Good Social Training Is Need of Orphan

The orphaned child, like the poor, is almost with us; and in these times when demands on the public purse are almost innumerable, we do fairly well when we provide such children with board and lodging.

But to go that far is only to scratch the surface of the problem. The orphan eventually will become an adult and take his place in the complex human society that has supported him; and if he is to be as useful a social unit as we want him to be, we must give him a great deal more than food and shelter while he is in our care.

All this was brought out not long ago, when members of the Welfare Council of New York City gathered for a conference on the care of dependent children. And these people agreed that society is only doing part of its job when it removes the orphan from the fear of hunger and cold.

Now this is an important thing to remember, because we tend to get a warped idea of the kind of training a child should receive in the institution which is caring for him.

The natural tendency is to establish a routine which will train him to get along in the institution; to give him such discipline and teaching, in other words, as will lead him to abide by the rules, to get along with the other children, and to refrain from those pranks and misdemeanors which put gray hairs on the heads of orphanage staffs.

Yet we can do all this and still fail in our main job— which is to prepare the youngster for adult life.

The child may learn how to adjust itself to life in the institution, as speakers at the New York conference pointed out, and still be unable to adjust himself to the life he will enter when he grows up.

And this, in turn, means that the intangibles are of paramount importance in this situation. We owe the child not merely a place to eat and sleep, but the best possible substitute we can devise for the kind of social training which luckier children get in their own homes.

The present moment is a good one for considering that point. It is harder than ever before to find money for these institutions; the simplest way is to eliminate the "frills" and concentrate on food, clothing, and buildings. But to do that is to defeat our own purpose.

These children in orphanages are going to be grown men and women in a few years. The kind of men and women they will be will depend in large part on the wisdom and generosity with which we approach the matter of their training now.

They Add Value And Have Pleasure Beautifying Homes

COLLEGE STATION, — Texas women and girls, engaged in yard improvement work under extension guidance in 1934, carried through the drought alive 169,918 new shrubs in screen, border and foundation plantings placed according to landscaping plans. They also carried 25,666 trees through the "dry spell" and as part of improving the premises had 6,230 sanitary toilets built.

In addition to all this 6,681 old lawns were improved and 2,522 new lawns were sodded. The reported cost of the women's yard work was $7,993.50. No estimate on what the girls spent was available. The estimated added value to the improved farmsteads because of this landscaping was, according to Miss Onah Jacks, extension landscape specialist, at least $198,542.14 on the basis of the score card used in extension yard improvement work.

Typical of the attitude of these women and girls toward their work in beautifying farm homes is the story of Mrs. J. M. Nixon from San Augustine county. "I am going to have a spring bouquet in my own back yard," said Mrs. Nixon. "I can go to the woods and get as many as I want. Right now I am planting a screen that will be a perfect bouquet in the spring, besides serving the useful purpose of hiding my wash place and potato hill. This screen is made against a background of winter myrtle and yupon. On the other side of my house I have planted a screen of privet against a background of sumac to give a note of color in the fall. The screen when grown, will hide my smoke house."

Mosquitoes Killed By Recent Blizzard

PORT ARTHUR, Texas.—The recent blizzard which killed almost 20,000 cattle along the Gulf Coast with a loss of approximately $250,000, proved just as disastrous to the mosquito crop. Health officials said the pests will not be as worrisome as they were last summer.

Income Tax In A Nutshell

Deduction for Interest
Amounts paid or accrued within the taxable year 1934 as interest on indebtedness are deductible, with certain exceptions, from gross income in determining net income. Such items include interest on borrowed money to defray personal expenses, and on money borrowed for the purchase of real or personal property. If a person owes money on a lien or mortgage note on his home, the amount of the interest may be deducted. Indebtedness, however, need not be evidenced by lien, judgment, or mortgage to make the interest on it deductible. Frequently indebtedness is evidenced only by a note.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Brockman

© 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Gale Henderson, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 9-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

She delays giving her answer.

Gale goes skating, breaks thru the ice and is rescued by Brian Westmore, whose father, now head, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris, ready to take his place in the mill.

