ATLANTIC SENDS PROTESTS ON CONDEMNATION

By United Press
BERLIN, April 20.—Adolf Hitler challenged the "self-appointed" judges of the league of nations council and firmly rejected their condemnation of Germany's rearmament.

A strong, yet not imperative to the fourteen nations of the council, the Nazi chief in defiance of the council members, and judge Germany's action, and them with attempting "a discrimination toward Germany" and spurned the action "in the most manner."

Hitler did not, however, close door to future negotiations, merely restraining his resentment, he avoided invectives and into the record of Europe's peace offices a message which indicated his country's willingness to operate in efforts toward fortifying peace of Europe.

The sending of the note was the slight of his nation-wide birth-observation, during which Nazi leaders gave him 27 airplanes the league of war veterans sent him with 14 more. These part of the rebuilding of the man war machine, which might Germany to a crisis on verge of violation of the Versailles treaty.

Simplifying of Court Procedure Baffles Senators

By United Press
AUSTIN, April 20.—Attempts to simplify criminal trials proved too complicated for the senate today.

"They wrangled all morning over the first of 14 bills simplifying the procedure, then adjourned until Tuesday."

Senator Will Martin, former prosecuting attorney, declared the first bill so vague in its terms that a case would have to be taken to the state's highest courts before its meaning was determined. The bill proposed to take away the rights of co-defendants to demand separate trials. The purpose is to leave the matter to the trial court.

Partly cloudy conditions were expected to prevail tonight but by Sunday the sky will be clear, Dr. Cline said.

In the Panhandle, where rain is needed, the sky was clear Saturday.

Franco-Russian Treaty Tangled

By United Press
PARIS, April 20.—France's military treaty with Russia was tangled today in the maze of treaties which European diplomats have built up during the post-war years as a guarantee that if and when a new war comes it will be a big one.

The treaty was to have been initiated here today by Foreign Minister Laval and Maxim Litvinov of Russia.

Instead Litvinov left for Moscow and Laval intended to leave for an Easter holiday in the country.

LONG'S POWER IN STATE IS NOW FIRMER

By United Press
BATON ROUGE, April 20.—The Louisiana legislature today finally approved Senator Huey Long's 27 newest bills, which declare a financial break with the United States government and give Long a stranglehold on the state election machinery and municipal affairs.

Last minute opposition broke out in the senate, but was smashed by Long's majority.

Sen. W. Haygood sounded the last futile warning when the vote was called on the election bills.

"Every man who votes for this bill will live to regret the day. I don't fool myself by believing anything I say will have any effect on the result. The bill will pass anyway, but we all know what it means."

The bill placing all public expenditures under the state advisory board, an act that in effect would give Long supervision over all relief money sent into Louisiana by the federal government, was passed without serious debate.

Oshkosh Woman Duped Out of $20 Bill By Canvasser

By United Press
OSHKOSH, Wis.—A peddler who represented himself as being a local man and evidenced familiarity with information concerning Oshkosh people and local affairs succeeded in getting away with a $20 bill, given him by a west side housewife.

Report was made to police immediately after the incident, and Police Chief Gabbert asserted the affair should serve as a warning to others not to deal with household peddlers who cannot show proper credentials.

The salesman was engaged in selling soap shaves, incidentally at a price about four times that of the local stores, according to the police report.

Lacking change, the housewife rendered credulous by the pleasant conversation of her visitor, who seemed so familiar with local events, gave him a $20 bill.

The salesman accommodatingly agreed to take the bill to the corner store and return with the change. He never reappeared. It was asserted he gave a name and described himself as a resident of the southern portion of the city.

AUSTIN, April 20.—Walter Woodul, Texas governor in the absence of Gov. James V. Alfred, prepared to vacate the executive office today, resolved that the $4,000 a year salary for the governor should be raised and that he will never be a candidate for the job.

"No governor can live on that without independent means or borrowing," he said.

SEVEN BURN TO DEATH IN BLAZING HOME

By United Press
ST. EMILE, Que., April 20.—Seven children, ranging from three to 13 years of age, were burned today as they clung together in their home.

