U. S. Insurance Funds Present a Problem

Before we get through with the vexing issue of unemployment and social security insurance, we are likely to find that our education on the subject of money and the way it works has been considerably extended.

If the insurance and security measures pending in Congress should be adopted in their present form, they would eventually roll up an enormous federal fund which would have some of the characteristics of a bit of radium.

That is, it would be continuously active, and unless insulated pretty carefully it might have effects not counted on by its possessors.

Congressmen Robert L. Doughton and Carl Vinson, of the House Ways and Means Committee, estimated recently that by 1980 the security plan would have built up a reserve fund of not less than $50,000,000,000.

This, to begin with, would provide a fund with which the government could buy its own securities, thereby paying interest to itself and mixing up the ordinary debtor-creditor idea in a way to make a man dizzy.

In addition, the surplus could be used for investment in other types of securities, these securities to be sold when the money was needed.

But at this point a new complication arises.

David Cushman Coyle points out, in an article in the March issue of Scribner's Magazine, that to handle any big security fund in this way will be to accentuate the swings of the business cycle which a security fund is supposed to guard against.

One great cause of depression, Mr. Coyle remarks, is over-investment during boom periods. If the government's security fund is to be put into securities, this tendency will be tremendously accelerated.

Nor is that all. When the crash comes, things are made worse, because security holders hasten to unload for what they can get. It would be right at such moments that the government, needed cash money for its security payments, would be obliged to sell the securities it had bought.

Thus, says Mr. Coyle, the fund would be a means of aggravating the instability of business with one hand, while preparing to relieve the casualties with the other.

It is Mr. Coyle's idea that such a fund should be simply hoarded—kept in the sock, so to speak, drawing no interest, invested in nothing.

This may seem to defy all principles of sound finance; yet money, and the way it works in human society, are mysterious and sometimes illogical things.

If we are to get away from these disastrous swings of the business cycle, we may have to follow some such seemingly unsound course as Mr. Coyle has outlined.

We Do Need a Fairer Wealth Distribution

Start to talk about redistribution of wealth and you immediately set people thinking about the Huey Longs, the Dr. Townsends, and all those other enthusiastic people whose desire for a reshuffling of this world's goods outruns their sense of what is practical.

Yet there really is an immense gap between the abstract belief that wealth should be more equitably distributed and the theory that the only way to do it is to take dollars directly out of the rich man's pocket and hand them over to the poor man.

In a speech before a "charter day" audience at the University of Nebraska the other day, Senator Norris demanded redistribution of wealth through the simple means of a progressive federal inheritance tax.

This, as he points out, does not mean taking property from the estates of the very wealthy, where it can perform no real service to humanity, and spending it in the interests of the man at the bottom of the heap.

Such scheme, as he points out, would accomplish two things: it would check the steady, progressive concentration of wealth in the hands of a small class, and it would help materially to relieve the country of pauperism. Furthermore, it would put the redistribution forward in a fair way.

A man's right to profit by his industry or his brilliance would not be infringed. Only his right to pile up an untouchable fortune for future generations would be reduced.

"We have the wealthiest country in the world, and yet one-third of our people are in beggary and want," says Senator Norris. "We have millions of starving who must be fed.

"Whether we like it or not, we must raise billions in taxes. Are we, in this dire predicament, so foolish as to think that the money can be raised by taxing the beggar?"

Even so conservative a country as England taxes the estates of the wealthy far more heavily than we do. We can move a great distance in that direction without departing from the traditional American economic framework.

BACK TO THE GOOD OLD DAYS

'Dusting the Covers of Texas History' for
The Texas Centennial Celebrations of 1936

The schooner "Flash" of the Texas navy, captained by Luke A. Falree, was the vessel that rescued Texas officials when Mexicans sighted them out of Galveston harbor. The "Flash" was a sturdy boat, and on it were President Burnet and his family, Vice President Lorenzo de Zavala and his family, and other cabinet members. The "Flash" was the first schooner into Galveston harbor when word came of the San Jacinto victory.

Odd, significant names were given the boats of the navy, which the provisional government had provided for in 1836. The "Invincible" was armed with eight guns; "Liberty" with four guns, and "Brutus" with eight guns. The "Flash" had only four. Two privateers, the "Tom Toby", named after the purchasing agent for Texas in New Orleans, and the "Tergible" were equipped with two guns each.