Vicky Thatcher, daughter of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian. She sees him with Gale and is furious. Contriving to meet Gale she tells her that she (Vicky) and Brian are engaged. Gale believes Brian has been amusing himself at her expense and is deeply hurt.

A day later, coming home from the mill, she meets Brian.

She couldn't stand much more of this. She couldn't go on listening to Brian talking as though she were the one at fault, pretending things were just as they had been between them. She said, surprising herself:

"You keep talking about Sunday. Don't you think you'd better forget about that?"

"Do you want to forget it?"

"Yes, yes, I do. When a girl's engaged to marry a man—"

"Oh!" Brian's exclamation was sharp. He stared down at her. "Why didn't you tell me that before? Why didn't you say you were engaged?"

That startled her. It wasn't what she had meant, but it didn't make any difference now. Gale was glad Brian thought that. She said, "Why should I have told you?"

"But I thought—"

She went on recklessly. "Yes, I'm engaged. I'm going to be married before long. In June. June weddings are nice, don't you think?"

It wasn't exactly a falsehood, she assured herself. Steve had asked her to marry him; she could be engaged to Steve tonight, if she wanted to be. They could be married in June, too. The same month Brian and Vicky Thatcher were to be married. Gale was glad she had said it. Brian needn't think he could carry on a flirtation, persuade her to care for him and then leave her, broken-hearted. She'd show him how little she cared! Two could play at flirtation—and she'd prove it.

Brian didn't say anything for a moment. He stood there, his eyes searching hers. Then he said, slowly, "I—I guess I was mistaken about the whole thing. You'll let me wish you every happiness?"

"Thank you."

"Of course, now that I know how it is, I see why you wouldn't want me hanging around. I'm sorry if I bothered you—"

"It doesn't matter," Gale told him.

Oh, but it did matter terrifically! She couldn't stand there another moment. She put one hand to her cheek, pushing a wisp of hair beneath her hat brim.

"I've got to get home," she said, "but I want to wish you happiness, too. I hope you'll be very happy—and I'm sure you're going to be. Good night."

Brian stood in the center of the sidewalk, watching as she hurried down the street.

Now Go On With The Story

CHAPTER XXXIV

Brian hurried forward. He said, "I've been waiting for you. I wanted to talk to you, Gale—"

"What about?" She was glad to know that her voice was steady. He couldn't tell from hearing that her pulse was racing, but there were fires in her temples. She asked again, "What did you want to talk to me about?"

Brian stood in front of her, looking the way "About the evening," he said. "I want to know what's wrong."

"There's nothing wrong."

"Oh, but there is! There must be. Why wouldn't you let me see back after I'd taken Vicky some the other night? You said you could come to see me. Don't you remember? Sunday—"

"I was tired," Gale put in quickly. She didn't want him to see, didn't want to be reminded that Sunday afternoon. "I just don't want to see anyone."

"You're sure it wasn't anything more than that?"

"Yes, I'm sure."

"Then you'll let me come tonight?"

Gale shook her head. "No," she said. "Not tonight."

"But Gale—"

"I'm not going to be home tonight," the girl went on quickly. "I'm sorry, but you mustn't come."

"Tomorrow?"

"I don't think you'd better come tomorrow, either."

"What's Brian's hand was on?"

"There is something wrong! Something you haven't told me. What is it?"

"Nothing."

"But that's not true—I mean can't be! Why won't you tell me about it? You're not a bit like yourself today."

"How do you know that? How do you know what I'm really thinking?"

"I do know it! I know you're being yourself. I wish you'd tell me what it is that's made you change like this."

The brown eyes, anxious, impulsive, sought hers. For an instant Gale was startled. She thought, "He really means it!" and then, as quickly, scorned herself for being so easily misled.

"I haven't changed," she told him calmly. "If you think so it's because you didn't know me before. But that's not surprising. For all you can't judge a person when you've only met them once or twice—"

"But I can judge—I mean, Oh, yes, I don't know what's come over you! You know how I feel about you. You promised Sunday."

