MILLIONAIRE STERLING RETURNS TO BIG PICTURE

Ross S. Sterling is said to have returned to the picture of "Who's Who" in petroleum land. More than this he has recouped his losses, is rated as a millionaire and hopes to go to the top again. Now he is the king of the Sterling Oil and Refining company with assets listed at $1,033,181. He is general manager of the new organization; his son, Walter, is the president, and his wife, Mrs. Maud Gage Sterling, is the principal stockholder.

Most valuable properties of the new company are leasehold interests in the West Columbia oil fields, Hull field, Goose Creek field and in Chambers, Harris, Jefferson and Harris counties. It owns 17 producing wells. There is money in oil—if a player gets in on the ground floor.

Ross Sterling's political experiences cost him millions. He made a very efficient chairman of the state highway department. He was called to the office of governor. His record is known to all Texans. He was defeated for reelection by a very close vote. He retired from office broken in purse but not in pluck.

Now he has scored a comeback. Flowers for the living. Flowers for the fighters who never know when they are whipped. Flowers to the men and women who face the morning sun and permit the setting sun to "go hang." "While there is life there is hope," but not to the man who has a jelly-fish backbone and whines and moans and then quits because of reverses in the game of life.

UNCLE SAM AS A BUILDER OF MODERN WARSHIPS

Uncle Sam is not going to sleep on his rights. His naval experts handed out contracts for 24 warships and "finger plans to lay down 19 more in the coming fiscal year." Work will start in September in six commercial and seven navy yards which received orders for the new sea fighters. When these slide into the water only 78 more will be needed "to boost the fleet to limits allowed by the London naval conference." Awards to the commercial yards were made in every case to the lowest satisfactory bidder.

A Roosevelt built the Panama canal. Another Roosevelt is building an American navy that will be second to none on the seven seas. Great Britain claims to be the mistress of the Atlantic and the Japs are certain that they are the masters of the Pacific.

A policy of driving capital out of a city or state by high taxes will not only wreck the business, but also the people living there.

"GOVERNMENT BEGGING TO SIGN HOUSING LOAN NOTES," WEST TEXAS DIRECTOR DECLARED

"Did you ever have a person beg you sign your note?" was the query shot to representatives of 16 towns at a federal housing conference in Abilene Friday by R. A. Stuart, director of the program in West Texas who self-answered, "That is the very thing the government is doing to those who can qualify for housing loans."

Frank V. Williams and H. C. Davis of Eastland in company with representatives of Coleman, Whittier, Baird, Cisco, Albany, Throckmorton, Hamlin, Snyder, Sweetwater, Abilene, Blackwell, Asperment, Roby, Rotom, and Rule were urged by Stuart to start the movement in their respective towns.

The speaker declared that if the program was put in full force as the government anticipated, it would by far be the most beneficial one of the recovery administration.

The housing speaker declared he had been advised Thursday, but not officially, that the housing administration had waived its requirement for borrowers to be paid up on taxes and in good grace

TRY A WANT AD

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK—Chief Montgomery, who spun those spinners for Columbia (ask Stanford), is going to spin 'em for the Brooklyn club of the National Football League this fall.

Montgomery is doing this on the advice of Prof. Lou Little, who once played plenty of tackle for professional outfits himself.

Montgomery requires money to complete his course, and that is the logical way for him to obtain it," explains the professor. "Professional football is splendid. My only criticism of it is that it encourages some, who get fair money for three months' play, to loaf the remainder of the year. Montgomery is not that kind."

College men do not look down upon the pro game as so many of them formerly did.

Few coaches now say to seniors on the last day of the season, "This is your last game of football."

For hockey, the lightning-like game that came out of the north to take eastern and midwestern cities by storm, is the only professional sport that has matched strides with pro football in growth in the last several years.

With increased popularity came substantial salaries. The average is $2000, with the Granges, Friedmans, Cagles and Newmans collecting considerably more.

1934 Parade of Pro Grid Stars

AMONG those making their names this year are:

—Ed Danowski, Fordham fash back; Harris Stafford, a thrill producer with the Army plebes last fall, who attracted All-American comment at Texas the season before, and John Norby and Willis Smith of Idaho, who reports to the New York Giants on that aggregation's tenth birthday.