First to cruise along the Galveston coast and explore the land as far as the mouth of the Rio Grande was Captain Hawkin in his schooner "Independence," which sailed from New Orleans. He and his crew of 15 hearty men took to their boat and followed the coastline. They met a few boats from the State, and some come from Mexico. Anchored at Galveston March 21, 1836, was a cargo of young Africans, brought over by Monroe Edwards to be slaves on plantations.

Although the Texas navy was small, it did valuable work in carrying supplies to inland stations, and in destroying Mexican commerce. Even though an infant country, a navy did not seem at all improper or improbable. It was more important after the Republic was established, however. Texans who celebrate the Centennial in 1936 will not forget that 100 years ago there was a real Texas navy.

"Old Buck," Horse on Which Louis Tindall, Eastland Arena Performer, Rode To Awards, Claimed by Death

(Editor's Note: "Old Buck," horse owned by Louis Tindall of Eastland, "big time" arena performer, that aided him to many awards died recently in Oklahoma. The following story, published Feb. 19, is reprinted through the courtesy of the Kansas City Star: PONCA CITY, Okla. — "Old Buck" was just a horse but when he died the other day the folks around the 101 Ranch, near here, mourned.

"OLD BUCK," CHAMPION SHOW HORSE, WHO IS DEAD.

Buck was the horse on which world championships were won in trick riding, and was the property at his death of Jack Webb, young singing cowboy, who recently purchased a part of the decadent ranch from one of the mortgagees and formed the Salt Fork Cattle company.

Originally Buck came from Texas. He was just a plain cow pony several years, but he progressed a long way from the range in his time. It was as a rodeo horse that he won his fame and favor for his riders.

Louis Tindall, who won world championships in trick riding at Madison Square Garden for three years, rode Buck while performing the feats which won him the title. Tindall had followed the rodeos for years, at Cheyenne, Pendleton, 101 Ranch, Madison Square, Fort Worth Stock show.

Tindall conceived a trick which for audacity and thrills had most of the other trick riding events "laid in the shade." With his horse on the dead run, Tindall would dive under his mount's stomach, pull himself up between the horse's hind legs and over his hips, and thus back into the saddle. Then he would repeat the performance backward, standing on his knees on the horse's hips, dive between its hind legs and reach the under part of the saddle girth, then pull himself into the saddle.

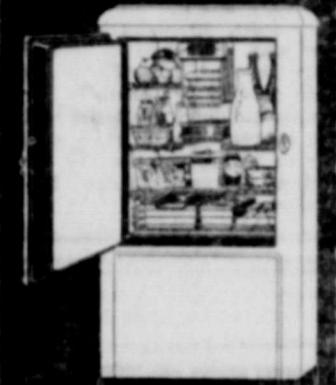

Crowds went wild when they saw the performance. In one rodeo another contestant tried desperately for the title by attempting the same trick, and was severely kicked by his mount. Other horses possibly could have been trained, as Buck was, by carrying a big of oats between his legs, but they weren't, and Tindall walked off with the honors easily. Tindall had fastened a strap to the back of the saddle, passed it between the horse's hind legs and fastened it to the girth underneath. On this strap he had a sliding stirrup which carried him under and around the horse on his lightning-quick and perilous journey.

Buck finally became temperamental. When Tindall carried him from place to place in a trailer, he wanted the car to himself and would try to shove the other horses out. On one such occasion he caused the trailer to sway, and it turned over.

Income Tax In A Nutshell

Deduction for Tax on Motor Gas
If an automobile is used for both business and pleasure, all of the maintenance and operating expenses connected therewith, which constitute allowable deductions for Federal income-tax purposes, should be allocated to the two uses on the basis of the time that it is used for each. For example, if the total expense of operation and maintenance, plus depreciation, for the taxable year amounted to $800, and the car was used three-fourths of the time for business and the balance of the time for pleasure, the allowable deduction for Federal income-tax purposes would be $600. If a law which imposes a tax on gasoline shows that the tax is imposed on the consumer and not on the dealer, the consumer and not the dealer, the consumer may deduct as a tax, for Federal income-tax purposes, the amount of the gasoline tax paid by him; but the taxpayer must have kept records of the payment of such taxes in order that the deduction may be substantiated as is required by the law and the regulations. The Federal gasoline tax imposed by section 617 of the Revenue Act of 1932 as amended is not deductible by the consumer. A taxpayer may ascertain whether the gasoline tax imposed by a State is deductible by the consumer or by the dealer by addressing an inquiry to the collector of internal revenue for his district.

