MOTHER'S DAY SERVICE TO BE HELD TONIGHT

The Ranger Masonic Lodge has prepared a good program for the Mother's Day exercises to be held at the First Baptist church tonight at 8 o'clock.

Rev. E. S. James, pastor of the First Baptist church of Cisco, one of the most forceful speakers in this section of the country, has been secured to deliver the principal address of the evening, and County Judge Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland will be master of ceremonies.

Included on the program will be an opening song, "America," led by Mrs. D. T. Wier and an invocation by Rev. J. M. Bond, pastor of the First Methodist church of Ranger.

A quartet composed of Floyd Killingsworth, Arthur Deffebach, M. E. Shingleton and Truman Head will render several selections accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Wier, who will also sing a solo, accompanied on the piano by Miss Marguerite Adamson.

A short talk on the subject, "Mother" by Judge Garrett and general selection by the violin choir directed by Miss Gillian Buchanan will round out the program which will precede the address by Rev. James.

The benediction will follow the principal address.

All churches in Ranger are dismissing services for the night in order that the congregations might attend the services sponsored by the Masonic Lodge.

The public is cordially invited to attend this Mother's Day service, which is expected to be one of the most interesting ever presented in Ranger.

Girl Stages Single Handed Revolt

BELFAST, Ireland, May 11.—Police today saved a girl from the wrath of a crowd cheering the duke of Gloucester, after she staged a single-handed demonstration on the rule of the British crown over Ireland.

When the King's son proceeded down Royal avenue, cheers greeted him. He had just passed when the girl snatched a Junon Jack from a woman and fled.

There was an angry shout as the fleeing girl ducked into a building. The crowd followed and hammered on the door of an office where she took refuge. They were preparing to smash it when police arrived.

SAYS TERM OF SHERRILL AND KINNAIRD OUT

All Parties Enter Exceptions And Give Notice of Appeal.

B. W. Patterson, Judge of the 88th District Court, rendered judgment in the case of D. L. Kinnaird against the City of Eastland and others, Saturday morning granting a mandamus commanding the Board of City Commissioners to hear and determine the election contest filed by Kinnaird involving the result of the city election held April 2.

The court also held that inasmuch as the returns of the election showed the T. M. Johnson, C. W. Hoffmann and H. O. Satterwhite had received the plurality of votes over J. M. Sherrill and D. L. Kinnaird, and that Johnson, Hoffmann and Satterwhite had qualified by filing their oaths of office, they became and are the commissioners unless, and until the Board of Commissioners should determine the election contest in favor of Kinnaird.

The court also enjoined C. W. Hoffmann from participating in the hearing of the Kinnaird contest because of his being an interested party, he being a contestant in that matter.

The court further enjoined J. M. Sherrill and D. L. Kinnaird from interfering with the Commissioners Harvey, Pryor, Johnson, Satterwhite and Hoffman as they transacted the duties of their office as such commissioners unless and until the commission body should determine the election contest favorable to Kinnaird.

All parties excepted to the several orders of the court and gave notice of appeal to the court of Civil Appeals at Eastland and the court fixed the supersedeas bonds required to suspend the judgment pending the appeals, at $200.

Information has just been received from the administrator of veterans' affairs to the effect that the veterans' contingent of the civilian conservation corps will be increased to 55,000 between June 15 and Aug. 31, 1935. This will more than double the number allotted to the San Antonio and Dallas offices of the veterans' administration.

In order that we may be able to fill our quota when the time arrives, it will be necessary that we receive many more applications than we have in the past. It will be appreciated if this information can be given wide publicity in your locality and advise any and all veterans interested to communicate with the regional office having jurisdiction over the territory in which they live.

Necessary application blanks will be sent to all those interested with full instructions as to the completion and submission thereof. Of course you know that any honorably discharged veteran of the World War or previous wars who is physically able to do a reasonable amount of work is eligible for enrollment in the civilian conservation corps. Preference will be given in enrollment to those men having dependents who agree to make allotment of three-fourths of their pay to such dependents; also preference is given to those men who have been unemployed for long periods of time.

