BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 31. A state-wide appeal for an "unarmed march" upon Baton Rouge in protest against Huey Long's dictatorship and for a "clean-up in government" was wired to Square Deal headquarters today by Ernest Bourgeois, its fugitive president, now in Mississippi.
"The time has come to act," said the militant young leader of the anti-Long forces, whose arrest is sought by the Louisiana administration in connection with an alleged plot to assassinate the "king-fish."

Healing of broken hearts with money is just a racket, Mrs. Roberta Nicholson, above, only woman member of the Indiana legislature, declares, and she has introduced a bill to make filing of a civil suit for heart balm or testimony in such a suit a penal offense. She is the daughter-in-law of Meredith Nicholson, author and U. S. minister to Venezuela.

Virge Foster and Loss Woods, deputy, this morning were forced to abandon a half-hour chase at high speed of a man whom they sought after a call had been received from Gorman his car had crashed into another and the man was thought intoxicated.
In the car was a young girl, about 3 or 4, officers said, who had been a passenger in the automobile while the driver several times narrowly escaped collision in his successful attempt to escape the officers.

Closet Where Ransom Money Lay

The broom closet in the Bruno Hauptmann Bronx home, in which the prisoner claims he placed the box containing Lindbergh ransom money which he says was left with him by the late Isidor Fisch is shown here, in a facsimile of the photograph which the state placed in evidence in the Flemington trial. The box, according to Hauptmann's statement, lay for some time in a spot almost beneath the sink, in the lower right-hand corner of the photo.

THREE ALIBIS PRESENTED FOR HAUPTMANN

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 31. Bruno Hauptmann's alibis for the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder stood at three today, against seven prosecution witnesses, who have identified him with the crime.
The Bronx German's witnesses have been:
1. Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, his wife, who said he called for her at the bakery where she worked on the evening of March 1, 1932.
2. Elbert Carlstrom, a Swedish young man who went to the bakery that night on an amorous mission and who says he had a strange encounter with the prisoner.
3. Louis Kiss, a Hungarian silk painter, who declared he saw Hauptmann talking with his wife about a police dog on that date.
Attorney General David Wilentz fought to break down the alibis. He achieved his greatest success with Carlstrom, who contradicted himself on two parts of his story and was forced to admit he had been acquainted with Anna Hauptmann—and one of his "girl friends" was an intimate of hers.

Girl Nazis Held Returns to U. S.

Elsa Sittell is pictured here, smiling her pleasure at being in the United States again. The Brooklyn girl went to Europe to vote in the Saar plebiscite; instead she spent 10 days in a German prison for allegedly making remarks that "insulted" Chancellor Hitler. She didn't care to discuss her experience.

OUTLINES THE MAIN POINTS IN PROGRAM

Post Office Would Pay Only For Mail Carried To Cut Deficit.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—President Roosevelt today recommended to congress formation of a centralized transportation agency which would control aviation as well as all other forms of transportation.
Transmitting the report of the federal aviation commission, he advised congress he was unable to concur with the report's recommendation for establishment of a separate air commerce commission to regulate aviation.
Problems of all forms of transportation are so closely interlinked that the president felt ultimate supervision over all should rest with one body to be built around the present interstate commerce commission.

Lions Are Told of Future Farmers and The Work They Do

P. A. Tankley, sectional agriculture of the Ranger High School, spoke before the Lions club at its meeting today and gave an interesting account of the vocational agriculture work being done.
He explained how the agricultural classes were financed under the Smith-Hughes act, with the state paying part of the expenses and the federal government part.
He said that each student had his choice of one of three projects for the year, including feeding some animal and selling it for profit, raising poultry for profit, or farming acreage and selling the produce raised. There are three degrees, with the first-year students being given a state degree of future farmers and the third-year students being given a national degree of Future Farmers of America.
Dr. H. A. Loesdon read the list of projects which was submitted by the Lion membership at the last meeting and three were selected from the group for the coming year.
It was announced that the annual ladies night would be held some time early in April and R. F. Holloway, Clyde Davis, A. N. Larson, W. B. Crossley and Lloyd Bruce were appointed as a committee to make arrangements for the meeting.