In any case where the gasoline purchased is used for business purposes the tax may be added to the cost of the gasoline and deducted as a business expense; but where that is done, the gasoline tax cannot be deducted separately under the item of taxes.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass.—Two snow crosses, found on the roof of the Catholic convent here recently, created widespread attention when it was said they were not fashioned by human hands, he crosses, approximately seven feet long, with arms six feet wide, were believed, however, to have been formed by shadows from nearby buildings projected against the convent roof in such a manner as to prevent the sun from melting the snow shaded by the shadows.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Lina Lu Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Gale Henderson, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

Steve Meyers, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She delays giving her answer.

Gale goes skating, breaks thru the ice and is rescued by Brian Westmore, whose father now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris, ready to take his place in the mill.

Vicky Thatcher, daughter of Robert Thatcher, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian. She sees him with Gale and is furious. Contriving to meet Gale, she tells her that she (Vicky) and Brian are engaged to be married. Gale, believing Brian has been amusing himself at her expense, is deeply hurt. She refuses to see him again.

Brian, trying to forget Gale, turns to Vicky.

Phil loses his job. Coming home after a search for work, he encounters Ed Vogel, with his friends, Stroude, and "Lefty."

There is a street fight in which others join. Then a gun is fired.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII

There was an instant of paralysis, and then frenzy. A hub-bub of voices. Men with startled eyes and stunned faces. A sense of tragedy, electric, contagious, in the air. Someone shouted, "He's killed him!" and, as though at a signal, the spell was broken.

Joe Gillaspie shoved a barricading shoulder aside and pushed his way forward. "Phil!" he cried.

But the sprawling figure on the sidewalk was not Phil Henderson. A man on his knees, bending over the limp body, said, "Someone call a doctor. Tell him to hurry!"

Men were trooping out of the pool hall now and lights flashed in nearby buildings. The crowd in the street swelled, as though by magic. Women's voices joined with men's.

"What's happened?" "Did somebody fire a gun?" "Who was it?" The questions rose, shrill, excited.

"It's Ed Vogel!"

"WHAT?"

"Someone shot Ed Vogel!"

"Vogel — they say somebody's killed him."

"Did you find out what happened?"

"It's Vogel! SOMEBODY KILLED ED VOGEL!"

Phil Henderson stared stupidly at the man on the sidewalk. "But — what was it?" he asked. "I mean how —?"

The sentence was never finished. Phil turned as someone gripped his arm. It was Stroude, his sly face distorted and menacing.

"Here he is!" Stroude shouted. "Don't let him get away!"

"Grab him!" The other man's voice rose higher. "He shot Ed Vogel. He's the one who did it!"

The look of amazement on Phil's face turned to panic. "But, Stroude, I didn't! You know I didn't shoot him. Why, we were just fighting —"

"Listen, you can't get away with that. I saw you! Everybody here saw you. You killed Ed Vogel and you'll hang for it!"

A policeman shouldered his way into the crowd. "What's the trouble?" he demanded, and then, seeing the figure on the sidewalk, added a sharp exclamation.

"It's Ed Vogel," Stroude told him. "And this is the fellow who shot him."

"I didn't!"

Phil's protest was lost. The doctor was pushing through the crowd, issuing orders for the on-lookers to stand back. The doctor knelt on the sidewalk, slipped an arm under the crumpled body.

His verdict came crisply a moment later. "He's alive," he announced. "Can't tell how badly he's hurt. We'll have to get him to the hospital as soon as possible. Somebody give me a hand."

Volunteers stepped forward. The doctor took charge efficiently, quietly. In 10 minutes an ambulance had arrived and Vogel was lifted inside. His eye remained closed. There was a dark stain on the front of his coat. A woman's voice rose, weeping hysterically, as the ambulance set off down the street.