WALLACE IS SPEAKER IN LONG'S DOMAIN

ALEXANDRIA, La., May 11.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace invaded Senator Huey Long's home state today and fired a new deal broadside at the dictator who has accused the Roosevelt administration of wrecking the farmer.

In a speech to several thousand farmers in this town, located in the heart of Louisiana's cotton, cane and rice country, Wallace staunchly defended the AAA as "the farmer's best friend."

It was the new deal's answer to Long's attack delivered in an address to mid-western farmers in Des Moines, April 27. Long has been a critic of the new deal. He described Wallace as the ignorant of Iowa.

Cattle Ranges In Texas Improving

AUSTIN, May 11.—April rains left Texas cattle ranges in improved condition, the federal crop and livestock division reported today, but failed to aid drought-ridden Panhandle and West Texas areas. Ranges were 66 per cent normal on May 7, a five-point increase since April 1.

Certain drought districts in the Panhandle were relieved by snow in April and green wheat used as pasture declined to 59 per cent normal. Calf prospects were described as "fair" and the lamb crop outlook "poor to fair," with losses light to both.

OVERRIDING OF VETO MAY BE POSSIBLE

Leaders Uncertain When the Bill Will Be Released From the Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Patman bonus bill forces today claimed their chances of overriding a veto of the $2,200,000,000 inflationary measure were strengthened by appointment of Dennis Chavez, Democrat, to succeed the late Senator Bronson Cutting, Republican, New Mexico.

Senator Elmer Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma leader of the Patman group, said he had been informed "Chavez is with us and will arrive Monday ready to vote to override a veto."

The Patmanites, however, still appeared to be a few votes short of the two thirds majority necessary to override a veto.

Telegram at the rate of 250 an hour poured in on President Roosevelt in response to an appeal of the veteran's lobby. The officials of the American urged all members to appeal for approval.

Senator Huey Long, Democrat, Louisiana, vigorous Patman supporter, was attempting to find time on a broadcasting chain for a radio appeal tonight. Veterans leaders said Father Charles Coughlin, was expected to make another appeal to delay the White House and capital with telegrams urging enactment of the measure.

Thomas said it was impossible to predict when the bill will be released from the senate, where it is being delayed until Patman forces are at full strength.

Ickes announced his action in letters to the secretary of the navy and Admiral Christian Peoples, head of the procurement division of the United States treasury.

"That both of these companies failed to comply with decisions of the Petroleum Labor Policy board, is the basis on which the companies are barred," Ickes said.

As Science Advances, Will We, Also?

Trying to figure out what the future is going to be like is always good clean fun, and it is especially attractive if you are more or less dissatisfied with the present. And when you are doing your figuring, you can hardly do better than get a chemist to help you.

For an imaginative chemist can see things that would stump a Jules Verne or an H. G. Wells. He can show us a future that is like a magic wonderland; and—which is more to the point—he can also persuade us that he knows what he is talking about.

Thomas Midgley, Jr., chairman of the board of the American Chemical Society, took a little flier into the future at a recent convention of chemists in New York. He foresaw some startling things.

A century from now, he predicted, the discovery of new sources of energy will have made inter-planetary travel possible. It will also have revolutionized industry to such extent that two hours will be the maximum length of the working day. Such maladies as cancer, influenza, and epidemic diseases generally will be abolished.

This, he added, was only a starter. We shall be raising chickens the size of pigs and they will be laying eggs the size of footballs. People won't go to war any more, because defensive weapons will be strong enough to make any offensive impossible.

Television will be perfected to such an extent that delegates to national conventions will attend by staying right in their own homes—which ought to be a break, in several ways.

All this adds up to something remarkably like a pipe dream. But the odd thing about it is that none of these predictions is impossible. A century from now Mr. Midgley may look like an exceedingly conservative and cautious prophet. In the material world, the race is able to do just about anything that it can imagine.

And that emphasizes the strange new condition under which the race is laboring these days. Its greatest problems are no longer connected with the struggle to master the physical environment; they have to do with the intangibles—things like economics, social organizations, and international relations.