The children, four boys and three girls, were left by their father, Francois Renaud, when he went 10 miles to Quebec to work. They had moved into the house last night.

Andre was the oldest of the children and he took charge in the absence of his father.

He set to work stuffing newspapers and kindling into the stove. Apparently the fire was slow starting. Neighbors later said they believed Andre poured kerosene on the fire to make it burn. In any event there was an explosion and the frame house was in flames.

Apparently the children were too frightened to run from the house. The bodies were found close together, some with arms around each other. The mother had been in a hospital for some weeks.

Perjury Charge Follows Denial of Liquor Collusion

By United Press
FORT WORTH, April 20.—Alleged collusion of West Texas officers in the liquor racket and participation of doctors and druggists in narcotic traffic, featured a report by the United States grand jury today.

The liquor charge was brought out in a perjury indictment against Vernon Herman, of Lamb county, based on Herman's denial before the grand jury of a statement he is said to have given officers implicating Sheriff Lynn Irvin and Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Walraven of Lamb county.

According to the indictment, Herman told the officers he and his late father, Bill Herman, had paid Irvin and Walraven $500 a month and $2 per gallon "to do all the whisky business in the county."

L. C. Keel Turns To Writing Poems From His Jail Cell

L. C. Keel, who formerly went under the name of "Dr." L. C. Keel, but who now is signing himself "Chief" L. C. Keel, and who is under sentence of 30 years on confessions of robbery, has turned to writing poetry in the Eastland county jail.

Keel, who is an erstwhile music teacher, a "doctor," communist, candidate for the United States Senate, leader of a "labor union," labor agitator with quite a following in Ranger, confessed robber and now an inmate of the Eastland county jail awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary, does not take the attitude of "crime does not pay" so often taken by prisoners who write verses. Instead he says that while he faces 30 years in the state penitentiary "friends and pals and loved ones will be true."

The verses, 12 in number, are supposed to be sung to the tune of "Loveless Love," and are dedicated to Paul Kilborn, Eastland county jailer, whom he terms the "best jailer I know." The verses follow:

It was two o'clock one Sunday night, the streets you know were not so bright. All law abiding men were home in bed, but I was gone instead. My buddies said now here's our chance, my eyes to a filling station glanced, so we drove in and culled for gas of him, we took his money too. We drove away in a Buick new, and hid farewell to all so blue. Through Caddo we sped along so fast, the laws were not around. We stopped our car at Metcalf Gap. It was the 1st of silly saps. Andrew Mellon's place I'm sure, so we filled up galore.

"'Twas then back home our trail did go, in the edge of town we drove so slow, the cops had learned we were the men by three, they waited patiently. They flashed a light on our car red, the race did start to the drivers dread. Barton drove to a speed n'er reached before, the cops heed to roar. Machine guns howled and barked aloud, we wished we were above the clouds, then Harlan asked the devil for more speed, a hundred miles he gave.

Buddies said leave town we must. We'll leave it to the cops of lust, they trailed us down like a leopard does its prey. Our hair is turning gray. Uncle Bud snapped chains around our necks, to Huntsville pen we're going by heck, I knew I was a prisoner then and there, too late my wrongs to square.

The wood squad calls me trouble hard, get me some wood says a riding guard, a shot gun and a pistol he has to. There's nothing I can do.

In jail each gift I have received, from those in whom I have believed, will keep me awake, my mind, to those so kind, with love and joy sublime.

These prison doors clang shut each night. For thirty years they'll hold me tight. But friends and pals and loved ones will be true, for them I'll life pursue.

—Chief L. C. Keel.

Cotton Textile Troubles Are Aired

By United Press
WASHINGTON, April 20.—A cabinet committee appointed by President Roosevelt undertook today to determine causes of trouble complained of by the cotton textile industry.

New England governors complained to the president that mills were being forced out of business by the cotton processing tax and foreign competition.

The president indicated he thought some of the trouble might be traced to obsolete equipment. This will be one point to be studied.

County Administrator H. E. Driscoll states that recent reports from several counties show that a large number of serious accidents have occurred, because of the lack of proper supervision of operating practices in connection with blasting operations and handling of explosives, and the general office of the Eastland County Relief Board is furnishing instructions regarding the handling of explosives to all foremen on blasting jobs.