Each boy is planning on how he will conduct his campaign and each is anxious to win the big prize. Announcements will be made from time to time as to the standing of the boys.
A special offer is being made in today's issue, on page one, which every subscriber should read.

Tax Collector to Be at City Hall Until 5:30 Today

Those who have not paid their poll taxes can still do so and secure their right to vote in any elections to be held this year, though today is the last day on which payment of the poll taxes will entitle one to a vote.
An assistant tax collector is stationed at the city hall in Ranger, where the poll taxes can be paid without making a trip to Eastland. The assistant collector said this morning that the poll tax payments were rather slow in coming in, but that he would remain at the city hall until 5 or 5:30 this afternoon in order to accommodate as many as possible.
The tax collector's office in Eastland will remain open until between 10 and 10:30, it was stated this morning, so that those who do not have an opportunity to pay their poll taxes during the day can do so at the courthouse in Eastland tonight.

SHEPARD TRIAL TESTIMONY IS TAKEN TODAY

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 31.—The government, seeking to convict Major Shepard on the charge he poisoned his second wife at Fort Riley, Kan., in January, 1929, called to the stand today pathologists to pound home to the jury the contention that Mrs. Zenna Shepard's death was caused by mercury poisoning.
Major J. E. Ash, government pathologist, was recalled, and a hypothetical question covering several typewritten pages was read to him by S. S. Alexander, United States district attorney. It covered all the medical facts revealed in Mrs. Shepard's death.
"Assuming all the statements in the question are true, can you state the cause of death?" he was asked.
"Yes; her death was due to mercury," said Major Ash.
The defense contends Mrs. Shepard took the mercury in a mouth wash she swallowed.

Whisky, Cigarets Do Not Subsidize Press Of Akron University
By United Press
AKRON, O.—Akron university's newspaper, the Buchtelite, is a subsidized publication of the whisky and cigaret interests, the Rev. George W. Knepper, Akron minister, charged before the Akron Ministerial association.
H. E. Simmons, president of the university, emphatically denied the charges. "If legitimate advertising is subsidy, then it is true. We have carried a cigaret advertisement in the Buchtelite for a long time. I do not know why he should make any statement about the whisky interests. We have never carried a whisky advertisement. It is the privilege of ministers to say anything they please, but they should have the facts," Simmons said.

Civilization May Lead To A Simpler Life

Benjamin Franklin has been called "the first civilized American"; nevertheless, wise old man that he was, he was never entirely sold on the idea that the civilized man is really happier than the untaught savage.

All this comes to light in the discovery of marginal comments by Franklin in an old book owned by the Library of Congress. This book, published in 1770, undertook to review the happiness which civilization brings, and Franklin scribbled his dissent on the edge of one of the pages.

"The difference," he wrote, "is not so great as may be imagined. Happiness is more generally and equally diffused among savages than in our civilized societies. No European who has once tasted savage life can afterwards bear to live in our societies.

"The care and labor of providing for artificial and fashionable wants the sight of so many rich wallowing in superfluous plenty, whereby so many are kept poor and distressed by want; the insolence of office, the snares and plagues of law, the restraints of custom, all contribute to disgust them with what we call civil society."

If Franklin found the leisurely pastoral society of his day uncomfortably complex and contradictory, one wonders what he would have thought of life in the America of 1935. Probably he would have yelled for a new sheet of paper and sat down to make a new list of the ways in which the savage has it all over the civilized man.

For savages, after all, do not get themselves into the kind of tangle where people go shoeless because there are too many shoes, breadless because there is too much wheat, and moneyless because there is too much hard cash in the land.

Nor, getting themselves into difficulties, do they seek to remedy shortages of essentials by cutting down the available supplies of food, clothing, and other necessities.