—Pug Rentner, of Northwestern; Tiger Walton, Pittsburgh guard.

with loan companies. Owners so delinquent are eligible for loans, and it remains to the discretion of lending institutions themselves who shall receive loans from the group. Other qualifications for borrowers were: (1) the borrower must possess the title to the property he borrows on and (2) the borrower must have an annual income five times greater than he pays back each year. The borrower can secure from $100 to $2,000 for each repair job, and is limited to five jobs, or total of $10,000.

Stuart said that federal and state bank examiners are urging bankers to accept the housing paper.

Help Comes in Ocean Holocaust

CLEBURNE, Texas.—Phillip Nolan, "The Man Without a Country," did not die on shipboard but was killed by Mexicans near Cleburne between 1820 and 1830, according to historical records reviewed here.

Nolan was the main character in Edward Everett Hale's famous book, "The Man Without a Country." According to the book version, Nolan was ostracized from the United States for cursing it, dying on a ship at sea, without ever again seeing his native land.

That version is held to be fiction, however, by persons who believe the accounts resurrected here are true.

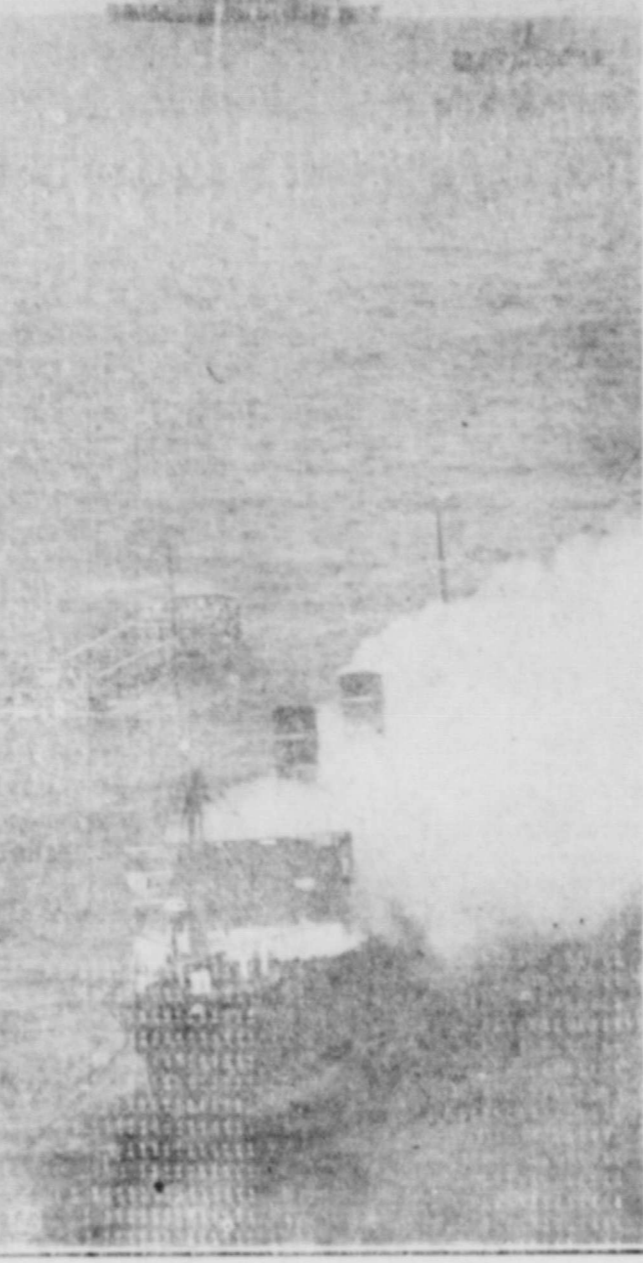

Nolan river, which flows through this county, was named for Phillip Nolan because he is said to have died on its banks.

Nolan, according to these accounts, entered what is now Texas in 1797 to procure cavalry horses. He was given free access to the territory by the Spanish government, then sovereign over Texas.

Later, he again came to Texas, ostensibly for the same purpose, but this time he was suspected of plotting against the Spanish government and was ordered to be kept out.