We know, nowadays, that eventually we shall abolish disease and hunger and all manner of scarcity, and that we can equip ourselves with almost any kind of mechanical gadget that seems desirable. The big question is what we are going to do with ourselves after we make those advances.

Shall we learn how to get along together so that they will make the life of the average human being happier, richer and richer? Can we adjust ourselves to an age in which the only problem will be the problem of human relationships?

Politics, Also, Works by Cause and Effect

If the unexpected twists and turns of politics sometimes seem confusing, it is well to remember that nothing ever happens in a vacuum. There's a reason for everything, and the law of cause and effect operates just as inexorably in politics as it does in physics.

Recent news dispatches provide an excellent illustration.

Seventeen thousand people jammed a great hall in Detroit to cheer enthusiastically when Father Coughlin allied on them to "drive out of public the men who have romised us redress and failed."

On the same day, Senator Huey Long told Washington correspondents that he doesn't "give a damn for party labels or platforms," and that he will support some such man as Senator Borah, Senator Norris, or Senator Nye for the presidency in 1936.

Now these two developments are extremely significant. They bespeak an upsurge of indignation on the part of the public—an impatient anger at the delays and failures of existing political organizations. And when you try to find the reason for this anger, you learn something interesting.

On the day that these two developments occurred, a legislative committee investigating alleged relief graft in Ohio questioned Francis W. Poulson, state Democratic chairman. Mr. Poulson admitted that the party collected campaign funds from firms which did business with the state relief administration; and when he was asked if these firms contributed for the purpose of getting more business, he asked, "Did anyone ever make a political contribution for any other purpose?"

A committee member found this shocking. Mr. Poulson replied that "only the most naive could believe that people would give money to a political party just because they wanted to play Santa Claus."

All this is worth some extended thought. Remember, first, that every political party finances its campaigns by means of contributions. That's true of all campaigns—

THE DOORSTEP COMES TO THE WOLF

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Economic recovery has been only partial. But the American big business man's recovery of his morale appears to be complete.

Hanging around the U. S. Chamber of Commerce convention, a curious correspondent had no trouble learning the frame of mind which lay behind the fusillades directed against the Roosevelt administration by speaker after speaker for this great lobby of industry and commerce, which broke definitely with the administration.

Most of these men believe the New Deal contains some threat to the free right to make unrestricted profits. Anticipating business recovery on a rapidly rising scale, they want no interference with their privilege of making whatever money they can.

The average member of the Chamber reacts with especial violence against the administration's moves against the "power trust." It makes no difference to him that a public utility is a publicly granted monopoly, as distinguished from a competitive private enterprise.

He sees the great TVA project as the spearhead—the camel's nose under the tent—for the government's entry into other lines of business.

And he sees Roosevelt's proposed elimination of electric utility holding companies as the beginning of an effort to bust up other huge combinations of corporate power and wealth.

He resists government regulation because that, too, threatens profits—as in the case of hours and wages. He resents what he considers the administration's encouragement of labor to organize and present demands.

Remember, secondly, that we have here an experienced politician openly stating that no one ever contributed to such fund unless he expected to get some sort of favor in return.

Can you begin to understand, now, the tremendous amount of pressure that is eternally assailing all our units of government, from Washington down? Is it surprising that the ordinary voter's wishes are so often ignored? Is it any wonder that the voters are getting fed up?

This cynical disclosure in Ohio makes it easy to see whence comes the discontent which provides a following for such men as Father Coughlin and Senator Long.

To Squelch Hitch-Hiking

The Pennsylvania state highway patrol has declared war on the hitch-hiker. Capt. Wilson C. Price announces at Harrisburg that anyone caught thumbing a ride in Pennsylvania hereafter will be jailed or fined, and he adds:

"A hitch-hiker and a panhandler are the same, except that the panhandler whines for a dime and the hitch-hiker wants a ride that is often worth a $10 bill."

This stand may seem a little harsh, but there are plenty of motorists who will applaud it. For, when all is said and done, the average hitch-hiker has a colossal nerve.