In lesser matters, too, the savage has the bulge on us. He does not have to read about Hauptmann trials; he does not have to listen to crooners, nor does he kill 35,000 people a year in the process of moving from one place to another, as we do.

He does not have the infidelities and imbecilities of a Hollywood to support, nor must he listen to senators explaining that his country will go to the dogs if it joins the World Court.

Is the answer, then, that we must give the country back to the Indians forthwith, and woo the simple life while squatting placidly under a tree? Not at all. We simply

Income Tax In A Nutshell

WHO MUST FILE RETURNS

Returns are required of every single person who for the year 1934 had a gross income of $5,000 or more or a net income of $1,000 or more and of every husband and wife living together who for the year 1934 had an aggregate gross income of $5,000 or more or an aggregate net income of $2,500 or more. Widowers, widows, divorcees, and married persons separated by mutual consent are classified as simple persons. The personal exemptions are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families.

Husband and wife living together may make separate returns of the income of each, or their income may be included in a single joint return. If separate returns are filed, one may not report income which belongs to the other, but must report only the income which actually belongs to him. If a joint return is filed, such return is treated as a taxable unit, and the income disclosed is subject to both the normal tax and the surtax.

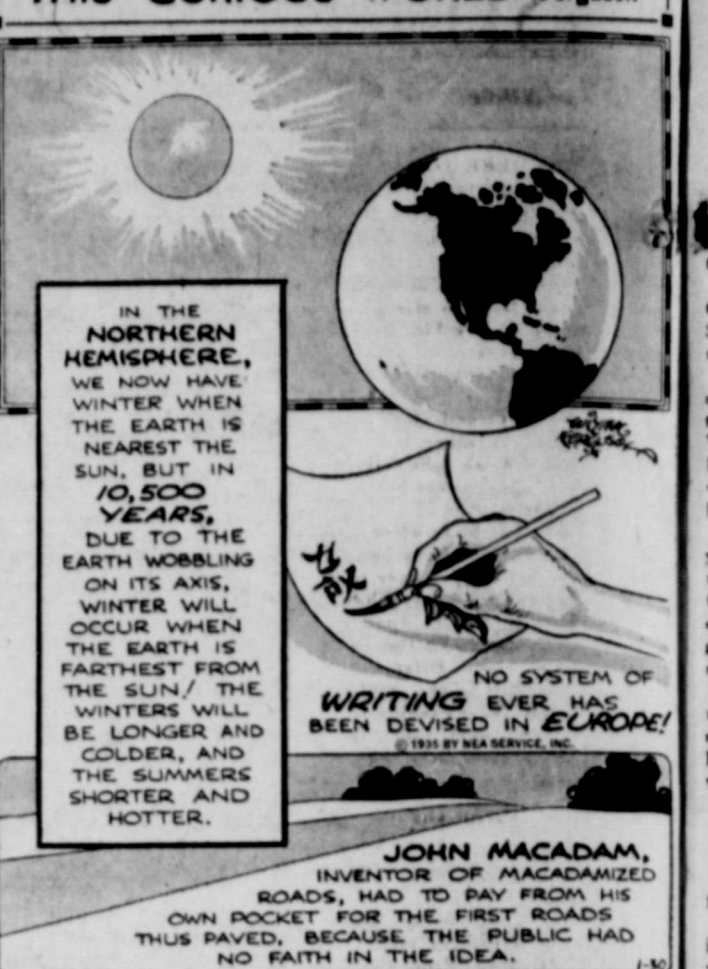

Husband and wife may elect each year whether to file a joint return or separate returns. Where, however, joint or separate returns have been filed for a particular year, neither husband nor wife may after the due date of the return file an amended return or returns on a different basis for that year.