He managed to elude Mexican soldiers and made his way into central Texas. Here, with 14 Americans, five Spaniards and a negro, he built a blockade, intending to capture wild mustangs.

He was pursued by Mexicans who attacked the blockade. Nolan was killed by the first discharge. His body, according to one account, was buried near what is now the little village of Blum.

A flame from stem to stern, the ill-fated Marro Castle, Ward liner destroyed by fire six miles from Ashbury Park, N. J., is shown in this unusual aerial view as a freighter moved to the rescue, with two other ships standing by to pick up survivors. More than 200 of the 575 aboard are believed to have perished.

A "Prune Deal" Rules Idahoans

BOISE, Idaho.—The New Deal has brought a "prune deal" to Idaho this year, according to Henry McInerney, president of the Prune Growers' association.

Marketing regulations now in effect establish the following prices below which no prunes can be sold by local dealers:

- $2.25 on suitcases.
- .75 on faced lugs.
- .75 on jangle half bushels.
- .65 on faced half bushels.
- .65 on four-basket crates.

The local Idaho dealer and shipper is tied hand and foot to maintain this market for the grower, McInerney said, and it is up to the grower to see that it is lived up to. If the grower sells at a lower price to outside sources, he can make it possible for some organization to break the entire set-up.

Frontier Museum Size Is Increased

ROCKLAND, Mo.—Deputy Sheriff Earle Ludwick boasts that he never forgets a face.

A while ago he was in a drug store. A man, obviously a summer resident, entered. When he had gone, the sheriff remarked: "I can't recall who that man is, but I have had him in our jail."

Inquiry revealed that the man was none other than Rev. Benjamin F. Browne, pastor of the Second Baptist Church of Holyoke, Mass.

But the sheriff was undaunted. He explained that years ago, when Rev. Browne was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Rockland, the minister once had occasion in his clerical capacity to visit the jail to consult an inmate.

That version is held to be fiction, however, by persons who believe the accounts resurrected here are true.

Nolan river, which flows through this county, was named for Phillip Nolan because he is said to have died on its banks.

Nolan, according to these accounts, entered what is now Texas in 1797 to procure cavalry horses. He was given free access to the territory by the Spanish government, then sovereign over Texas.

Later, he again came to Texas, ostensibly for the same purpose, but this time he was suspected of plotting against the Spanish government and was ordered to be kept out.

He managed to elude Mexican soldiers and made his way into central Texas. Here, with 14 Americans, five Spaniards and a negro, he built a blockade, intending to capture wild mustangs.

He was pursued by Mexicans who attacked the blockade. Nolan was killed by the first discharge. His body, according to one account, was buried near what is now the little village of Blum.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By MARY E. DAGUE

FEW home-makers realize that they use a comparatively small number of the food materials which are available to them. They also often fail to make use of the various cooking methods that are so easily accomplished in the home. If food materials are limited it is even more important to study the possibilities of cooking the same foods by various methods in order to develop different flavors.

Deep-fat frying and broiling are two cooking methods often slighted in the average home. Yet both these methods are simple and develop food flavors that are distinctive and popular.

French Fried Foods

Fritters, croquettes, French fried vegetables and such economical dishes as fish cutlets are appetizing for late summer menus and are possible only with deep-fat frying. This method of cooking is a short-process, too.

Another pointer for avoiding monotony in menus is the wise use of "favorite" dishes and out-of-the-ordinary dishes. Any meal can be made exceptionally pleasant if a "specialty" or "favorite" dish is included.

Don't hesitate to try new recipes and new food materials.

All families are obliging and interested in something new. If the novelty doesn't prove popular you don't have to repeat it.

And Vary the Shapes

Use numerous food combinations and vary the shape of certain dishes. For example, a jellied vegetable salad served in a ring mold with the center filled with fresh tomatoes cut in quarters and garnished with mayonnaise seems quite different from the same jelly in individual molds on a slice of tomato.

Because menus serve either as patterns or to give ideas which we can adapt to meals better suited to individual needs the accompanying menu is given with the hope that it will prove helpful to you. Contrast in cooking methods is stressed in the dinner menu.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Baked pears, cereal, cream, French toast, honey, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Cream of celery soup with toast squares, lettuce and egg salad, apple fritters, syrup, lemonade.