SENATE SENT SECURITY BILL TO BE PASSED

By United Press
WASHINGTON, April 20.—The administration lashed out today in a vigorous offensive intended to capture new deal objectives and put opposition to rout.

Congressional leaders encouraged by President Roosevelt, whipped the party into line to act on his "most" program.

Activity was at the highest pitch since opening of congress in January.

The house sent the important social security bill to the senate labeled "rush." In passing the bill 352 to 33, democrats administered the worst defeat of the session to party insurgents and republicans.

Relief and public works administrators armed with $4,800,000,000 in new funds "cracked down" on those they regarded as obstructing operations of the huge work relief program.

Murder, Suicide Verdict Rendered In Double Death

By United Press
AUSTIN, April 20.—Justice of the Peace Tom Johnson today returned a verdict of murder and suicide in the death of Mrs. Eliza Foster and Lee Sullivan, 40, Friday.

The evidence indicated Sullivan shot Mrs. Foster and killed himself, he said.

The man was shot once in the head and the woman in the breast.

The body of the man lay near an automobile, and beside him was a .45 caliber revolver from which two bullets had been discharged. The woman's body was about 100 yards up the road.

Sheriff Lee Allen found footprints about the automobile which he said indicated there had been a struggle, that the woman had fled up the highway and had been shot as she ran.

In the woman's purse were found papers which indicated she was Mrs. Edgar E. Foster, and a deputy sheriff who went to the address found on a letter said that such a woman was the widow of Edgar E. Foster, a truck driver, who died Oct. 2, 1934. Mrs. Foster was the mother of five children.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ragsdale, daughter of the woman, said Sullivan, her father's cousin, had visited her father while he was alive.

Peace Rests Securely On World Stability

A sensible approach to the problem of world peace is produced by Secretary of State Hull in his recent warning that the nations must unite in an economic program to restore economic stability before the threat of war can be averted.

We do not often stop to remember that back of almost every war scare there is some profound maladjustment which exerts an unendurable pressure on a people or a group of peoples. Our disarmament and security conferences almost uniformly ignore that fact, and for that reason get nowhere.

Secretary Hull's notion is that, if the tangled economic situation can be unscrambled first, the attempt to build an enduring peace will be a great deal simpler.

"The necessity was never more apparent," he says, "for the various countries of the world to give immediate attention to the matter of adopting a sound and comprehensive economic program, both domestic and international, and carrying it forward, to the end that the normal processes of domestic and international finance and commerce may be restored and tens of millions of unemployed wage earners may be re-employed."

"This would afford a solid foundation on which to rebuild stable peace and political structures."

Too often we seem to take it for granted that this or that nation adopts a warlike course out of pure human custom. We have been very vocal in condemning Japan's course in Manchuria and China, for instance, and we have blamed it largely on the militarism of an army and navy clique which has managed to take control of the government.

What we forget is the simple fact that Japan has faced the prospect of a trade depression and a wave of unemployment far more severe than the one through which we have been passing.

The Japanese people became convinced that only by gaining access to fresh territories that would provide expanding markets, and new sources of raw material could they avert economic disaster.

That is what explains Japan's warlike course in recent years; and something similar is behind almost every resurgence of the martial spirit.

Back of the armies and the navies there are economic inequalities that drive nations to the verge of desperation.

This being true, is here not a good deal of sense in Secretary Hull's suggestion? If the nations of the world devoted to the job of regaining international economic stability one-half of the effort they devote to preparations to settle the instability by force of arms, they ought to be able to a long way toward working out an equitable solution.

The effort would at least seem to be well worth making.

Too many people take too much interest in war and too little in peace.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES

Text: Psalm 19: 7-14; II Timothy 3: 14-17

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for April 28

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

THE modern Christian has a Bible that the early Christian did not have. The early Christian had the Old Testament, but the New Testament was in the process of developing.

If Old Testament writers could speak of their sacred writings as the verses from Psalm 19 in our lesson indicate, or as Paul writing to Timothy could commend them, how much more should these words apply to the Holy Bible as we have it today, in the language of the people, so that all may read!