As Captain Wilson remarks, he is a panhandler on a big scale. It is hard to feel very indignant over a plan to squelch him.

Cities where everybody works and nobody shirks are easily raised from the dead.

Changing Country Life" Is the Subject A&M Short Course

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. — "Changing Country Life" will be the theme for the Twenty-sixth annual Short Course at the Texas A. & M. College July 28 to August 2.

Phases of the housing problem as related to rural families, soil erosion work, and agricultural adjustment will furnish features of the program.

In addition to programs for farmers, ranchmen and rural home makers, conferences are scheduled for rural pastors and laymen of the state, agricultural editors, superintendents of rural schools, members of the beekeepers association, producers of state registered and certified seed, and members of Epsilon Sigma Phi, national fraternity for Extension Service workers.

A newspaper staffed by 4-H club boys will be printed daily during the Short Course week.

If this mobilization keeps on, Europe's problem will be the "forgotten woman."

By HARRY GRAYSON

STOCK car manufacturers again are interesting themselves in automobile racing, which is not the least reason why another era of prosperity is imminent for that risky business.

Fifteen new cars will participate in preliminary trials for the 500-mile race at Indianapolis on May 30. That is more new creations than have been built for the mad whirl around the 2 1/2-mile brick track since they went back to the Pacific coast motor in 1926.

The Memorial Day race at Indianapolis annually plays to America's largest sports crowd. With an advance sale more than double that of last year at this time, President Eddie Rickenbacker expects a new attendance record. The present mark is 155,000, established in 1929.

Wild Bill Cummings was flagged the winner before 138,000 persons in 1934.

A feature of this year's running of the famous fixture is to be the return to the races of Pete de Paolo, who came out of a high-handed apprenticeship to capture the event in 1925 with an average of 101.13 miles an hour, a mark that stood for seven years.

Reasons That All Hard Luck Should Be Out of His System

DE PAOLO earned a quarter million dollars on the strength of his victory of a decade ago, but time has dissipated his once imposing bankroll and brushed a few flecks of silver on the temples of the diminutive driver. A veteran at 36, Pete is as sound as a rock and more mature in his judgment than he was on the afternoon that he skyrocketed to fame and fortune.

Do Paolo was misfortune's victim in the qualifying trials of 1928, when he crashed, and again in 1930, when he set off with the field at the start only to be forced out in a few laps with an unmanageable car—a car, incidentally, which, with a relief driver at the wheel, caused a six-car jam a few laps later.

With all that bad luck and after what happened to him in a Barcelona road race last year, De Paolo reasons that all of the hard luck must be out of his system.

Smell of Smoke Becomes Too Strong for Old Firehorse

IT was not until last year that the smell of smoke became too strong for the old firehorse in De Paolo, and with a personal invitation from Italo Balbo, the noted airman, he set off for the other side of the world to compete in a road race at Tripoli. He was honored by Mussolini, a fitting tribute for a young Italian who chased and caught fame, and he campaigned in Germany and Spain.

It was in Barcelona that the modest lot of a hero ended De Paolo's glorious adventure. At a hairpin turn in a road course, he swerved his car into a curbing to avoid killing three children, and for this act of bravery he hovered between life and death in a Paris hospital for four months.

It was here that the gallant De Paolo added a new chapter to his colorful career by conceiving the idea of writing his adventures. His autobiography, the first book on automobile racing ever written in America and filled with the pungent vernacular of the tracks, is appropriate, titled, "Wall Smacker."

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McElliott © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Katharine Strykhurst, beautiful, is discontented and restless because her wealthy father, Victor Strykhurst, and her aristocratic stepmother, Bertine, refuse to let her undertake any sort of work.

Katharine rides daily with Michael Heatheron, young westerner who runs a riding club. She assures herself she is not interested in Michael but feels a pang of jealousy when Sally Moon, local coquette, enrolls at the club for lessons.

Zoe Parker, Katharine's friend, returns from Europe where she has been taken to forget a love affair with Gibbs Larkin, of whom her parents disapprove. Zoe accuses Katharine of being in love with Michael.

