THIRTY SECOND YEAR

DIMMITT, CASTRO COUNTY, TEXAS, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1959

10 PAGES—NUMBER 32

THIS LAKE South of Dimmitt has grown by leaps and bounds, just like scores of others in the county. As much as ten inches of rain have fallen in some areas of the county during the past few weeks and although the lakes are not yet to record proportions, they are already larger than at any time during the past ten years.

Rain, Hail Batters Crops

Pounding hail storms and heavy rains have spelled virtual disaster to Castro County's crops this year. Wheat has suffered most. A heavy hail Monday night blanketed the south part of the county and pounded nearly all wheat crops into a mass of straw. Only isolated areas were spared from a line about three miles south and parallel to Highway 86 to the Castro-Lamb county line. Some hope remains, however, for cotton farmers who have until the latter part of June to replant. Some farmers say they would plant as late as the 25th, but others claim the cut-off date would be the 15th or 20th. The major problem here is whether or not fields will be dry enough to plant sometime between now and then.

Week before last a hard hail battered the north part of the county, causing similar havoc to wheat and cotton farmers there. Cotton then, as happened this week, was washed out. Vegetables in the county also were ruined by the onslaught of crop-battering weather. Rain reports ranged from five inches Monday night south between Dimmitt and Hart to two inches in Dimmitt and north. A general one-half inch rain fell Tuesday night and an inch fell Wednesday evening. Wednesday's rainfall brought Dimmitt's weekly total to 3.5 inches. The seasonal turbulent weather can be expected to last most of this month. Laves over the county which had been more or less dry for the past several years are now at their highest point in nearly a decade.

The lakes south and west of Dimmitt have been known to reach adjacent highways and although are not near there now they could easily do so if the continuing seige of rain continues. Erosion of fields has been considerable since the rains started and large washouts have shown up where fields emptied their water load into nearby lakes. The rain provided water conservation engineers working on the Bill Sutton farm southeast of town with more latitude in experimentation. Although the lake almost covered up their operation there, the experimenters used a boat to spread their flocculating agent over the lake surface to see if it would economically settle out suspended dirt particles. Results of the test is not known but if it does it would mean that farmers with recharge wells could start draining lakes as soon as the rain stopped in the future without losing much water to evaporation or waiting for them to go down to where the normal settling basin operation would be practical. There have been no funnel clouds reported. Some wheat presently remains intact just south of Dimmitt and in spotted areas over the county. But generally speaking, the county's wheat loss should approach 75 percent. With the heavy damage to the county's two main money crops, most people connected with farming expect that large acreages of grain sorghums will be planted this year. Although the net price this year is only $1.27, this crop may provide some farms with their only income for the year.

There have been several people who have come into our office during the last few months extremely bitter over someone either shooting or poisoning their dogs. If they could have caught the person or persons responsible there would have been considerable fur ying. We agree with these people that anyone who would indiscriminately shoot or poison a dog is a heel of the first order and should be run out of town. Right or wrong, the City of Dimmitt has set up a program for trying to eliminate stray dogs. This has been fairly effective and as far as we know there have been no complaints. This is the lawful way for eliminating dogs if they must be eliminated. We lost two dogs once that had been almost like members of the family. After they died what must have been a horrible death, we found several pieces of poisoned bacon in the yard. All the dogs in the block were killed by some unkind whose health would have undergone a great alteration of the neighborhood could have located him. If a dog is causing difficulty by (Continued on Page Ten)

ASC to Permit B Plan Switch

In a meeting of ASC officials in Dimmitt Thursday evening, the announcement was made that farmers who had elected to plant their cotton under the B plan would be given the opportunity of reverting back to plan A to protect their grade if they were hailed out. The meeting, instigated by state ASC committeeman Allan Webb, was told by ASC officials that any farmer who had his cotton hailed or flooded out either totally or down to normal plan A acreage, could make application to the county ASC committee for plan A participation. Charlie Hill, county ASC secretary, said May 15 to June 1 were considered optimum planting time dates for best grade in this area and that since about 60 percent of the county's cotton was hailed out it was felt that many Plan B farmers would be put in a serious bind by having to plant late. Hill urged that B plan farmers come in immediately if they want to make the change. Some 20 percent of the county's cotton farmers are operating under the B plan which permits overplanting allotments by 40 percent but allows only 60 percent of plan A price support. Poor grade would be hard to sell and there would be some loan protection under Plan A whereas Plan B would have little or no protection.