Few things are more remarkable than the way in which, despite all the world's evil and all its problems, the Bible continues to be the best seller among books. Through the agency of the great Bible societies, it has found its way into practically every language; and even in the dialects it has been made available.

It is, of course, one thing to have the Bible in our homes, on our library shelves, and on our living room tables, though possibly it is not always in so conspicuous a place; but it is quite another thing to have the Bible in our hearts and lives.

The Psalmist loved the Scriptures because they expressed to him the law of God, which was perfect, converting or restoring the soul. He found here the precepts of the Lord which rejoiced the heart and the commandments which enlightened the eyes.

It is a beautiful picture that he gives of the heart of a man attuned to beauty and honor, whose life is based upon simple principles and who finds in the words of truth something that is more valuable than gold. Such a man is concerned not only to keep his feet in the upward and right way, but he is concerned, also, to purge his life from all error and fault.

It is in keeping the words of his mouth and the meditations of his heart so that they may be acceptable in the eyes of his Maker that he finds the highest ideal.

WHAT Paul wrote to Timothy concerning the Scriptures was, of course, based upon all that he had learned from these Scriptures himself. He must have known by heart these intense and glowing words of the Psalmist.

To him the Scriptures had ceased to be merely formal writings; they were living documents enforced and made incarnate by the One whom he had discovered—Jesus Christ—and in whom he found their fulfillment.

To Timothy, as a young man, he commends these Scriptures as providing the complete equipment of the workman who would be furnished to do everything well. "Study to show thyself a workman approved unto God," wrote Paul to Timothy, "rightly dividing the word of truth."

Every young man who receives that exhortation could not find a better means of fulfilling it than by immersing his life in the Scriptures, and making them the motive power of his life. Of course, one cannot do that without coming, above all things, to know the Christ of the Scriptures. He is the Word of Truth.

THE DARK BLOND

5 CAGLETON KENDRAE © 1935 NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Millicent Graves, secretary to George Dringold, finds her employer in his office dead. Jarvis Happ, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunette, then takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets Happ's son, Norman, his stepson, Robert Caise, Mrs. Happ, and Vera Duchene, Mrs. Happ's maid.

That night a note under her door informs Millicent "The woman in black ermine is here." Millicent sees the woman, tries to follow, but loses her. Millicent goes to the chauffeur's quarters. The chauffeur is dead from a bullet wound.

Next morning Sergeant Mahoney takes charge of the case.

Over the telephone Mrs. Happ learns that her husband has been kidnapped. She is warned not to inform the police.

Millicent tells Norman all she knows of what has happened. They locate the store where the whisky found in the chauffeur's room was sold. They also learn that the owner of the car Millicent saw the woman in black ermine driving is Phyllis Faulconer, and go to her apartment. Norman is trying a key in the lock when Millicent stops him.

New Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXXIII

Norman Happ whirled impatiently and exclaimed, "What's the matter?"

Millicent dragged him away from the door, toward a turn in the corridor. "Look," she said. "Getting out of the elevator?"

Happ raised his eyes and saw Robert Caise swinging down the hallway, his figure silhouetted against the light which flashed brilliantly over the elevator door.

Millicent knew that at any moment Caise would raise his eyes and that he was bound to discover them. The corridor was not brightly illuminated, save for the place above the elevator shaft. Anyone entering from the bright daylight would, of necessity, require a few moments to adjust his eyes to the dim illumination of the corridor. This was all that had kept them from being discovered.

There was a bend in the corridor some 20 or 30 feet beyond where they were standing but there was no time for them to reach it. Millicent grasped Norman's arm and pulled him into a doorway—a questionable place of concealment but infinitely better than standing in plain sight.

"Keep quiet," she whispered. "But he's going to walk right past us," Norman Happ objected. "No, no! He's going to that room! He's going to Apartment 309!"

The pair stood flattened against the doorway, hardly daring to breathe. But Caise was so preoccupied that he barely glanced down the corridor. He paused before the door of Apartment 309, hesitated a moment, then raised his hand and knocked on the panel. Millicent noticed the manner in which he knocked—a peculiar rhythm, two knocks, a pause, two knocks, a pause, two more knocks and then a single knock.