NO SYSTEM OF WRITING EVER HAS BEEN DEvised IN EUROPE!
JOHN MACADAM, INVENTOR OF MACADAMIZED ROADS, HAD TO PAY FROM HIS OWN POCKET FOR THE FIRST ROADS THUS PAVED, BECAUSE THE PUBLIC HAD NO FAITH IN THE IDEA.

EUROPE was without writing as late as 3000 B. C. For this accomplishment, as well as for many other things necessary to the progress of civilization, Europe turned to the Orient and the Near East, where writing had been used for a thousand years or more.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Gale Henderson, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 2-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

Steve Meyers, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Later that evening Gale goes skating on the river, goes through the ice and is rescued by Brian Westmore, whose father, now dead built the mill. Brian asks Gale to wait while he gets his car but when he returns she is gone.

Brian has come home after two years in Paris, convinced he can never be an artist and eager to go to work in the mill. Vicky Thatcher, daughter of Robert Thatcher, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.

Brian sees Gale in the mill and recognizes her. Next evening when she comes from work she finds Brian waiting. He asks if he can walk home with her.

Now Go On With The Story

CHAPTER XIII
Brian Westmore was waiting for his answer.

Gale knew everyone was watching them. A stream of men and women was pouring from the mill and Gale could feel their eyes on her. She could imagine what they were saying, too. Her cheeks flushed.

And Brian Westmore stood there waiting.

She said, "I—I'm sorry but—" and then she saw Steve, not a dozen yards ahead. He had turned and was looking back at her. "There's someone waiting for me," Gale went on quickly. She raised her head, met Brian Westmore's eyes directly.

"Oh, I see. Well, good-night—"

His smile was just as friendly as he moved away. Gale noticed how well he carried himself. He was almost as big as Steve, only straighter. And Josie was right about it; he certainly was good-looking.

There was still color in Gale's cheeks as she hurried ahead to meet Steve. "I wondered if you waited," she began. "I didn't see you."

"No, I guess you didn't."

Steve was moving beside her now but there was something queer about his voice. Gale glanced at him side-wise. She said, "I suppose you heard about Connie Bauman fainting this afternoon?"

"Yes, I heard about it."

Something was definitely wrong. Steve didn't look at her. His voice was flat, almost cold. They walked in silence for a few moments and then he turned abruptly. "Well," he said, "aren't you going to tell me about it?"

"About what?"

"About how you happen to be so friendly with Brian Westmore?"

"Steve!"

"Well, you are, aren't you? I saw you talking to him, smiling at him. You must be on pretty good terms. I didn't know you were so well acquainted."

Gale stopped. "You've no right to say things like that," she began. Steve interrupted before she could continue.

"Oh, haven't I? I suppose it's nothing when the son of the owner of the mill hangs around the employes' entrance, waiting for one of the girls! I suppose you think everyone in the mill isn't talking about you! Well, they are. About you and Brian Westmore. Everybody saw you together. Did he ask for a date tonight?"

"Steve Meyers! If you're trying to be insulting you're certainly succeeding."

"I notice you haven't answered any of my questions."

"And what's more I don't intend to. Since when have I been obliged to account to you for the people I speak to. I'll talk to Brian Westmore or anyone else as often as I want to!"

"So you did make a date with him? You're going out with him!"

"You can't talk to me like that!"

Gale's face was white now. "You've no right to say such things!"

Steve's voice was level, dangerously level. "You seem to be forgetting," he said, "that I asked you a question a few days ago. An important question. You promised me an answer and I've been waiting for it—"

"Then you can have it right now. I'm not going to marry you—ever! I—I thought I would, once, but I've changed my mind. You've changed it for me—right now. I wouldn't marry a man who didn't trust me and you don't or you wouldn't say the things you are saying. I didn't know you could be so unjust and cruel and hateful!"

"And I didn't know you were the kind of girl to fall for a rich guy with a line—a guy who doesn't think you're any better than the dirt under his feet!"

