Industries to Work On New N.R.A. Plans

By United Press WASHINGTON, Mar. 8 .- Paul Henderson, vice president of the United Air Craft and Transport o., told senate investigators today that he lent $10,000 to a post office department official in the fall of 1930, several months after his company obtained a transcontinental mail contract. Henderson testified before the air mail committee the money went to Chace Gove, chief assistant to former assistant postmaster general Glover, to protect Gove's losses in stock narket transactions. He said he endorsed three notes for $1,000 each for Gove's acant on October 10, 1930, two more for $1,000 each on November 10 and paid all of them himself on November 24. On Dec. 31 lent Gove $5,000 and took ove's note for $10,000.

REFLECTIONS OF A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF PARDONS

Many of our people are too anxious to have the court convict all men and women on the flimsiest evidence AND THEN PETITION THE GOVERNOR TO PARDON BAD CRIMINALS ON THE FLIMSIEST EXCUSES," is a personal verdict returned by Judge D. C. Andrews of the Texas board of pardons. "Through all the ages there have ben tyrants, fanatics and overzealous people who argue that the way to stop crime was to enact drastic laws with the heaviest penalties in every case—and sometimes the disposition of lawmakers, trial officers and juries to heed the clamor of said parties has caused more suffering and persecution among the weak and uninfluential than all the wars of the ages." Judge Andrews is said to have been a student of crime as well as a student of law for 30 years before he became a member of the board. All of which is a reminder that a bill revising or amending the penal code was passed on to the lawmakers while the special session was grinding.

And that's all.

Judge Andrews goes all the way in his argument for the repeal of drastic laws for minor offenses. This is his argument for a change in criminal procedure: "England at one time had about 20 capital offenses and with such judges as "Bloody" Jeffries the trials were largely judicial murders and the weak, those not members of the high church of England, were so persecuted that they felt as if their government was what Sherman said of war, while many of those who had a pull with the government committed grave crimes with impunity. Every time that any government has enacted drastic laws against the individual rights of its citizens or made penalties all out of proportion to the offenses, great suffering and persecution among the weak and ignorant and bribery and corruption among the high-ups followed."

Judge Andrews specifically charges, speaking of suspended sentences, that many persons charged with crime have taken their sentences seriously "and have since made good, while others laugh at such sentences like the boy en by Sue B. Mann, deputy state in the blueback speller laughed at the man who threw turf at him in the apple tree and the prison records show that many of them have since become confirmed criminals.

ADMINISTRATOR HOPKINS ADVANES HUGE SUM OF RELIEF MONEY

National Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins responded to the call of State Relief Administrator Adam Johnson and Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson by advancing the sum of $750,000 to carry on until bread bonds have been sold. Administrator Hopkins lent a willing ear. Texas bread bonds were given a different coloring by the lawmakers of the state. They are 4 1-2 instead of 4 per cent bonds. They should be as good as gold. Atty. Gen. James V. Alired has ruled that they are not only constitutional but expressed an individual opinion that they are gilt edged.

the plan's maturing. Something stirred in the under growth to slither over the ground and slip without sound into a pool of stagnant water. Noves forgot that which he neard, to remember only his waiting Perhaps now, at this very instant, Pablito at Ban tum's was hearing the fact that search was on for Norris Noyes

ANTUM did not know of any one being looked for except a tirl called Lottie who had escaped om a reformatory on a ladder she had made of two sheets, her night gown and the matra a's best

Lottle's career, Bantum sald, as he leaned across the bar, bad been "something fierce." She bad stolen to an extent that would have land ed any man in Sing Sing for a long period. But the jurors were men and Lottle had cried piteously as she looked at them and she had been sent to the reformatory which evidently did not suit her fancy as a home for even the short time she was to serve. She had dark hair, dimples curling lashes and gray eyes. And here was a big reward out for the man or woman who found her "Here's her picture," said Ban tum as be handed Pablito a printed "Any other rewards out?" Pab ito questioned. "I need money."

"We all do," Bantum answered "No, there's no others that I know What'ull you have?" "Scotch," Pablito answered. He drained his glass, responding pleasantly to its contents by . warmth which spread slowly over him. Setting the glass down, he realized how deeply he had been stirred by the thought of danger for Norris Out in the open Pablito drew a deep breath. It was all right! After he had stopped for one short "I wish to God we could get his voice and Noyes could hear to, rent a costume for the following second in a shop where he could more than an isolated word or night he would hurry to the two, rising barsh and clear from awamp and tell Norris there was nothing to worry about on the place rayself but do you see H, all rightf" she said at he found but two costumes and length and loudly, "but I tell since one would have made him s clown. Pablito selected the one that would make him a toreador.

"Wrap II up to a hurry, will you?" he asked almost feverishly "I haven't much time-" more loudly. "How are they goin lie went to the swamp in a mo to get you? You turn up, one of tor-driven boat which he had to 20 or 39 women to Spanish rigs quit where the water was knee Fleid's not goin' to count bis deep. Noyes' cance had edged in friends.