DINNER: Sauerkraut and tomato juice cocktail, chicken pot pie, potatoes, au gratin, French carrots, blackberry ice with garnish of whipped cream, sponge drops, milk, coffee.

SHERIFF'S PHOTOGRAPHIC MEMORY WAS CORRECT

ROCKLAND, Mo.—Deputy Sheriff Earle Ludwick boasts that he never forgets a face.

A while ago he was in a drug store. A man, obviously a summer resident, entered. When he had gone, the sheriff remarked: "I can't recall who that man is, but I have had him in our jail."

Inquiry revealed that the man was none other than Rev. Benjamin F. Browne, pastor of the Second Baptist Church of Holyoke, Mass.

But the sheriff was undaunted. He explained that years ago, when Rev. Browne was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Rockland, the minister once had occasion in his clerical capacity to visit the jail to consult an inmate.

Former V. President Recalls 1874 Drouth

By United Press

TOPEKA, Kan.—Speaking of drouths, Charles Curtis, former Vice-President of the United States, has seen some of the worst. He wrote to a friend in 1874: "I feel sorry for our people and think I know what they are going through. I remember a number of drouth years in Kansas, but only one I will remember the last of was in 1874."

"I stood in the streets of Lawrence, then the county seat of Lawrence County, and saw the drouth wagon after covered with go through town every day for weeks. They were going back Missouri and Indiana and states."

"Then I went in a covered wagon and horseback some of the way from Lawrence to Lawrence. The crops had been burned off by the hot winds. The streams, waterholes were dried up. The waterholes were abandoned. Dead horses were strewn along the way. I never want to see such a sight again."

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

By William Ferguson

THE PRAYING MANTIS, ALSO KNOWN AS INSECT, AND PREACHER, IS ONE OF THE MOST RELENTLESS KILLERS OF THE INSECT WORLD.

AMARILLO, TEXAS, IS CLOSER TO THE CAPITALS OF NEW MEXICO, COLORADO, KANSAS, AND OREGON, THAN IT IS TO AUSTIN, ITS OWN STATE CAPITAL.

HALLEY'S COMET HAD A SHORT TAIL, COMPARED WITH MANY OTHERS, YET IT WAS 50,000,000 MILES LONG!

THE PRAYING mantis is so named because of the peculiar posture it assumes when at rest. The front part of the body is elevated, the fore legs held up and forward like hands raised in prayer, while the head moves from side to side like one seeking divine forgiveness.

A Brand New SEASON

SEPTEMBER marks the opening of a brand-new season in this business of running one's life. Back home—back to work—back to school. Time to take stock of most everything, isn't it? What's needed for the house, for the children, for yourself? . . . At least a dozen spending decisions to be made very soon.

How about choosing a school for the youngsters? (It's not too late even now.) And school equipment, too—pen-and-pencil set, typewriter? Then don't forget new linens and towels for the house—and bathroom supplies, of course. Perhaps the pantry wants restocking. And you are going to redecorate at least ONE ROOM, aren't you?

Whatever your needs, the advertising pages of this newspaper will help you decide WISELY and spend WISELY. You can depend on advertised goods and services . . . for if they didn't represent pretty worthwhile values, the sponsors couldn't keep on advertising and selling! Read all the sales messages in this newspaper. They have something worth-while to say to you.

Proposed to Producers of Farm Raised Oil

WASHINGTON.—A program to provide energy producing food for 25,000,000 people for one year, fully 25,000,000 people, according to an estimate of the department of agriculture of Iowa, are doing without the recognized table spreads, butter and margarine. This group is either unable to purchase butter or is prevented from buying margarine because of the restrictions set up by the federal and state governments.

To protect producers of butter, the Institute of American Fats and Oils advocates the elimination of foreign produced oils, and to make margarine available for more people it advocates free trading among the states for a product manufactured entirely of American-grown oils.

"Our program," Mr. Moser said, "will still provide a more ample control of margarine than is set up for any other food product, will protect butter from unfair competition, will provide an outlet for the surplus of American grown oils, and will relieve the consumer of unjust and discriminatory taxes on his table."