There was no answer and Caise had apparently expected none. It was as though the knocks had been agreed upon. He took a key from his pocket, fitted it in the lock and went in.

Norman Happ said grimly, "That settles it. Bob is mixed up in this thing and I'm going to pull him out of there by the collar and drag him down to the police station."

"No, no!" Millicent said. "We've got to get evidence. It's going to take something that we can use to convince the police. He'd say he had found the key or that someone had loaned him a key, or something of that sort. We've got to find out just why he went to that apartment."

She could feel the muscles of Norman Happ's arm quivering through his coat sleeve. He was like a hound held in leash.

"Well, what are we going to do?" Happ asked. "We can't stand here waiting for him to come out."

"Hurry," she told him. "We'll run down to the bend in the corridor and wait there. We can watch and see when he comes out."

She tugged at his coat sleeve and after a moment's hesitation he accompanied her.

They gained the bend in the corridor, turned and stared back at the door of the apartment in which the mysterious Phyllis Faulconer was registered.

It seemed to Millicent as though it had been almost 10 minutes, although she realized the interval must have been shorter, when the door opened and Bob Caise stepped into the corridor.

He jerked the door shut with that sudden violence which characterized him when he was in a temper, and strode toward the elevator.

"He's mad as the devil about something," Norman Happ said. "I know him well enough to know when he gets one of those fits of black rage."

Millicent shuddered and said, "Surely you don't suspect that..." "Don't ever fool yourself," he told her grimly. "I'd suspect Bob Caise of anything. Do you know what I believe? I believe there's a chance my father is being held prisoner right in that room."

"Why, Norman Happ!" she said. "Do you mean to tell me Bob would do anything like that?" "When my father dies," Norman said, "Bob expects to come into a lot of money."

"Would your father leave it to him?" "No, but Cynthia would inherit it, and Bob figures on getting his share. He's a crooked schemer and he's smart as the very devil!"

Bob Caise jerked back the elevator door, entered the cage and a moment later the door slid smoothly closed.

Norman Happ said to Millicent, "I'm going to find out what's in that apartment."

"Do be careful," she cautioned. "We're going to get in," he said grimly.

"And then what?" "That," he told her, "depends on what we find."

He led the way down the corridor, came to a halt before the door of Apartment 309. He took the keys from his pocket, tried one in the lock, gave an exclamation of disappointment, inserted another and said in a half whisper, "This is going to do it."

Millicent heard the bolt click back, and Norman Happ pushed his way into the room, saying, "Let me look around before you come in. It may be dangerous."

She had no intention of allowing him to face any danger which that room might hold. She was more-over impelled by curiosity to find out just what was in this mysterious apartment. So strong was this curiosity that it wasn't until after she had entered the room and heard the door slam shut behind her that she realized she and Norman Happ had feloniously broken into an apartment rented by a woman whom neither of them knew.

"Please be careful, Norman," she cautioned. "If we should get caught they'd send us both to jail. I'm in bad already, but there's no reason you should risk your safety."

He turned to flash her a reassuring smile. "Don't worry, Millicent, they won't catch us. If anyone comes in I'm going to start a fight. You make an escape while the fight's going on."

"Please don't!" Millicent pleaded. "Please take care of yourself, Norman."

"Forget it," he told her. "No one's come in yet and we can look the place over and get out before anyone does."

He swept his arm about in an inclusive gesture. "Look around," he said, "and see what you can find. We want something that will give us a clue to the identity of the woman who has this apartment, and perhaps we can find some damaging evidence that will incriminate Bob Caise."

He crossed to the window and pulled up the shade, letting additional light flood the room. The apartment showed evidence of having been occupied recently. There were ashtrays in which burnt matches and cigar stubs were littered about. In the little kitchen a bottle of Scotch was more than half emptied, two syphons of soda had been drained, and a third was about a quarter full. An ice tray had been taken from the electric box and, judging from the water in the bottom of the aluminum pan, some of the ice cubes had been allowed to melt. Two high-ball glasses were on the sink, side by side. Their rims were sticky and in one of them was a weak mixture of whisky and water.