Tom Henderson said, "You've been around the house too much lately. When Steve comes why don't you and he go out somewhere?"

"Maybe we will."

"Steve's a fine boy," Tom Henderson went on. He had found the glasses, was holding them up to the light, wiping the lenses.

"I know he is, Father."

"He's steady, reliable. Got the right ideas. Steve'll make some girl a good husband."

"Yes," Gale agreed. Her father didn't say any more. It had been an effort, the girl knew, for him to say that much. But she knew what he meant. He had said almost the same things before. He wanted to feel that Gale's future was settled, safeguarded. He wanted her to marry Steve.

She didn't think more about it until half an hour later. There was a knock on the living room door then and Gale hurried to open it. Steve faced her. She said, "Hello. Come in, won't you?"

"I can't stay," Steve told her. "There's going to be a dance at Parkers' tomorrow night. I wanted to ask if you'd like to go."

Why not? Why shouldn't she go to the dance with Steve? And why couldn't she make up her mind to marry him? That was what her father wanted. Steve was kind and reliable and honorable. He was everything Brian Westmore was not. And she had told Brian that she was engaged.

Why not—

Gale said, "Yes, Steve, I'd love to go to the dance."

Tomorrow, she told herself, she'd settle the matter once and for all. Tomorrow she'd tell Steve that she would marry him.

(To Be Continued)

Tom Henderson pushed his chair back from the dinner table and said, "Did you read about the airplane that fellow in California has invented, Phil?"

Phil shook his head.

"Claims he can break all the speed records. Queer looking contraption—"

Tom Henderson launched into a technical discussion of the new plane. Ever since Phil, as a youngster of 5 years old, had discovered his father's tool chest and the treasures therein, the two of them had talked over mechanical inventions, spent hours in the makeshift workshop back of the house, tinkering with this and that. Anything new in the field of radio or aviation was always good for a couple of hours of argument between the two.

But tonight Phil did not seem interested in the new airplane. He asked a question or two, then lapsed into moody silence.

Gale asked, "Would you like another cup of tea, Father?"

"No—yes, I believe I would. Oh, did I tell you Steve was here?"

BUSINESS CONDITIONS AS OF JAN. 1

This map represents business conditions in every state of the Union as shown in March, 1935, issue of "Nation's Business," official publication of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

January saw a lull in wholesale and retail trade but manufacture and industry showed more than seasonal activity. Snow cover was widespread in areas where moisture was lacking.

Contra-seasonal rains included particularly iron, steel, automobiles, farm implements, electrical equipment, glass, rubber goods, most textiles, furniture and shoes. Electric power continued its steady rise. Coal output equaled 1931. Lumber output lessened but shipments increased. Carloadings dropped slightly and bank clearings were larger. The Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Food Index in January was at its highest since November, 1930. Failures continue fewer than a year ago.

Gross railway earnings gained 5 per cent over 1933 but net earnings fell 3 per cent although 40 per cent above 1932. Retail trade in 1934 gained 15 to 20 per cent over 1933 in value. Stocks ebbed in strength and activity; bonds were active and slightly higher. Lending cereal prices were the lowest for three months. Cattle and hog prices in late January were nearly double a year ago.

The February map shows a little more cheerfulness, especially in industrial sections.

The Barometer

With its rise in January, the barometer passed the June, 1934, and July, 1933, high points and slightly exceeds the July, 1931, average.

Ruth's Sponsor Knifed in Tokio

Near-tragedy was the aftermath of the American baseball player's tour of Japan, with Babe Ruth as noddiner, when Masataro Shoriki, noted Tokio publisher, who sponsored the trip, was stabbed in the neck by another publisher, Kazuo Nagasaki, outraged because the venture took money out of Japan in time of depression. Shoriki is expected to recover. He is shown left in this picture taken in Tokio, with U. S. Ambassador Joseph G. Grew, center, and Ruth.

George Davisson Explains His Unemployment Insurance Measure

By BERNARD BRISTER
(In the Daily Texan)

Bar-reaching and distinctly liberal is the pioneer plan of unemployment insurance for Texas which a student in the School of Law has offered to the forty-fourth legislature.