A new library-auditorium building at the college was dedicated Thursday in memory of the parents of Dr. and Mrs. Cogswell, the J. R. Cogswells of Hillsboro, and the C. Alexanders of Floydada. Dr. and Mrs. Cogswell will retain title to the property until their deaths, when it will go to the Church of Christ sponsored college.

N. F. Cleavingers Complete Trip to Holy Land and Russia

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cleavinger are probably the only non-military people in Castro County to have been in Moscow, Russia since World War II. But Russia wasn't the only country Mr. and Mrs. Cleavinger visited during their recent globe-trotting tour. They also stood by the River Jordan and the Sea of Galilee of Biblical fame and saw the great pyramids, cemeteries of the ancient pharaohs. Their trip took them through Israel, new homeland of the world's Jews and through Jewish archememy country Arabia. From Russia, the Cleavingers journeyed to Copenhagen, Denmark; to Amsterdam, Holland; and to Edinburgh, Scotland and then to London, England. In all, their trip took five weeks and by using jet airliners the Cleavingers were able to spend most of their time looking at historical and contemporary world marvels instead of traveling. "I consider our stay in the Holy Lands and in Russia as the two most important points of our visit," Mr. Cleavinger said. "We feel like we covered the Holy Land very well, but our four-day stay in Russia was just too short to do much more than just see some of the places of major importance. "Russia is an unsmiling country—cheerless and unfriendly."

Mr. Cleavinger, said of the Communist Country. Mr. and Mrs. Cleavinger began their trip by landing in Paris from the United States. From there they went to Italy and Switzerland and other European points of interest before journeying on to Cairo where they saw first hand some of the remnants of Biblical history. They saw shops that have remained unchanged for hundreds of years, the pyramids and other artifacts of Egyptian life. They then went on to Israel where they saw the tremendous engineering feats the Jews are undertaking to wrest a nation's economy from a desert land. "You can feel the intense hatred the Arabs have for the Jews," Mr. Cleavinger told the Lions Club at their noon luncheon Tuesday, "and naturally some of this feeling is reciprocated. There is a situation of tension and unrest but at least things seem to have at least reached a stalemate for the time being at least."

From Israel they journeyed back to Europe where they entered Russia through Budapest, Hungary. "The hotel that was arranged for us in Moscow by Intourist, the Russian travel agency, was good and it was new. The surroundings were luxurious, although the workmanship in the hotel was poor. We were mostly impressed by the lack of laughter and the solemn looks on everyone's face."

Another thing that impressed Mr. Cleavinger during his stay in Russia and Europe was that "you can't tell who is American and who isn't... they all look just like us."

The Cleavingers took a tour that included a Russian Orthodox Church monastery. This church believes in the Christian God and is

"CHURCH HISTORY"
The policy of Constantine, at first was not to interfere with pagan worship, but by filing high positions and surrounding himself with Christians, he made their position enviable. He did not adopt Christianity as the State religion but he virtually gave it that position. Constantine, himself, was known as the bishop of bishops, and yet he was not baptised until the year of his death. Thus we see how the unconverted and unscrupulous persons with hardy morals are becoming Christians and began to change the simpleness of the teaching of Christ.

In 1949 the Congress passed the "Reorganization Act of 1949". It required, among other things, that reorganization plans adopted by the Executive Branch of the government be transmitted to the Congress. It also provided that no provision contained in such a reorganization plan should become effective unless the plan was transmitted to Congress before June 1, 1950. The bill before the House the other day had to do with changing the deadline from June 1, 1950 to June 1, 1961. A great debate arose on the House floor, not so much because of the proposed change of date, but because of the controversial nature of the original Act itself. The big issue involved had to do with the provision in the bill that, if a reorganization plan was submitted to the Congress, it would reduce effect upon the expiration of 60 days unless a resolution was adopted by one of the Houses of Congress specifically disapproving the plan. This means that the Executive (President) Branch of the government would write the legislation under this bill and submit it to the Congress. If the Congress, through one of its Houses, did not veto the legislation, it would become law. This procedure is in direct reverse of the procedure outlined under the Constitution. Legislation drafted by the President is submitted to the Congress and submitted to the President. The President has the right to veto the legislation. So, you can see that the procedure under the Reorganization Act simply reversed the operations of the government. Many Members of Congress opposed this procedure, as did I. I think that history will prove that our fore-fathers knew a lot better how to handle this sort of situation than those who are so anxious to pass legislation that they can't wait for the Congress to draft the bill and take affirmative action on it.