Now Go On With The Story

CHAPTER III
Long ago Katharine Strykhurst had decided to shut love out of her life as much as was humanly possible.

Her mother had died when she was nine. People say, "Children don't understand." But some children do. Katharine still remembered that day with a shudder—nurses hurrying to and fro in the old stone house; her father's racking sobs. She understood only too well. The lovely, fair-haired, gracious mother had gone. There was no one in her place. Katharine was by nature a lonely child. A succession of governesses only intensified this loneliness. Many nights her pillow was wet with childish tears. Later her father had brought her a pet—a little Cairn terrier she dearly loved. When he was run down by a tradesman's car Katharine had dried her tears and had said angrily and stoically to herself: "All right, I won't love anybody or anything again."

She had tried to keep that promise. The entrance of her stepmother into her life, when Katharine was 13, had not really meant much. Katharine had been polite to the well-dressed, pleasant-faced Bertine. She had never called her mother. The second Mrs. Strykhurst, who had a good figure and a sense of humor, hadn't tried to "win Katharine over" by fair means or foul. Now, after more than seven years, they were friends, if not completely allies.

So, this fine summer morning, when Zoe Parker, wrapped in thoughts of the man she loved, accused Katharine of being a victim of the grande passion, it is small wonder that the tall, fair girl in riding clothes turned on her companion almost angrily, denying it.

"I never heard anything so ridiculous," Katharine said.

"All right, all right," Zoe soothed her, smiling. "I only thought you looked at him so . . ."

Katharine flushed to the roots of her hair, in which gold shimmered and deep waves were burnished. Back at the entrance to the stables Michael was deep in a conference with one of the men; something about that limp of the dapple gray's.

"You can't see a man and a woman together," Katharine began hotly, without imagining . . .

"Well, honestly, Kay," cried Zoe, nettled in her turn, "anybody's think falling in love was a disgrace."

"Well, leave me out of it, won't you?" Katharine said with cool dignity.

"I can't. You're one of the blooming human race," Zoe cried, with a peal of laughter. All at once both girls were restored to good humor. Michael, hearing the sound of laughter, glanced up and smiled. Something caught at Katharine's heart. There was something so—so darned attractive about that tall, rangy, lean young westerner when he smiled. Those little laugh wrinkles about his eyes . . .

"There, that's better!" cried Zoe. "Now, can you ride over to the Ride and back? It only takes 15 minutes. I want to talk to you."

"All right," Katharine agreed, ashamed of her earlier flare of temper. There was just no use flapping out at Zoe. She was the most amiable person in the world, if a trifle silly . . .

"But my car's here," she protested after deliberation. "I'll have to stop by again and pick it up."

Would Michael think she was making excuses to see him? Men were so terribly conceited. After the other day when he had so rudely seized her wrist and spoken so sharply, when they were taking shelter from the storm in that wayside cabin, she scarcely knew what to think of Michael. He had apologized, had muttered something incoherent; but they had both been self-conscious, riding home later. Katharine assured herself that if things were going on this way she would have to give up her morning rides, much as she adored them. But this morning tall westerner had been casual and unself-conscious, as usual. It was going to be all right, Katharine had thought with satisfaction. People who said that friendship—and merely that—was impossible between a man and girl were just crazy.

Zoe piloted the little car skillfully up the hilly road winding westward in a zig-zag pattern away from Innlock. From the rise you could look back and see the village, lying sleepy in the morning haze, and a line of blue beyond that marked Long Island Sound. Church bells rang in one of the steeples three miles beneath them, and somewhere a cow moored, long and satisfyingly.

Zoe ran the car into the shadow of a pin-oak and shut off the engine.

"Nice up here!"

"I love it," Katharine agreed. There were farms on either side of the River Road; unpainted barns and rail fences hemming in fields of clover and rows of sprouting corn. Some day, in the not far distant future, all this would be taken over by a suburban development company. There would be Moorish villas and golf tees where all was rustic simplicity now.