Providing for an unemployment insurance fund controlled by a commission and growing out of payments compulsory to industrial employers, House Bill 409 prepared by Representative George A. Davisson of Eastland is offered as a remedy to the industrial emergency existing in Texas at the present and as a distinct unit of the unemployment relief plan that President Roosevelt is now working out for the nation.

Though registered in the School of Law, the short, 26-year-old son admits that he hasn't thought much about school since the present session of the legislature, his first, opened. Bills have kept him busy. He has to do much research work in preparing the unemployment insurance bill, and he has submitted a second bill dealing with ad valorem tax levies for cities and towns.

Davisson has spent four years, intermittently, in the university. He stayed out two years and taught school at New Mexico Mills and Institute; he stayed out at shorter intervals to make money to continue his legal education. Now in the throes of his fifth week in the Legislature he sees his way for the future clearly, and he has great hope for the fate of his bill.

"I am certain that the bill will pass through the house without a hitch," Davisson said. "It is in a sub-committee now and none of the house members have found objection to it."

Of the senate's action he is not positive. "The turn of national affairs has greatly impressed even one with the importance of the capital situation now existing in industry, especially the insecurity and poverty of industrial workers. All of the members of the senate with whom I have talked, have wanted to steer the bill, and that isn't a bad indication at all."

Explaining the necessity for unemployment relief and the nature of the burden, the youthful legislator said that taxes have become burdensome and private charity inadequate, that farmers and rural communities are unjustly burdened, that increased taxation for the support of salaried workers has come at the very time when agricultural incomes are reduced by the lack of purchasing power in the urban markets.

He sees in the absence of voluntary contributions on the part of the employer to support his employees in the event of their unemployment the burden become unjust and the employers relieved of a just responsibility.

On the introduction to his bill, he explains his failure to meet responsibility as the direct cause of the emergency in which families have been broken up and scattered, and a lack of sufficient clothing and shelter which in turn has largely been responsible for the so-called bubbling in the senate in the present time.

The bill provides for a state unemployment fund to be placed in the custody of the state treasurer and an administrative unit consisting of a commission of three members to set up a machinery to put the act into effect and to determine its policy.

No objection has been voiced regarding the fund, Davisson said, but Governor Allred has raised an objection to the creation of a new commission. This is because the formation of several new commissions by the present legislature would interfere with his plan of integration in the administrative of the state government. Davisson explained that this objection presented no real obstacle to the success of his plan since an "executive" commission or some similar administrative machinery might suffice.

Under the provisions of the bill the members of the commission are to be appointed by the governor who is at the same time empowered to remove them and to fill the vacancies. Commissioners are to receive an annual salary of $6,000 payable out of the administration fund. Not more than one of the members may be classed as an employer or as an employer or be from the same section of the state. Their powers are similar to other state commissions. The power to create and operate employment offices and to make a reasonable classification of businesses and industry is inherent to it.

The unemployment reserve, as planned by Davisson, will grow out of compulsory payments made monthly by all private businesses, partnerships, and corporations hiring more than 10 employees and doing business in Texas. In every type of industry the premiums paid by the employer are to be 2 per cent of the gross profits, except in the public service enterprises which are required to pay 2 per cent of their gross receipts.

Unlike the unemployment insurance plans of Ohio and Wisconsin which Davisson used as a model, House Bill 409 gives a wider interpretation to what constitutes unemployment. A wage cut entitles an employe to a limited benefit under the plan offered here. It offers him this additional protection which a slackening in the production of an industry might bring.

Payments are made on the basis of 70 per cent of the remuneration lost, but a maximum of not more than $175 per month forms a limitation for those of the high salary brackets. No person totally unemployed shall receive less than $50 per month. Davisson defined the unemployed and procedure through which they obtained benefit from the unemployment reserve. Everyone is eligible who is employed by any of the enterprises from which the state draws annual premiums, if he has been with the employer for one year or is employed by such an employer at the time of the passage of the act.