With blazing eyes the girl faced him. "Will you please leave me," she said. "I don't care to hear the things you're saying and I don't want to be seen with you. Not ever again. I wouldn't have believed you could talk the way you have if I hadn't heard it with my own ears. Now I've heard it and I hope you'll leave."

"I certainly will, if you feel that way."

"It's exactly the way I feel."

Their eyes met and held. Steve said, in a voice suddenly lower than pitched, "You're sure you mean that?"

"Every word of it!"

He hesitated an instant. Then he said, "All right—I'm going," and turned and walked back toward the mill.

Gale went on rapidly, her head held high. She was angry at Steve and angry at herself because she knew some of the things Steve had said were true. People would talk about her conversation with Brian Westmore. The girls would be sure to ask questions. She must think of something to tell them.

Two of the O'Connor children were playing in the yard as Gale passed—a little girl and a boy a few years younger. Gale was a favorite with the children because sometimes she told them stories. They saw her now and came running.

"No, Gale!"

"Come 'n play with us—"

She shook her head. "I'm sorry, honey. I can't tonight."

"Aw, please!"

"No, I have work to do."

The little girl caught her arm. "Why, you're crying!" she said, startled. "There are tears in your eyes. Did someone hurt you?"

Gale shook her head, forcing a smile. "No," she said, "I'm not crying, Katie. It's just that I've got a cold. Oh, dear, I'm going to sneeze!"

She dried her eyes with the handkerchief. "I'd love to play with you," she went on, "but I have dozens of things to do. Some other time, though—"

They walked with her, chattering until they reached the Henderson house. Dusk had fallen but there was no light in the house. Gale let herself in and called, "Father!"

"Yes."

He was sitting in his favorite chair before a window looking out on the street. "I saw you coming," he said. "Who were the children with you?"

"Two of the little O'Connors. Tim O'Connor's youngsters?"

"Yes."

Gale was putting away her hat and coat. She said, "It's so dark in here, Father, you can't see anything. You ought to have a light."

"I like it better this way," he told her. "Cold out, isn't it?"

"Yes, pretty cold."

"There must be quite a wind. I noticed the way the trees are bending." He paused and then went on. "Steve didn't walk home with you?"

"No."

"Steve's a good boy, Gale. A fine boy." He paused as though he were something more he wanted to say but evidently changed his mind.

Later, over the evening meal, Gale thought her father looked tired but he denied it. He'd been feeling unusually well all day, he said. Put on his coat at noon and took a few steps outdoors to get a breath of air. He'd passed the time of day with Old Den Geddis from across the street.

Gale went on the stairs, her frame was stooped and his clothes hung about him loosely. There were little pouches beneath his eyes and his cheeks had an unhealthy tinge. Gale, facing him, thought it was really shocking how he had changed in two years.

"How about a game of cribbage tonight?" Tom Henderson asked his son.

"I'll take you on," Phil told him. Gale, clearing the table and heating dish water, was pleased. She was glad to have Phil at home, glad to have him entertaining their father. She had heard Phil's explanation of his bronzed eye—some thing about a mishap with a box of tools. Well, that was better than for their father to know the truth.

She heard the cribbage players keeping score as she hung about the damp tea towels and put the dish pan on its hook. Neither her father or Phil looked up as she slipped from the room.

She went into her bedroom and closed the door. There was no moon tonight, but Gale went to the window and pressed her face against the pane. The darkness was comforting. A big star, hanging just over the roof tops, blinked at her. Millions of miles away, that star was. Millions and billions of miles away—

The star shimmered enticingly and suddenly its hard light seemed cruel. Cruel and unjust as Steve had been. How could Steve have said the things he had to her—Steve who had told her he loved her, Steve on whom she had always counted!

Hot tears fell on Gale's cheek and she brushed them aside. She stared out at the star and the black sky. She was angry at Steve—but that wasn't why she was crying.

Gale thought, "I wonder why Brian Westmore wanted to walk home with me. I wish—"

She wouldn't permit herself to finish the sentence.