One Member, who was opposed to the bill in the first instance, entered into the debate on the amendment and advised the House that one of the main reasons given for wanting to grant Mr. Eisenhower the power under the Reorganization Act was because the same powers had been held by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Truman. This Member observed that he had understood that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Truman had both had the measles, but no one had suggested giving them to Mr. Eisenhower. But, to get back to the new

Watch for the above word. It may become one of common usage, borne of mistake by most executives and, perhaps, appropriate at the point of mistake.

In 1949 the Congress passed the "Reorganization Act of 1949". It required, among other things, that reorganization plans adopted by the Executive Branch of the government be transmitted to the Congress. It also provided that no provision contained in such a reorganization plan should become effective unless the plan was transmitted to Congress before June 1, 1950. The bill before the House the other day had to do with changing the deadline from June 1, 1950 to June 1, 1961. A great debate arose on the House floor, not so much because of the proposed change of date, but because of the controversial nature of the original Act itself. The big issue involved had to do with the provision in the bill that, if a reorganization plan was submitted to the Congress, it would reduce effect upon the expiration of 60 days unless a resolution was adopted by one of the Houses of Congress specifically disapproving the plan. This means that the Executive (President) Branch of the government would write the legislation under this bill and submit it to the Congress. If the Congress, through one of its Houses, did not veto the legislation, it would become law. This procedure is in direct reverse of the procedure outlined under the Constitution. Legislation drafted by the President is submitted to the Congress and submitted to the President. The President has the right to veto the legislation. So, you can see that the procedure under the Reorganization Act simply reversed the operations of the government. Many Members of Congress opposed this procedure, as did I. I think that history will prove that our fore-fathers knew a lot better how to handle this sort of situation than those who are so anxious to pass legislation that they can't wait for the Congress to draft the bill and take affirmative action on it.

One Member, who was opposed to the bill in the first instance, entered into the debate on the amendment and advised the House that one of the main reasons given for wanting to grant Mr. Eisenhower the power under the Reorganization Act was because the same powers had been held by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Truman. This Member observed that he had understood that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Truman had both had the measles, but no one had suggested giving them to Mr. Eisenhower. But, to get back to the new

Corner on Cotton
BY BOB COLLINS

Confusion as to how many acres will be planted to cotton this season follows the government announcement of farmers choosing "B" with its 40 per cent increase... about 2.5 million acres went into "B" cotton... this looks like 16.8 million acres of cotton planted in a half million acres of the authorized land will go into conservation reserve... but there won't be for its looks are deceiving... all of the "B" acreage will be planted if possible, but a considerable amount of the "A" acreage won't be... many farmers won't plant and won't turn in their allotment so some one else may use it... and some men have allotments who aren't farmers anymore... they have abandoned their farming and moved to the city and have found it too much trouble to notify their ASC committee... as predicted, California put a greater percentage of acreage into "B" than any other state... 69.6%... and Georgia was low with 1.4%... about 16% of the basic allotment of the country went into "B".

Red Cotton Up?
Reports from Red China say its 1959 cotton crop may reach 15 million bales... more than double the '58 production... will this mean that more Red China textiles will be sold at very low prices in the East? ... Japan and India both have suffered from the in the past and of course U. S. cotton feels it in reduced Eastern mill markets.

Make A Guess
How much money is spent by cotton farmers each year to control weeds? ... it's almost $450 million... surprised??? ... think what it would mean to the pocketbook if research could stop this!!!

Just That Ud Like To Know?