At a distance Stroude's companion, "Lefty," was saying to the policeman, "Sure, I saw him! This guy and Vogel had this argument. The fellow got ugly and Vogel let him have it. He was gettin' the best of it when this guy pulled the gun —"

"But I didn't!" Phil protested. "I haven't got a gun, I tell you!"

"Haven't, eh?"

The policeman's hands, slapping Phil's coat pockets, encountered something bulky. He reached inside, drew out a .38 revolver. It had a dull black handle. Anyone who had glimpsed the weapon in Stroude's pocket two hours earlier would have said it was the same.

"So you haven't got a revolver?" Phil stared at the gun. "No," he said, "I don't know where that came from. I've never seen it before. I swear to God —"

"That's enough!" the policeman cut in gruffly. Come along. Both these fellows say they saw you shoot him. I found the gun on you. If Vogel dies it'll be murder you'll be charged with. Get that? Murder!"

"But I tell you I didn't —"

"Get going!" The policeman's club emphasized the order.

Dull light sifted through the single barred window of the jail cell. Gale Henderson sat on the narrow cot, her arms around her brother. "Oh, Phil!" she said, her voice choking.

"I was framed, Gale. I didn't do it!"

"I know," Gale held a handkerchief, already limp, to her eyes. "Of course, I know you didn't do it. Anybody should know that. But oh — it's so dreadful. What are we going to do, Phil? What are we going to do?"

"They say if Vogel dies —"

Gale's shoulders moved convulsively. Her hand, on her brother's arm, tightened. "He's GOT to get well!" she cried. "I won't think it. He's — oh, he's GOT to get well!"

Phil patted her arm. "Don't, Sis," he said. "Don't take it that way."

"But I can't help it. The idea of you here — in a place like this —"

"Never mind that," Phil said gruffly. "I'll get out of it some way. I don't want you worrying, feeling so bad. I — I'm not worth it. All I do is make trouble for you — borrowing your money and not paying it back, losing my job, getting arrested. It was bad

A voice from the door interrupted. "You'll have to go now, Miss Henderson. Time's up."

She went out into the corridor and opened a door. Steve was waiting for her. Gale took one look at him and hurried forward. She said, "Oh, Steve, what's happened. Is it Vogel —?"

Helpful Hints to Those Using K. C. Baking Powder

Always sift flour together with K. C. Baking Powder together at least three times. The more sifting, the lighter, finer texture the cakes, biscuits, etc., will be.
To mix a cake, first cream butter and sugar thoroughly, then add yolks, if used. Then, to this mixture, alternately add moisture and the flour that has been sifted with baking powder and stir until smooth and glossy, adding beaten egg whites after thoroughly mixing.
For cakes, have your oven slow to moderate at first, until the cake is fully risen; then increase the heat, so as to just brown lightly.
Here are a few choice recipes. You will like them.

K. C. Everyday White Cake
1-2 cup butter (4 oz.), 1 cup granulated sugar (8 oz.); 1-2 cup milk, 2 cups flour (8 oz.); 2 level tps. K. C. Baking Powder; 3 egg whites; 1 tsp. vanilla extract.

K. C. Baking Powder Biscuit
2 cups flour (8 oz.); 2 level teaspoonfuls K. C. Baking Powder; 4 level tps. shortening (2 oz.) about 2-3 cup of milk or water; 1-2 tsp. salt.

K. C. Bran Muffins
2-1/2 cups uncooked bran (3-3/4 oz.); 2 cups flour (8 oz.); 1-1/2 tps. salt; 2 eggs; 1-3/4 cups milk; 3-1/2 level tps. K. C. Baking Powder; 4 tps. sugar (2 oz.); 3 tps. melted fat.

Note: Permitting the bran to soak in the milk for 1 to 3 hours before adding the other ingredients, adds greatly to its palatability. Bake 35 to 40 minutes at 350 to 375 degrees.

K. C. Doughnuts
3-4 cup granulated sugar (6 oz.); 1 cup sweet milk, 3 tbs. melted butter, 3 cups flour (12 oz.); 1 tsp. mace, 1 tsp. salt; 2 eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately, 2 level teaspoonfuls K. C. Baking Powder.