PHILADELPHIA—James Joseph Dykes is shifting the accomplished Al Simmons from left to center field to complete a straight-through-center combination that should be exceptionally skillful when the Chicago White Sox take the field this spring.

The acquisition of Luke Sewell gives the Pale Hose a seasoned pitcher.

Luke Appling and Jack Hayes, both of whom were out for the greater part of the 1934 campaign with injuries, rate near the top as a keystone combination.

No club gets anywhere without a polished straight-through-center defense. A vast percentage of chances are handled just to either side of a line running from the catcher to the center fielder.

Like most major league managers, Dykes does not reside in the city where he operates during the summer. To see the manager of the Chicago Americans, you have to visit Philadelphia, where the personable Jimmy conducts a bowling and billiard academy.

Tired old eyes last season saw the White Sox as the worst club in the history of either big wheel, but Dykes is positive his athletes won't finish in the basement in 1935, despite the fact that there isn't any too much change in personnel.

Washington, Simmons, and Radcliffe

VERNON WASHINGTON, second best hitter in the American Association, supplants Simmons in left field, with Radcliffe, a former Athletic up again from Louisville, in right. Dykes now lists Mule Haas as an extra hand, together with Hafee, a nephew of the bespectacled and respected Chick, who is being brought on from the Pacific Coast League, and Jocko Conlon.

Dykes dispels all doubt in regard to Simmons remaining with the White Sox, and will be disappointed if the Pole doesn't have one of his finest years. Radcliffe played enough in 1934 to convince his commanding officer that he is capable of making good on the big time.

Would Settle for Four Good Ones

AS in the cases of practically every other outfit, pitching is the Chicago entry's most perplexing problem. Dykes will look over a dozen or more deceivers, alleged and otherwise, and gladly would settle for four good ones. What manager wouldn't?

Dykes speaks first of Kennedy, a young man who turned in three splendidly pitched games during the lag end of last season. Kennedy, another Athletic castoff, was obtained from Oklahoma City.

Les Tietje is considered the star of the staff, and Dykes hopes to have the benefit of what speed and spinning is left in the once cunning sleeves of Meat Earnshaw, Ted Lyons and Sad Sam Jones.

Dykes to Employ Cochrane Psychology

"AFTER a club has been in a rut for any length of time, and gets into the losing habit, it is a tough job to convince the players that they really can win," said Dykes.

"It usually is with the addition of a competent hustler here and there that the athletes finally come out of the doldrums and begin to win. An aggregation like that frequently is hard to stop, as were the Detroit Tigers when Mickey Cochrane started lashing them last season."

"I hope to convince my men that they are as capable as any other group in the league. It may take several years, but I feel that I can do it, and am confident that I have the nucleus of a club that is headed for the first division."

ing the present competitive bidding system, but with the provisions that they report in detail to congress.

7. That government regulation of private flying be "simplified as far as possible and kept to a minimum compatible with public safety."

The commission reported that the present American Air Trans- portation system leads, the world but that many lines are facing financial difficulties, jeopardizing their continued operation.

Added powers, the report said, must be given the Interstate Commerce commission under present air mail laws to take emergency steps to insure continued maintenance of air mail lines pending enactment of the new permanent federal policy.

Speaking of near development of trans-oceanic flying, the report said, "America should participate in such services with both flying boats and rigid airships."

"Flying boat service should be developed along the same lines as domestic air transport, with direct financial aid as necessary allocated to the operation by the proposed air commerce commission.

"Airship service would be provided through construction by the government of a large airship and suitable base with provisions made for its subsequent lease to a qualified commercial operator."

The new air commerce commission, the report said, should have full power to issue operation certificates to air transport companies, control rates, schedules, service conditions, subsidies, and supervise financial structures and relationships of companies.

The commission would foster also development of additional airports and purchase helium gas from the government for private rigid airships.

The commission said that it felt grave concern over the "apparent lack of adequate facilities for co-ordination between the army and the navy."