Did your Dad ever own any "mules"? Mine did. I can see him yet, trying to harness his team! It was quite a ritual. He had one ole mule, let's call him "Sam", that absolutely detested being harnessed-up. Sam would just BALK. Dad would inch up a bit, harness in hand, and Sam, being a pretty sharp mule, would inch a bit, too. Then suddenly, Sam would turn around, hind part before, and start backing at Dad with his hind feet slapping at the air. Dad had practice, though, and expected same. So, he, not being unprepared, would have laid down the harness and would have picked up a long board or post and would whack Sam across his "whacking place". The battle was on. Finally, Dad would win, but not until he had put up quite a fight. Then, after the team was all hitched up to the wagon, I would make my appearance. I'd ask where he was going, hoping it would be to town after a load of coal or something, so I could go along too. I always felt so important, riding there by my Dad, when we drove into town. We'd go to the elevator for coal and I'd play in the coal pile and hunt out those little cardboard disk, jentling the kind of coal, and get as many as I could. I used them for "play-money". Then, on the way home, Dad would whistle. Man! I thought he could whistle better than anyone in the whole world. I started early trying to whistle, and there was no prouder kid than I when I could manage somewhat of a tune and whistle along with him. We never talked on those wagon trips to town, we didn't have to (anyway, talk wasissy). There were plenty of noises, anyway, wagon squeaking, horses snorting, dogs barking, etc. But I always managed a quick fade-out when it came to unloading. I'd show up, again, later to hunt for more "play-money". Lack for us, the that we had no bridges to cross. Sam, being the character that he was, hated bridges, for some reason or the other. He'd get right up to it and then STOP! ! Sorta threw the wagon at an angle as the other mule, or mules, would stop... right then, I mean. Then Dad would do his act and use the reins to sway ole Sam. After, what seemed like ages, Sam would go on... but not enthusiastically until he'd gotten across that bridge. But he was a good mule, strong. Coal production per man will rise 3 to 4.5 tons from the present 10-ton-per-man level by the beginning of 1960, it is predicted. This expansion in output directly reflects greater mechanization in mining operations.

Architects often advise hunting couples with pre-teenage children to seek out homes with feature wood paneled walls in living and dining areas. Such walls offer the best protection against wear and tear from active youngsters.

... about dimmitt

ruining flowers, chasing chickens or just being a pest, then the owner should be notified and given a chance to remedy the situation. The dog doesn't know any better and the owner often doesn't know his animal is causing trouble.

We will be only too happy to print the name of any person caught poisoning or shooting a dog without just cause in or around Dimmitt.

A ruling by the Texas Supreme Court this week could very well make a farce out of prohibition in the state's dry counties.

The Court ruled that beer or whisky can be sold in any precinct or town in the state if its residents want it that way.

This means that if the residents of Castro County's precinct 1 or 2 or 3 or 4 wanted legal liquor sales in their precinct, all they would have to do would be to call an election and vote it that way.

The ruling was based on a 1935 Constitutional Amendment that smaller units of government shall prevail over a county. (We tried to find this amendment in our copy of the fouled-up Texas Constitution but after several cups of coffee and the elapse of considerable time, we gave up). But that's the way it is, and it takes little reflection to see what can happen.

If one precinct votes wet, then for all practical purposes the entire county might as well be wet. And it won't necessarily be the will of the majority within the county. In a precinct election for instance, if one community or part of a large community which lies in a certain precinct votes wet, then it can enforce legal liquor on other communities within the same precinct if the larger community could amass enough wet votes. In many counties in the state it is not uncommon for ten percent or even less of the citizens to live in one precinct. If this segment voted wet, then the rest of the county might as well be wet whether they wanted it or not.

This is putting democracy on the local level, all right, but while doing so, it can enforce the will of the minority. Often times most of a county's low-income groups live in one precinct. While many of these people are irrevocable dries, the most of them could reasonably be expected to vote wet. If this should happen the rest of the county would have all the drawbacks of a wet situation dumped right on their back doorstep.

We are not interested in pious tub-thumping for the dries. But we know and have seen the moral depravity that comes to a community with legal liquor sales. Even a heavy drinker must admit that this means teen-agers will have access to alcohol, that moderate drinkers will be tempted to spend more of their income in this direction, that the moral caliber of the community will suffer and that contemptable, undesirable elements will emerge in the community.

And because the Texas Supreme Court has declared that one community in a precinct or the entire precinct can vote to legalize alcohol, then we can expect the state to someday be entirely wet for all intents and purposes.

According to the statement county judges and commissioners courts must grant local option elections to cities, towns and precincts as well as counties.

We might point out that the court's decision is not final pending action on a motion for a re-hearing.

But we would guarantee that one day soon there will be many sparks flying within traditionally dry counties over the state as cities and precincts campaign to vote themselves wet.