To bring the truth and force of these facts to the attention of federal and state lawmakers and the public generally, is an educational task beyond the financial ability of the impoverished farmers, according to Mr. Moser. Recognizing this common interest which they have with the processors and manufacturers of the finished products in increasing their consumption, the representatives of the farmers concerned recently met at Chicago, and invited the processors to join with them in setting up the Institute of American Fats and Oils.

The following officers and directors were elected: C. O. Moser, New Orleans, pioneer co-operative marketing leader and for many years president of the cotton co-operatives; president; F. E. Mollin, executive secretary, American Na-

BEACH CLUB GIRL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
BOOTS HARBURN, IN MARRIAGE WITH DENIS, handsome swimming instructor, because she doesn't want to face her parents' disappointment on learning she has been snubbed by the younger set of Larcheck, fashionable New York suburb.

Boots goes to Miami, promising to read for Boots later. She gets a job in a big department store and takes a tiny room in Greenwich Village. She becomes ill with influenza and is befriended by DENIS FENWAY, young author. Fenway sees that Boots has a doctor and nurse and begs her not to worry about expense. After she recovers he asks her to see at his apartment. There she meets beautiful KAY CHILLINGFORD who has a possessive manner toward Denis.

Just before her illness Boots received a telegram telling her Russ has been killed in a motorboat accident.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXVIII

THE routine of the shop began again. Hurry, hurry, hurry! Hurry to the street car, to the time clock, to the washroom. Hurry to lunch, hurry back. Boots' 19th birthday passed almost without notice. If she paused to think about the day at all it was to reflect that she felt at least 10 years older.

Occasionally she saw Denis. Denis was working hard on the book. He gave himself a daily stint and kept to it religiously. And there were, of course, parties to distract him. So it was only a rare glimpse of his charmed life that Boots observed. Now and then he spoke fleetingly of Kay. She was going to be something or other in the Beaux Arts Pageant. Fenway was going to paint her. Fenway thought her exquisite. Or Kay was flashing off to Paris for a brief business trip. "She's a tremendously clever business person. You'd never suspect it," Denis said innocently.

Boots saw her name in the social lists. Miss Kathleen Chillingford. "Kay Chillingford swished into the Stork Club the other night, very oo-la-la in a black net straight from the Rue de la Paix," wrote Willy Van Snydam in the Evening Streamer. Yes, Kay had a foot in both worlds. She was a success in business and a social light as well. It was merely because of this that Boots envied her. She assured herself of this fact a dozen times a day.

The Christmas rush was in full force now. The store was a night mare of hurried clerks and frantic shoppers, ragged lists clutched in gloved fingertips. Extra clerks were hired; new stock was crowded in. You ran from one place to another like a driven thing.

Christmas came. The day was a ghastly one for Boots. She had bought a scarf and some gloves and sent them to her mother. Until the very last moment she had an exulting hope that her father would send her, would ask her to come some for the holiday dinner. But he didn't. Mrs. Mooney looked in upon her about 12 on her way to "late church."

"We're having a turkey," she said robustly. "Ye must come and help us eat it!"

It was so kind of her, Boots said, but she was going to dine with some friends in Pelham. She told the lie bravely. Not even Mrs. Mooney should pity her.

After Mrs. Mooney had departed Boots dressed hastily with only a casual glance at herself in the mirror. If she had ever been thought pretty, she decided, she certainly had lost any claim to that distinction now. The delicate oval of her face was transparently pale; her eyes were ringed by shadows.

She went out into the snow-encrusted streets. Church bells were ringing all along the way and she passed hurrying groups of people, bundle laden. It seemed to her that she was, in all the big, strangely quiet city, the only person quite alone.

SHE wandered aimlessly over to Fifth Avenue, a slim figure in her dark blue coat, the fur collar pulled up snugly about her face. She would have a brief walk, she told herself. Later she would dine frantically at the little French restaurant near 10th street. She could not quite keep the tears from coming to her eyes. It was dreadful, dreadful to be alone in New York on Christmas Day.

And Denis who might have called . . . might have looked for her . . . had forgotten her. Not even a card. . . .

She squared her shoulders resolutely, facing the wind.

The big car which had been traveling slowly near the curb drew up with a whine of brakes. She heard her name called in loud, cheerful tones.