The commission asserted that criticism, however, of alleged inefficiency of the army, while flying the air mail last year, was "exaggerated in all respects" and most of it "unjustified."

In praising the military pilots, the commission asserted that the criticism was "essentially similar to campaigns in other great aircraft-producing countries."

Future military aircraft development, the commission said, should be aimed to increase energy through promotion of Diesel engines and military engines of 1,200 horsepower or more.

Iowa Youth Boasts Of An Extra Rib

IOWA CITY, Ia.—Found: An Iowa boy who had more extra ribs than Adam.

Physicians at the University of Iowa hospital here removed two extra ribs from Charles Roberts, 18, Dr. S. R. Freund, noted Vienna surgeon who is at the university hospital for special case study, superintended the delicate operation.

The case was one of the utmost rarity, according to physician. Two ribs grew from the sides of the seventh cervical vertebra, one vertebra above the first dorsal where the ribs generally begin. The two additional ribs grew under the collar bone and came into contact with the main nerves of the arm, causing intense pain.

MUSIC AIDED GREEKS

AUSTIN.—Music, according to Greek Professor H. F. Leon at the University of Texas, worked wonders among the ancient sons of Troy. One Spartan senator used bands to put voters in the proper mood before asking the people to approve his bill. To teach students to respect law, Athenian schoolmasters had them sing in class, Dr. Leon said. Music was even considered a cure for lumbago and certain forms of insanity.

Chevrolet Pageant Is Held In Dallas

The Chevrolet Motor company conducted in Dallas at the Fair Park auditorium on Wednesday, Jan. 30, a dramatic pageant of the history of their company as an automobile manufacturer. T. J. Anderson and C. B. Pruet, local Chevrolet dealers and their entire sales organization attended this important and interesting conference.

In addition to this dramatization of the progress of Chevrolet, all dealers and salesmen in the progress of Chevrolet, all dealers and salesmen in the Dallas Zone inspected the new 1935 Master DeLuxe Chevrolet, also the 1935 standard cars and Chevrolet truck.

H. C. Howard, zone manager, Dallas, in opening the Chevrolet showing and pageant stated "The progress our company has made since 1911 is accurately depicted in the historical incidents which are presented during this pageant and automobile showing. The progress of Chevrolet is recognized fully in the industry and has proven our company's consistent policy of improvement and value we are offering to the automobile buying public in 1935."

During the showing of the 1935 Master DeLuxe Chevrolet car, the important engineering product improvements were presented to the 1200 dealers and salesmen attending the meeting. The large number of unfilled orders now in the hands of Chevrolet dealers throughout the Dallas zone indicates the fine acceptance of Chevrolet by the automobile buying public.

Mr. Pruet stated that the showing conducted in Dallas was greatly beneficial to his salesmen and himself in preparing them to tell their many local friends and customers the many new features and outstanding values in the 1935 Chevrolet.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

GRAND JURY, LOIN LAMB CHOP.
A brown little pork sausage, grilled mushrooms, tomato and amb. kidney—how does that strike you for a small snack when you're hungry? Naturally, it makes a good deal more than a snack—in fact, it will do as the second or even the first course of one of your grandest company meals.

I suppose every housekeeper has her own pet method of planning menus. Mine is a sort of on-the-spot order. That is, I decide on meat first, then dessert and lastly, I consider salad and a first course if I think something might precede the meat.

Since it's February, cherries are a good fruit to feature for dessert with the mixed grill. A delicious parfait is made with preserved cherries. Tiny little cakes, frost- ed, and decorated with tiny hatch- ets or chocolate brownies cut in tiny strips to look like rails may accompany the parfait if it's a party. Well made, fragrant coffee or informal luncheon menu for you don't really need either salad or appetizer for these occasions.

Cut Chops Thick
Of course the most important part of the mixed grill is the lamb chop. Have the chops cut quite thick, not less than an inch. Trim out the fat, fit kidney in this space and wrap the flank around kidney. Run a small skewer or toothpick through to keep chop in shape. Be sure to trim off all but a narrow rim of fat around the edge of the chops.