Katharine dreaded these inevitable "improvements." But mean-

Ford Shows New All-Weather Sedan

A NEW all-weather Ford V-8 convertible sedan, a dual purpose car, available for use either as an open phaeton or a snug enclosed sedan, is announced by the Ford Motor Company. Top photo shows the new body type with top in place; below, the top down, windows lowered, and center door pillars removed.

The top, of tan-colored cloth, can be lowered and folded snugly, covered by a boot, back of the rear seat. The two center pillars are removable and may be stowed away in the car. Converted in this fashion into a phaeton-type body, the car may be driven with the four door windows lowered out of sight, or raised into position as a protection against excessive wind. The window glasses are enclosed in chrome plated frames.

The body is equipped with deluxe appointments, including robe rail and ash tray in the rear compartment. Seat cushions and backs are finished in genuine leather or bedford cord, according to the pur-chaser's choice. The interior finish is in taupe throughout. The cars are available in all standard colors, including gun metal, the new color introduced this year.

The luggage compartment back of the rear seat is even more spacious than in the sedans, providing plenty of room for stowing baggage while traveling.

time she could enjoy the peace of the untouched countryside. Below she could see the beached roof of Michael's stable. The thought of him, moving and working quietly in that peaceful place, brought a little glow of contentment to her heart. He was nice; she did like him. But it would spoil everything if Zoe—and the rest of the world—would think she'd fallen in love with him.

"It's about Gibbs," Zoe was saying, in a small voice, breaking into her reverie.

Katharine had lived through half a dozen more or less intense love affairs, vicariously, with Zoe. She was only six months older than the little creature beside her, with the round blue eyes and flashing white teeth, but Katharine told herself she felt old enough to be Zoe's grandmother, at the least.

"I haven't forgotten him," Zoe proceeded. "Mother and Daddy—everybody thinks I have. But I can't. Kay, I just can't."

She went on, pleading the folds of her handkerchief. "I can't think about anything else." She looked suddenly very solemn, her little girl face taking on lines of intensity.

"Kay, I've got to see him." "He—he's away," Katharine murmured, inadequately.

"I know it. He's got to come back—or else I'm going to him."

"Oh, you can't do that," Katharine protested. What a mess this was! Poor Mrs. Parker had confided to Bertine Strykhurst only the day before that Zoe had had a whirl on the boat, and in Paris, too, and that the affair with Gibbs Larkin was definitely off. Parents! thought Katharine, suddenly, and angrily! Whatever did they know about what went on?

"I think you're being very silly," she said rather coldly.

Zoe began to cry. She cried prettily; she didn't twist or screw her features up as so many women do. She just sat quietly and let the large, crystal drops gather and fall touching them every now and then with the folds of the now delicately-pleated handkerchief.

Katharine felt a surge of impatience. "Oh, do stop that!" she said crossly. "Gibbs is almost 40 and he'll be fat in no time at all. And you know well enough he's had heaps of affairs—with married women, too. No wonder you're against him? She has a perfect right to be."

"But I love him," Zoe protested, blue eyes swimming, red lips pouting. "You just won't understand. You're so—so hard about it. Kay, just wait till you fall . . ."

"It's nothing to do with me," Katharine said. "Why drag me in?"

"You'll know some day," cried Zoe with spirit, mopping her eyes. "Then you'll be sorry you were so unkind."

Katharine melted. "I didn't mean to be, honestly. What can I do to help?"

Their conferences usually ended this way. Katharine was the stronger of the two, yet the soft, yielding Zoe could usually bend her to her way of thinking.

"I thought we might get our parents to let us take a trip together," she began.

"But you've only just got back," Katharine said.

"I know, but we could say we wanted to do New England—the antique shops and so on . . ."

"And slip up to Maine and see Gibbs? Is that it?"

Zoe nodded.

Katharine frowned. "It's much too transparent. Bertine would be sure to see through it. She's much quicker than your mother about things like that."

"She'd never suspect you," said Zoe slyly, "of deceit."