"Mrs. Lund!"

"Wheeling, she faced the pleasant brown face, the sturdy figure of Edward Van Sciver, muffled in a great coonskin coat.

"I thought it was you," he said with his big, boyish laugh. "I couldn't quite be sure. What luck! I was feeling forlorn as a stray pup, barging along. Then I saw you and I wasn't quite sure . . ."

He was urging her gently toward the car as he spoke, his big, gloved hand under her elbow. Boots protested faintly.

"Ah, but you must come along and have some chow with me," the young man stated firmly. "It would be a Christian act. I was just about to take my throat out and cut it. I was so low."

His family, he said, was still away. He had refused half a dozen invitations for one reason or another. Now, on the great day, he was quite alone.

"But Denis . . ." Boots began casually.

"He's at a house party up near Tuxedo with Kay Chillingford and some people," Edward told her.

Her heart plunged sickeningly. It was nothing to her, she reminded herself sternly, if Denis spent all his time with Kay these days. Hadn't she known ages ago that he was in love with Kay? She, Boots, was the merest acquaintance.

Besides she had sworn never to love another man. What Denis did was no earthly affair of hers.

Presently she found herself opposite Edward in a big, dim, softly lit restaurant with famous music coming from the walls with the traffic of Park Avenue slipping sedately below them. Edward ordered, non-sulted, laughed easily. He was a pleasant person to be with. Boots thought gratefully. She could pretend for a little while that she was really the old Boots Harburn of Larcheck, not the meek, weary clerk of the chintzes at Lacy's.

SHE had not realized she was so hungry. Everything tasted delicious. Edward was the sort of young man who expects and gets perfect service. He was solicitous for her comfort. Would she like a footstool? Was that salad dressing to her liking? His father missed a salad dressing like no other.

"It all tastes marvelous to me," Boots told him. "My regular haunt is the Coffee Pot."

Edward gave a great about at this ingenious revelation.

"It is not." "Oh, but I assure you, it is. I'm a working woman you know."

"No, but seriously," he protested squaring about and facing her. "You have a family up in Westchester, haven't you? What are you doing, proving you can earn your own living? Come clean, my lass."

"I eloped," she told him, seriously. "They're awfully—awfully mad at me."

In spite of herself her voice thickened and blurred, and the traitorous tears threatened to come.

"Husband dead, eh? Denis told me," muttered Edward, made uncomfortable by her show of emotion.

She nodded.

"Now let's not talk about me. It's Christmas Day, and you're giving me a grand party and I've got your shoulder. That's not fair."

She could not talk of Russ to him—or to anyone.

Her companion, who was grateful for the change in atmosphere, began willingly enough to describe his own. He'd been skating a lot, out on the island, he told her. They had a big freeze the week before. It was grand sport. He, she skil, he wanted to know. He was going to Lake Placid later for the winter sports. Perhaps she could come. Kay would be at the Tappens for our week end, at least. And perhaps Denis. Why couldn't she come up, too? Edna Tapper was his cousin. She must meet Edna.

Boots liked all this. Of course she wouldn't be asked to the Tappens. Of course she wouldn't go to Lake Placid. Still it was fun to be with Edward Van Sciver and listen to his enthusiastic planning.

"That is, I suppose Denis and Kay will be there," Edward interposed. "Unless they're married before that. In that case it'll probably be Bermuda."

Boots scarcely heard the rest. Her head was swimming. Her heart had taken one sickening plunge. So it was as close as that was it! Denis and Kay!

Well, it served her right for letting herself think of Denis for a single minute. She had no dignity, no integrity. She had been Russ's wife a few months ago. Now, with a shock, she realized that already Denis mattered in her life.

The New WATERLESS WAY

While the New Utility Cooker brings to you the possibilities of enjoying old-fashioned meals in addition, it permits you to prepare foods by the newer methods of cooking without water.

Science has discovered that there is so much natural moisture in all meats, vegetables and fruits that it is entirely feasible to cook them with little or no water.

About the only reason why we have cooked with water was to avoid burning. Water distributes the heat evenly, conducting it away from the point nearest the fire.