Pre-heat the broiler for at least ten minutes. Rub wires of the broiler with salt and pepper and place in broiler. Sear one side, then turn and sear the other. Then cook until done on one side. Turn and cook on other. The meat is ready to turn when the side away from the heat has a puffy appearance and tiny pulls of steam escape from it. Be careful in turning not to pierce the fleshy part of the chop with the fork as juices will escape. It will take about twenty minutes, more or less, depending on how you like your chops for the chops to cook.

"Story of the World's Literature," "Barrett's of Winslow Street," "How to Make Linoleum Blocks," "Games," "The Purple Land," "The Emperor Jones," "Rudder Grange," "Captains Courageous," "Lord Jim," "The Stage and the School," "The Winged Horse," "The Winged Horse Anthology." These books will be ready for students' use by the first of next week.

Allowable Schedule Changes from R. C. Office at Austin

All changes in addition or adjustment in the allowable schedules for field and individual wells shall be made from the office of the Chief Petroleum Engineer in Austin, according to Luther Belev, proration umpire for the Central West Texas District at Eastland.

The order received: It is ordered by the Railroad Commission of Texas that from and after February 1, 1935, that no changes, additions or adjustment in the allowable schedules for fields or individual wells within the State of Texas shall be made by any District Deputy Supervisor or other authority except from the office of the Chief Petroleum Engineer in Austin, Texas, and no producer or operator shall under any circumstances produce under any allowable other than the one set forth in the schedule effective February 1, or such change or adjustment as may be provided by the Chief Petroleum Engineer under the direction of the Commission as above set forth.

Any producer or operator completing a new well or wells shall file completion reports with the Deputy Supervisor of the district in which the well is located together with other data necessary to establish the allowable of such wells. The District Deputy Supervisor:

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Chilled apple sauce, cereal cooked with dates, cream, crisp toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Parsnip chowder, spinach with hard cooked eggs, graham muffins, jelly roll, milk, tea.

DINNER: Family dinner: Mixed grill of English mutton chop, creamed turnips, curly endive with French dressing, deep dish cherry pie, milk, coffee.

Grill the bacon in the oven with the door open while the chops are broiling. Put it on a rack in a dripping pan.

Cook Sausages in Water

Put the sausages in a heavy iron frying pan and add boiling water barely to cover. Fry each sausage several times with a fork. Cover and cook over a hot fire until the water cooks away. Reduce heat and brown first on one side, then on the other.

Use the caps of mushrooms and saute them carefully in butter. Wash tomatoes and cut in slices one-half inch thick. Dip in melted butter and broil first on one side and then on the other.

Julienne potatoes which go well with this plate are cut in match-like strips and fried in deep fat.

If you want to use the mixed grill for an important dinner add fruit cup, soup, an extra vegetable and a salad.

For the fruit cup I would use diced grape fruit very slightly sweetened and very cold, with sherry poured over.

Consumme Satisfactory Soup
Consumme is my choice for soup because it's not hearty enough to spoil the appetite for the courses to come and it does not repeat the predominant flavor of any other food in the meal.

California asparagus or green peas make a perfect second vegetable if you want one.

For the salad French endive with Roquefort cheese dressing adds just the right touch and whets the appetite for the dessert.

will forward such application for the new allowable cut such well together with the completion report to the Chief Petroleum Engineer at Austin, who shall immediately report same to the Commission so that they may fix the allowable for such well after which the Chief Petroleum Engineer will notify the District Deputy Supervisor who in turn shall notify the producer.

QUESTION!

If a jockey can make a horse fly, and a bird can make the fire fly, can a barber make the butter fly? When we get a "hurty-up" job on a car, we sure "fly" around until the work is finished and we do the work in a manner that is intended to make a steady customer. It's respecters and boosters that count with us.