Katharine flushed. It was true. Bertine would think that she would look after Zoe properly. Well, and she would, too!

"No, I can't possibly do it!" "Oh Kay, darling, think about it won't you?" Zoe looked as if she might burst into tears again.

"I don't really like Gibbs," Katharine began doubtfully. "Why should I foster this affair? I think it would be the worst thing you could do, to marry him . . ."

"Oh, marry?" Zoe opened her eyes.

"Well, isn't that what you're after?"

"He hasn't asked me, but he will," said the younger girl with a note of soft triumph.

"I've simply got to get back," Katharine said suddenly. Of course she loved Zoe as a sister, but this

April Production Of Automobiles Reaches New High

April production of Pontiac automobiles reached the high point of the year with a total of 18,749 cars, according to A. W. L. Gilpin, vice president and general sales manager of the Pontiac Motor Company.

"This figure brings our total production of 1935 models up to 70,558 cars," said Mr. Gilpin, "a figure which is 92 per cent of the total for last year of 1934 models. The entire 1934 model production was 76,553 cars."

"At the present rate of operation the 1934 model total will be surpassed before the middle of May. The number of unfilled orders on hand will put us over the 1934 total with several thousand to spare."

General Motors will spend $3,500,000 in the next few months upon expansion of production facilities for Pontiac automobiles at Pontiac, Mich.

Expansion of the Fisher Body corporation plant which supplies bodies for the Pontiac car will cost $2,500,000. In addition $1,000,000 will be spent in enlarging the Pontiac motor division plant.

The enlargement will include new buildings, machinery and equipment. Construction work has been started.

The rapid increase in the demand for Pontiac cars has exceeded the expectations for this year. This is bound to result in further demands being made upon the plant during the next year. We are moving to meet this expected increase in business.

Wheeler-Rayburn Motor company is distributor of Pontiac automobiles in Eastland and Cisco.

Mr. Inch then gave his views on how the electric and gas industries could aid in the recovery program. He said: "The alternative is the expenditure of immense sums of public money to accomplish something private capital can do better, the further destruction of the sources of government taxes, the imposition upon the people of a new social order under the guise of regulation and the wanton destruction of investors and investments alike."

Mr. Inch told the Senate Committee that the Electric Bond and Share Company is not and never has been a "paper" company. He stated: "It has, from the beginning provided the initiative, done the planning and obtained the money for the creation, development, and support of its group."

He said the Electric Bond and Share Company is the perfect example of one-hundred percent public ownership and that it never "milked" its operating companies. He pointed out that the services furnished by the Electric Bond and Share Company to its affiliated companies has resulted in substantial savings for these companies.

Mr. Inch pointed out how the Wheeler-Rayburn bill would take away local regulation from local and State Commissions and centralized this power in Washington. He also said it would handicap future financing of operating companies.

"The statement has been made that owners of securities of holding companies will lose nothing and that real values will be retained. This is incorrect and misleading," Mr. Inch said.

Mr. Inch presented a series of charts showing how taxes and food prices have been going up while the cost of electricity has been going down steadily.

Buck Whitt and Red Rodgers On Elks Mat Card

Two of the fastest bouts of the season have been booked for Monday night's show at the Elks arena. The first match headed by the aggressive wrestler, Red Rodgers of Dallas. He takes on a newcomer in Speedy Holt of Boston. Holt has invaded Texas and is after the welterweight title now held by Doug Henderson. Advance notice says Holt is a very capable man with plenty of everything to worry the best of them. The second match brings back Buck Whitt of Dallas, who holds the amateur Y. M. C. A. championship of the United States. His opponent will be Wildcat Hood of Fort Worth. Hood has improved in wrestling and has been very successful in his late bouts against the best boys at Fort Worth arenas. These bouts should give the fans plenty of action as all the boys are out to win. The show starts promptly at 8:30 p. m.