The employe is not entitled to benefit if he has lost his job because of misconduct as adjudged by the commission or because of voluntary quitting, or because of a trade dispute. Men who have been self-employed and can return to self-employment find no provision in the program. Benefits are payable on account each week in the case of total unemployment.

For the enforcement of the act legal restrictions have been set up to take care of both employes and employers. Each employer is required to keep an accurate record of all his employes, the hours worked, and wages. These records are to be open to the state commission for their inspection. Failure of the employer to pay the amount levied against him makes him additionally liable for 10 per cent interest per annum on the unpaid amount. Further negligence is described as a misdemeanor punishable under state law. Unfair attempts to obtain unemployment benefits are likewise termed as misdemeanors punishable in the same way.

Representative Davisson declared that his aim in the program which he has formed is to secure equitable rights for all businesses and all individuals. He intends for the program to become a protection for business enterprises in Texas and at the same time an integral part of the national unemployment rehabilitation plans.

American Legion and Auxiliary Convention Successful Two Days Entertainment

Buddies, their wives and friends who came to Ranger Saturday for the two days American Legion and Auxiliary convention which brought together a large number of representatives from over the 17th district, report one of the most successful and enjoyable conventions ever held in Ranger.

Registration took place at the Gholson hotel Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock with the desk presided over by the Auxiliary president, Mrs. Charles Surbrook, and Mrs. J. D. McClester, secretary, and other active members of the Auxiliary.

Lady visitors were entertained with a theatre party at the Arcadia Saturday afternoon. At 4 o'clock brought the assembly of men delegates in the hotel basement at which time the session was presided over by Master of Ceremonies Bill McDonald.

A dance at the American Legion hall with music and a special floor show given by the American Legion Tickville band brought Saturday's program to a close.

Sunday morning opened with meetings held in the colonial room of the Gholson hotel, followed by a memorial service at the First Baptist church at 11 o'clock.

A barbecue was held at the hall at 12:30, a pleasant feature of the convention comprising the program. Mrs. L. S. Daniel presided over a business session of the Auxiliary in the afternoon, called to order in the colonial room. Just at 3 o'clock a joint business session with the Legion at the Legion hall outlined the note of adjournment.

Rev. Johnson Reads Ring Ceremony Saturday Afternoon

Rev. H. B. Johnson read at his home Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, the ring ceremony which united in marriage Miss Louise White, daughter of Mrs. Katie White, and Mr. P. G. Wright.

SOUND STUDIO ON WHEELS WILL VISIT RANGER WEDNESDAY, FEB 27, BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT

(TOP) Voice Recording Studio with complete Western Electric sound equipment and public address system—The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer traveling motion picture studio on World Tour. (LOWER LEFT) Studio entrance through which the public will pass to view recording and projection of sound pictures. (CENTER) Screen and rear projector system. (RIGHT) Glass enclosed Projection Room showing latest projector and Western Electric Reproducer set.

Through the influence of R. E. Garner, manager of the Arcadia Theatre, arrangements were made today to have the elaborate Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer traveling motion picture studio visit this city on its extensive goodwill exhibition tour of the world.

The lavishly equipped studio on wheels, constructed by the great motion picture company at a staggering cost of $150,000, is scheduled to arrive here next Wednesday, Feb. 27, and according to present plans will be open for public inspection from 4 until 7 p. m. o'clock in front of the Arcadia theatre, the home here of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures.

The sound truck will be escorted from Eastland by two highway patrolmen, and arrangements have been made to have the fire chief and chief of police of Ranger to meet the truck at the Ranger city limits and escort it to town.

The Ranger band is to play in front of the theatre when the sound truck arrives. The entire block in front of the Arcadia is to be roped off and Mayor Harry A. Logsdon is to present a short address of welcome.

The studio, which has traveled across the continent from the famous M-G-M studio at Culver City, Calif., has aboard it more than $60,000 worth of costly and intricate sound motion picture recording and projection equipment. It is a completely equipped Hollywood studio on wheels.

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, and a complete staff of camera, soundmen, electricians, and movie makeup experts compose the personnel of the outfit, but motion pictures will not be filmed in his city during its visit.