Two Million Head Of Livestock Are Bought In Texas

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—The government has purchased 2,013,972 cattle from 150,205 drought-stricken cattlemen and livestock men from 233 counties in Texas in the last seven months, spending an average of $12.14 a head, according to the final report issued today by George W. Barnes, assistant state drouth director.
More than $24,000,000 was appropriated and used in Texas in buying these cattle.

Of the total purchased, 684,455, or 34 per cent, were condemned. An average of 13 head was purchased from the 150,000 livestock men needing immediate relief.

Soon after the cattle purchasing program was initiated, 22 beef canning plants operated by the Texas relief commission throughout the state were opened to furnish employment. Over 50,000,000 cans of meat were added to the food store for relief roll clients of Texas.

On June 6, 1934, at which time the eight emergency counties were organized, the first meeting was held at Amarillo in connection with the livestock purchasing program. At that time the counties were organized for cattle purchases. Other sectional meetings were held in the state to cover additional counties as fast as they were designated, or placed in the emergency classification.

Within a short time after the first meeting in Amarillo, the government purchasing program went into effect. Cattlemen and stockmen who had no feed crops were soon pouring hundreds of cattle into the government's lap.

The Texas extension service was charged with the responsibility of the cattle purchasing in the counties. The bureau of animal industry was held responsible for furnishing the inspectors who looked after the drouth cattle program.

The Texas relief commission served as agent for the federal surplus relief corporation which in turn received the cattle after they had been purchased by the extension service and inspected by the bureau of animal industry.

In Texas it was found unnecessary to hold educational and organization meetings in the counties. The regional meetings were attended by stockmen and county agents who were county drouth directors. At these meetings plans were outlined for the purchasing program. Through the county papers and the dailies, the people of each county were given information relative to the emergency drouth purchasing program.

The only real complaint registered by the livestock men was that purchases could not be made fast enough. From all over the state letters poured into G. W. Barnes' headquarters at College Station expressing satisfaction about the benefit derived from the program. "Immediate drouth relief came when it was most needed," according to one of the letters.

"Cattlemen and livestock men were in dire distress, as food crops and pastures had been ruined by the drouth, and they were facing the prospect of a hard winter and the loss of considerable stock and money. They realize that the payments made for their cattle saved them from disaster and enabled them to carry the remaining herds throughout the winter," another letter said.

One producer wrote rather jokingly about the problem even in distress. He said: "I don't know what I would have done if the government hadn't bought my cattle. I reckon Uncle Sam saved me from going plumb broke."

The drouth program of the AAA in purchasing cattle, furnished a market for cattle at a time when all central markets were glutted.

Relief Commission To Save Face of The State of Texas

AUSTIN, Tex.—Efforts to save the face of Texas, comprising one-fourteenth of the area of the United States, are about to be undertaken by the Texas Relief Commission.
Under the direction of W. M. Burkes, former Uphur county agent, an extensive terracing and re-surfacing program will be started. The plan will be double-acting. It will give aid and advice to non-client farmers and provide cash wages to rural rehabilitation clients who work on self-liquidating projects.

"Terracing alone will not save the soil in Texas," Burkes said. "We believe it good practice to take land with an eight to ten per cent slope out of cultivation and convert it into pasture or timber land."

Conservation in many phases will be practiced. Included are running terrace or contour lines; building terraces, outlets, gully controls and dams; planting legumes, grasses, trees and soil improving crops; water conservation in the form of wells, dams and ponds; building trench silos and storage houses for crops and livestock; and reforestation.

Terrace squads of four men each will be organized to be sent

Rich Lead Store Awaits Prospector

BILLINGS, Mont.—There's a lead mine handy in Billings for some enterprising prospector. Officials of the Yellowstone Rifle Club estimate that a quarter ton of lead can be recovered from the troughs of two targets at the club.
The targets have been used for three years and are estimated to have absorbed 30,000 rounds of shot annually—totaling approximately 514 pounds of lead.

POOR SAFETY DEPOSIT

BOSTON.—Cora V. Reid thought that she had found a safe hiding place for her $20. Placing it in her umbrella, she started for home. On reaching there, she opened the umbrella to get the bills, but to her dismay the roll had vanished.