Shelvador Made At Home of Big Radio Station

With a tremendous power that carries broadcasts to radio listeners throughout the whole of the United States, Canada and Mexico—and, under favorable conditions, throughout the entire world—the new 500,000-watt WLW, owned and operated by the Crosley Radio corporation, makers of Shelvador electric refrigerators, is the most powerful broadcasting station in the world. That this new giant of the air accomplishes the purpose of providing the largest possible number of radio listeners with the best possible radio entertainment is perhaps best indicated in the following facts. There has been an increase in the signal strength of WLW of approximately 325 per cent at all points over the 50,000-watt station. The effective service area covers a huge circle approximately 5,000 miles in diameter—an increase of approximately 1,000 per cent. The gigantic 831-foot high vertical radiator antenna of the new WLW is one of the world's highest structures. It is 273 feet higher than the Washington Monument in Washington, D. C., and only 153 feet short of the famous Eiffel Tower of Paris. A distinct departure from the traditional type of antenna, this new antenna greatly increases the signal strength. The design and construction of the new transmitter required more than two years and a total expense of nearly $500,000. Tune in to 700 kilocycles (70 on your dial) and enjoy the thrill of listening to this giant of the air. Crosley Shelvador electric refrigerators are sold in Ranger by the Ranger Furniture Exchange on the N. H. A. easy payment plan.

ROLLING TESTS PROVE QUALITY BEFORE LEAVING FACTORY

There is not a particle of guess about the efficiency of Crosley Shelvador and Tri-Shelvador electric refrigerators. Each unit is measured up to the high standards of excellence demanded by the industry. The performance of the refrigerating unit, the heat resistances of the cabinet, the least consumption, the cost of operation are all determined by rolling tests. That a comprehensive picture of the inner workings of the refrigerators can be ascertained, are put through grilling tests more severe than they will ever be put to in actual use. Cooling rooms where the heat is as high as the hottest part of Sahara desert, Crosley refrigerators are operated for several days. The temperatures of these "hot rooms" range from 130 degrees Fahrenheit. Thereby, Crosley engineers with minute gauges and testing instruments know precisely that every part of the Crosley refrigerator functions in accordance with its specifications. And owners of Crosley refrigerators are assured that they will have long life-free service.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY

IN THE very beginning the Ford Motor Company realized the importance of good service. It was first to standardize tools and equipment and establish low flat charges for parts and repairs. Today in any community you can see how far Ford has progressed toward the goal of providing service as good as the car. The thousands of modern Ford dealerships are within reach of most of the millions of Ford owners. Other thousands of dependable garages and service stations—identified by the Ford sign—provide supplementary service and Genuine Ford Parts. When you buy a Ford you can get the kind of service a good car deserves. One of the features is precision workmanship. You can exchange a used Ford engine, carburetor, distributor and other assemblies for "FACTORY EXCHANGE" units at much less than the usual replacement or repair cost. This is "Universal Service" in every respect, broadening constantly through the addition of Ford Neighborhood Service Stations, where you can get extra-quick service—gasoline, oil lubrication, repairs.

New Trench Silo Protects the Farm

SHIRO, Tex.—J. E. Neason, Grimes county farmer of this community, has designed a trench silo to prevent losses on untrained land.

His method of construction provides a special drainage system for the silo and he predicts that farmers will save thousands of dollars if they copy it.

Neason solved the caving problem by sealing the sides with pine boards. He placed 14-foot oak poles in four consecutive rows and formed three bins by tacking wire netting along each row of poles.

He covered the insilage with six inches of soil and constructed a dirt bank on the rim of the silo to prevent surface water from running into it. Well spoilage was reduced by this method.

On feeding, he exposed only one section of the silo at a time, thus reducing spoilage from exposure.

Neason said the three-bin silo is

Still Is Operated By Exact Time

QUANAH, Tex.—Somewhere in the sand hills of cedar breaks of Hardeman county is a whiskey still "operated by the clock."

The proprietor of the still sought out H. B. Warde, local jeweler, and asked him for a rush repair job on his pocket timepiece. Warde was busy but the stranger was in a hurry.

To prove it, the latter admitted that he had a "batch on" and said: "I'm timing it and I gotta get back right away."

A new spring was inserted and the ticking satisfied the customer.