His brief stop-over here is being regarded purely as one to permit film fans of this city to inspect the magnificent outfit, to learn how talking pictures are filmed and recorded and projected, and the motion picture technicians with the studio will be available to answer questions regarding their work while the studio is here, it is said.

During the period the studio is to open for inspection, the general public will be permitted to enter the studio. They will be escorted through by the motion picture men, and the operation of the sound recording room in one section of the 65-foot outfit, and the sound projection room in the rear compartment of the studio, will be explained in detail.

The studio is hauled by giant trackless locomotive equipped with powerful special built Waukesha motors, and this tremendous engine is in itself truly an outstanding sight. Special built camera, pilot and advance cars make up the remainder of the Hollywood caravan visiting this city with the

HAPPY KITCHEN CHATS

"The Magic of Well-Prepared Food"

There is a magic something about food—a quality that, conceived in the imagination of the cook, is in subtle and devious ways expressed until food itself catches the power to awaken delight in those who look and partake. To sit down to a dinner bereft of it is indeed a sad proceeding. Unnecessary, too, for cultivating the thousand and one tricks that make food tempting; is the smart housewife's delight, her play to the gallery, so to speak.

Making some meat and fish—everyday ordinary varieties—appealing and appetizing is what I call, "putting on the parsley." For parsley is the most widely used garnish there is. However, a sprig of parsley for every food dish is not the whole story. Food must be brought to its delicious point of discrimination and ingenuity. Nor will parsley, curley, fresh and green though it may be, ever make up for an ill-cooked roast, or still be a festive touch if used too often.

Just consider two effects a dinner of this fare can give—pot roast, potatoes, carrots and bread and butter. Picture it first with no interest taken in it except as sustenance and you will find it rather dreary. But if you sear the pot roast to a dark brown with slices of onion, and a fraction of a clove of garlic in the pan, then boil it slowly for hours in a small amount of water to which the juice of canned tomato is added to flavor, it will take on an entirely different aspect. Just try it sometime. Then serve it on your very best platter, if it is silver, all the better; and pour part of this rich gravy around it. Top the meat with parsley and serve the extra sauce separately.

There is nothing quite so good with a pot roast as a baked potato, and paprika give zest to a cream sauce served with the kinds of fish that are broiled, such as cod, salmon, haddock and red snapper. A creamed fish becomes more unusual when served in French scallop shells topped with buttered bread crumbs.

Alameda School News

We are all preparing for the Interscholastic League contests which will be some time the latter part of March. We hope to bring home many honors.

Miss Virginia Champion had charge of the assembly program last Friday. There were several numbers on the Life of Abraham Lincoln, furnished by Bartie Lou Camoren, Edith Weekes, and Florence Rodgers. There were musical numbers and songs by Virginia Champion, Florence Rodgers and Billie Horn. Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Pilgrim played some special numbers. We wish all parents would attend our next assembly program, which will be from 1:30 to 2:15 o'clock Friday, Feb. 22. Mr. Farrow has charge of the program.

Gorman returned our game last Friday. The Alameda girls won. The boys did not play. We are all going at high speed, studying for our six-weeks exams which will be next week.

MARCH 5th to 8th, INCLUSIVE

WHERE YOU'LL FIND LESS WORK AND MORE FUN!

"Efficiency," said Aesop 4,000 years ago, "is coaxing a cat across the room instead of pulling him by the tail." If you've been taking hours to bake the morning biscuits and fry the dinner chicken, and wind up feeling as though every kitchen in the world ought to be at the bottom of the South Atlantic—we have a most pleasant surprise in store for you. For intriguing, delicious foods can be "coaxed" together in hours less time than you ever imagined. There are all sorts of little time-savers and wife-savers on your pantry-shelves, in the spice-cans in your cabinet, in scrape that you've always thrown away.

And these efficiencies are so simple, practical and easy! That's why we've planned our cooking school—just to show them to you. We know you'll enjoy every minute of the cooking school, and we urge you not to miss a single second. Come as our guest.