Norman Happ started a methodical survey of the ashtrays inspected the various brands of cigarettes which had been smoked, segregating those which had the stain of pink lipstick on them from those which had no such color.

Millicent, giving the apartment a quick glance, determined that Phyllis Faulconer was rather a shiftless housekeeper. She flung open the door of the closet, then suddenly recoiled with an exclamation of amazement.

"Norman!" she cried. "Look here!"

He reached her side in three strides, caught her by the shoulder and said, "What is it?"

Even in the excitement of the moment she realized with a thrill of satisfaction that his first concern was for her. His eyes were not on the interior of the closet but upon her white, startled countenance.

"What is it?" he asked. "What startled you? Get back of me. Let me handle this."

"No, no, silly," she told him, laughing. "There's nothing to fight. Just look there in the closet."

She nodded toward the interior. For a moment he failed to serve that which she indicated. Then, as his eyes accustomed themselves to the darkness, gave a quick intake of his breath.

"Good Lord!" he said. "That's it, is it? That's what's been chasing."

JEANETTE MACDONALD AND NELSON EDDY STAR IN VICTOR HERBERT'S "NAUGHTY MARIETTA," SCREEN'S FIRST MUSICAL ADVENTURE STORY

"Choice of 'Naughty Marietta,' Victor Herbert's classic opera, as the vehicle for filming the screen's first great musical adventure story, has brought to picture audiences one of the greatest musical works ever composed.

Produced on a spectacular scale by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Jeanette MacDonald, the Sonia of 'The Merry Widow' and acknowledged one of the greatest singing stars of the American screen, and Nelson Eddy, American operatic baritone, hailed as a sensational 'discovery' among romantic leading men, 'Naughty Marietta' was filmed as a thundering drama of the romantic Creole days of St. Louis, a vehicle that gives to the famous Victor Herbert music the importance it merits.

'Naughty Marietta' is acknowledged one of the five greatest comic operas ever composed in America, the others being Du Koven's 'Robin Hood,' and Herbert's 'Serenade,' 'Fortune Teller' and 'Milk and Honey.'

It was first produced in the New York Theatre, Nov. 7, 1910, by Oscar Hammerstein, with Emma Trentini, from grand opera, and Orville Harrold. Herbert's music had a libretto by Rida Johnson Young.

Herbert, America's greatest romantic composer, was born in Ireland, received his musical education in Germany, and then came to this country where he composed his great musical shows. Among them were 'Naughty Marietta,' 'Babes in Toyland,' 'It Happened in Nardland,' 'Rose of Algiers' (in which the late Lon Chaney was a comedian), 'Wizard of the Nile' and 'The Idol's Eye.'

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen transcription of 'Naughty Marietta,' which will be shown here starting Monday takes on as much importance as its original stage premiere because of the unique handling of the story. The old comic opera libretto was laid aside, and the stirring incidents, historical facts and dramatic thrills referred to in dialogue in the stage version are actually shown.

The importation of the Casquette Girls from France to mate with the settlers in Louisiana, the battle of the Everglades, the pirate capture of the casquette ship, the Paris of Louis XV and other authentic and dramatic details of the history of the founding of one of America's most romantic cities were woven into a thrilling adventure romance, directed by a master of adventure, W. S. Van Dyke, of 'Trader Horn,' 'Thin Man,' 'Manhattan Melodrama,' 'The Pagan,' 'Cuban Love Song' and other successes.

Mrs. MacDonald plays a princess who masquerades as a casquette girl, and Nelson Eddy a British officer in New Orleans. Their songs are backed by huge symphony orchestras, a chorus of a hundred voices, and many musical novelties fitted into the score by Herbert Etothart, famous American composer and one-time associate of Herbert.

An elaborate cast surrounds the famous singing principals, including Frank Morgan, Elsa Lanchester (Mrs. Charles Laughton), Douglas Dumbrille, Joseph Cawthorne, Cecelia Parker, Walter Kingsford, Greta Meyer, Akim Tamiroff, Harold Huber and Edward Brophy.