However, after we have cooked our foods we have poured off the excess water and with it we have poured the bone-forming, teeth-building minerals; the iron, calcium and phosphorus that constitute the essential elements which the human system must have. With the new perfected Utility Cooker you can prepare foods deliciously tender and full of these health-building elements. The Utility Cooker is ideal for the housewife who wishes to practice this modern, more healthful and more economical way of cooking.

LET'S TALK ABOUT CLOTHES
 By a "Young Modern"

DENTON.—Just as the "little things in life" means more to a person, the little accessories we use with our clothes are foremost in importance and often radiate the individual personality. They can either be the making or breaking of your entire ensemble, and you can combine any color combination desired and present "that different" slant to the world in general.

Your bag and gloves mean more in the way of accessories than any thing else, girls at Texas State College for Women (CIA) believe. They lend that smart touch to any costume and make you feel "dressed up." Fall bags in alligator and lizard to match the new shoes are the latest thing, but the conventional smooth grain kid will never cease to be popular. Stiffened gloves in blending tones of kid are shown in the new four-button length, and a new corded silk fabric is being used most effectively for gloves during this in-between season.

Modern girls are dressing up their wardrobes this fall. With a little circle of white silk or some color and a few minutes of your time, a crisp jabot can be fashioned to "change the looks" of that navy dress you had last fall. And equally cunning little collar and cuff sets can be made with gay yarn trimmings.

Why not crochet a belt or fish-net scarf out of string if you're after something really different. They're really becoming quite popular on college campuses and make a welcomed addition to any fall frock. Get into the swing for individual sport accessories—fashion acclaims them of foremost importance!

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Don't be surprised at anything that happens in this cockeyed situation involving General Johnson and the NRA.

The one thing which would now astonish insiders who have watched Johnson's grim fight to retain full control of NRA would be success of that effort. But the general is so utterly unpredictable that they can't even be certain he won't win—for a time.

Avowals that there isn't any serious dispute between Johnson on one side and Miss Frances Perkins and Donald Richberg on the other are so much eyewash. Each of the three is bitter. Richberg and Miss Perkins are the spearheads of a general desire among New Dealers—shared by many NRA officials—that Johnson be relegated to a position of secondary importance in the recovery program.

THAT desire is so strong that the picturesque administrator's ambitions for an indefinite tenure are doomed.

The best bet is that Johnson's status will be changed by the end of September and it's more than likely that by that time he will no longer be with NRA.

Many of the current complications are traceable to Johnson's development of an embarrassing habit of changing his mind. The country—and Roosevelt, Richberg, and Miss Perkins—were given plainly to understand early this summer that Johnson had some aroud to the view that NEA was no longer a one-man job, that he should gradually retire from the picture while control was taken over by a board.

BUT recently the other New Dealers learned that Johnson had changed his position—or what they had thought was his position. Johnson charged Richberg and Miss Perkins with a plot to assassinate him.

He indicated a strong personal belief that if he were to give up any of his powers the recovery movement would collapse.

Deprecating Richberg, he said publicly that he himself had given Richberg certain important NRA policy jobs which everyone knew had been assigned to Richberg by Roosevelt.

Now behind the scenes proceeds an interesting contest between the president's extraordinary charm and Johnson's extraordinary temperament. Roosevelt emphatically doesn't want Johnson to leave in a huff and he is grateful for his services.

BETTERS on the sidelines here are laying wagers as to whether the president will be able to sidetrack the general with saving of face for everybody. That obviously is a harder job than Roosevelt had when he had to take George N. Peek out of the AAA and fit him into the government elsewhere.

Even Roosevelt probably can't persuade Johnson that he ought to take a nice trip around the world, studying industrial recovery in other countries, and then tell us all about it when he comes home.

A Pledge For Patriotic Texans

A hundred years of freedom and progress is to be celebrated in 1936. Our progress as a State has been phenomenal. It is a source of pride to the Nation. Texans, true and unafraid, pledge themselves to the unparalleled success of their State's hundredth anniversary.

"Men of thought, be up and stirring." Put this purpose before you. Let every Texan burn the Centennial pledge into his heart:

Pledge

I will think—talk—write . . . Texas Centennial in 1936! This is to be my celebration. In its achievement I may give free play to my patriotic love for Texas' heroic past; my confidence in its glories that are to be . . .
