced that "they are nothing to the steps I am going to take in the future."

Free Action for all 4 wheels

plus the safety of a front axle and comfort of Cantilever Springs

A great deal of thought is being given today to springs. Various experiments are being tried in an effort to get independent action for an automobile's front wheels.

All of which is simply another tribute to the soundness of Ford engineering and the Ford V-8 for 1934. When you drive this car you get free action not only for the front wheels—but for all 4 wheels.

Ford transverse cantilever springs provide individual suspension for both front and rear axles. In the new Ford these springs have been made more flexible. This type of construction is not experimental and has the advantage of comfort plus the proved safety of a front axle.

This new Ford combines V-8 power with gasoline economy—20 miles to the gallon at a speed of 45 miles per hour, in exhaustive road runs. It will do 80 miles an hour without difficulty. At 50 or 60 miles per hour it is actually running at ease!

This reserve power means acceleration unequalled by practically any other make of American automobile, regardless of cost. Before you buy any car at any price, drive the new Ford V-8 for 1934.

state monopoly. Electrical power has been coordinated under a state public utility plan, with the country divided into ten districts—suitable generating plants linked and superfluous ones dropped. Nearly three-fourths of the existing power plants are being abolished and the cost of electricity correspondingly lowered.

With agriculture leading the way and state planning being proposed for industries and public utilities, the area of unfettered private enterprise, which followed feudalism, is on the wane.

— no loose ends

Always the finest tobaccos and only the center leaves are purchased for Lucky Strike cigarettes. We don't buy top leaves—because those are under-developed. And not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality. The center leaves—for which farmers are paid higher prices—are the mildest leaves. And only center leaves are used in making Luckies—so round, so firm—free from loose ends. That's why every Lucky draws easily, burns evenly—and is always mild and smooth. Then, too—"It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

Compliment to Miss Stephens
Pretty Affair at Colonial Room
 The Colonial Ballroom, Gholson hotel, offered a warm welcome brightly enlivened by huge red Valentine hearts dotted about the ballroom in artistic design. Wednesday afternoon at the 4:30 o'clock hour when co-hostesses Misses Mary Edna Davenport, Ruth Shirley, Marguerite Adamson, Inez Davenport, Maxine Henderson and Mrs. I. A. Wolford and Jimmie Burrage entertained with a pretty miscellaneous shower in compliment to Miss V-Marie Stephens, bride-elect of Mr. A. J. Smith Jr., of Winters, whose marriage will fill the five o'clock hour Tuesday afternoon, January 30, at the home of Miss Stephens' parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. H. Stephens, 456 Pine street.

Tall red tapers held in black holders burned atop the piano, and on console tables shedding their soft glow against the harmonizing background affording a picturesque setting for the program opened with Miss Maxine Henderson, singing "All For You," accompanied at the piano by Miss Marguerite Adamson. Young Miss Dorothy Henry gave an eccentric tap dance with Mrs. W. A. Watt at the piano. Mrs. Clyde H. Davis, in her usual clever manner read two selections, "Crockette," and "A Negro Wedding." Little Miss Cecelia McDowell, another talented Ranger dancer, climaxed the program with a tap number accompanied by Miss Adamson.

The two attractively costumed little dancers re-appeared together, Dorothy acting as Cupid, guided by Cecilia in search of the honoree. When discovered from a midst of guests, she was led to a cleverly trimmed square box topped with a beautiful red heart, which was pierced by Cupid with a silver-tipped arrow.

A most beautiful and carefully chosen array of gifts, each carrying fleecy white wrappings and bits of vari-colored ribbons, were unwrapped by the guest of honor

Brunk's Comedians Opens Here Monday

The Ranger fire department is bringing the "No. 1" show of the Brunk's Comedians to Ranger for a week's run beginning Monday evening, Jan. 29, under the management and direction of Fred G. Brunk, who has the original Brunk show. This visit will be the first he has made to Ranger in about six years, although other shows under the direction of brothers of Fred have appeared here.

The advance agent for the show was in Ranger earlier in the week and stated that show goes in Brownwood and Abilene have declared that the show is the best Brunks have ever had in this territory. He also stated that the show is equipped with new canvas and water and weatherproof, with five underground furnaces to warm the interior.

Advance information indicates that the entire program offered by Brunks is first class entertainment, with feature stage show success on the books for the entire run with good comedy, romance and topped by a superthriller mystery show, "The House of Fear," which will be presented on one of the nights. Good music by Zeke Boyd and his orchestra, and Ted Edlin's band is a regular feature of the show, according to the advance man.

The tent will be located across from the city hall.

Ranger Dealer At Terraplane Show at Dallas

C. J. Moore, Eastland County Terraplane-Hudson dealer, accompanied by F. G. Head and Earl Swoveland, Terraplanned to Dallas Tuesday to attend the showing and hear the factory policies of the 1934 Hudson organization.

Mr. Moore states that during his 11 years experience in the automobile business he has never been more optimistic as to the future of his business. The opinion of all who have seen and ridden in the new cars is that they are the most outstanding cars, far aside from their beautiful stream lines, natural curves, wonderfully arranged interiors, their features in mechanical engineering to make them world champions for comfort and ruggedness and endurance, they are priced in the range of any buyer.

A demonstrator will be ready soon for the general public to get a thrill they have never before experienced from an automobile ride.

A carload of one Hudson and three Terraplanned will be enroute to Ranger some time next week, and Mr. Moore asks that all watch for the announcement.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Karin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just drops in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, also often breaks out in pimples. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Beware a substitute. Be at drugstore G. 1911, S. C.
