Court Pondering Woman's Pose of Leg Over Her Knee

ISTANBUL.—Whether it is an outrage to the law for a woman to sit with one leg across the other is being discussed by the Turkish criminal court in Turkish Anatolia.

The offending Turkish woman is Madame Najla Kipchak, a history teacher in the secondary school of the town.

She attended a sitting of the court as a member of the public, and taking a front seat, placed one leg across the other.

The usher called her to order, saying, "that is not how one sits in court." She answered sharply, and the usher instituted proceedings against her for outrage to a magistrate in the exercise of his functions.

Then the case came up, Madame Kipchak defended herself by saying that in her opinion good manners in the twentieth century allowed a lady to place her right leg over her left knee or her left leg over her right knee without it constituting any lack of respect to a court of law.

She replied to the magistrate that she was well-grounded in notions of law and sociology as well as etiquette.

The court was adjourned for witnesses to give evidence as to the exact angles at which her legs were crossed.

HAMMETT WINS RANGER GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

J. T. Hammett, youthful golf star from Pioneer, had to shoot sub-par golf to win the championship of the fifth annual invitation tournament of the Ranger Country Club Thursday afternoon by defeating Houston Cole of Ranger, medalist and runner up, by a score of 1-up, 20 holes.

Hammett got a rest during the morning rounds when H. G. Agnew of Ballinger, who was in the semi-finals, defaulted in order to return to Ballinger to play in a tournament in which he had qualified.

In the morning Cole went to the 19th hole before winning from James Phillips, as both shot a sub-par 65 on the first 18 holes in one of the closest tournament matches seen on the local course since 1932 when D. A. Harkrider won from Phillips in the finals on the 21st hole.

W. E. Storey of Eastland defeated H. G. Foy of Ranger 2-1 in the second flight finals to win in his division after Foy had eliminated H. H. Vaughn Wednesday afternoon in an extra hole match.

Livestock Shipping From Texas For May Increased

AUSTIN.—Aggregate livestock shipments from Texas to Fort Worth and interstate points during May were sharply above those of the similar month last year, according to Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director and statistician of the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas. The increase occurred almost entirely in the group classified as cattle supplemented by a small expansion in shipments of calves. There was a substantial decline in forwardings of both hogs and sheep.

Marketings of all classes of livestock combined totalled 7,298 cars against 5,292 cars during May last year, an increase of 38 per cent. Comparative figures for the four classes of livestock composing this total were: cattle, 5,690 vs. 3,492 cars, an increase of 63 per cent; calves, 619 vs. 499 cars, an increase of 25 per cent; hogs, 264 vs. 351 cars, a decrease of 25 per cent; and sheep, 734 vs. 959 cars, a decrease of 24 per cent.

Shipments during the first five months of the year aggregated 24,874 against 24,073 cars during the corresponding period last year.

A breakdown of the May shipments to the different markets, feeding, and grazing areas reveals some interesting variations from the comparable figures a year ago. For example, the number of cattle (not including calves) shipped to California points other than Los Angeles was 6,167 head against only 67 head last year. For other points showing market changes in shipments of Texas cattle from a year ago the respective figures were: Chicago, 2,605 vs. 1,930 head; other Illinois points, 17,289 vs. 4,503 head; Missouri points other than the large markets, 5,116 vs. 1,366; Nebraska points, excluding Omaha, 11,176 vs. 4,153; and Iowa, 13,091 vs. 2,473. Fort Worth received almost 57,000 head of Texas cattle compared with less than 30,000 last year.

THREE HOMES ARE LOST IN RANGER FIRE

Fire which broke out early Friday morning destroyed three frame houses at 416, 420 and 424 South Rusk street in one of the most disastrous blazes in Ranger this year.

By the time the firemen reached the scene the houses were a mass of flames and the three structures were a complete loss within about 30 minutes of the time the fire was discovered. The houses and contents were completely burned, firemen reported.

Clayton Hunt, who lives across the street from the scene of the fire, was returning from Brady, where he had appeared with the American Legion Tickville Band in a program, when the fire started with an explosion, he reported to the fire department. He rushed to the fire station, about five blocks away and turned in the alarm.

The blaze started in a house occupied by J. O. Davis and quickly spread to the home of Mrs. Henry Stewart and then to a smaller structure on the north. The south wind whipped the flames from one house to another, quickly consuming the houses.

At the Stewart home a piano was removed from the house, but those attempting to save it were forced to abandon it near the house and the flames destroyed it, too.

No report had been made Friday morning as to whether any of the loss was covered by insurance.

All three houses were reported to have belonged to the Ella Walker estate.

In the middle west several deaths were attributed to the excessive heat. Returns from 20 states showed that 85 were drowned, 73 victims of auto accidents, eight were slain, and 19 were killed from miscellaneous causes.

COMMENTS ON PROVISION OF THE MEASUREMENT

"Sober Responsibility and Willing Cooperation" Need Roosevelt Declares.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—President Roosevelt today signed the Wagner labor relations bill in law and said "it should serve as an important step toward the achievement of just and equal labor relations in industry."

Cautious, however, that successful operation of the new law guarantees labor the right to organize for collective bargaining, would require a sense of "sober responsibility and a willing co-operation on the part of management, labor and the public."

President Roosevelt warned, to against expecting too much from the law. He emphasized that its purpose is to protect labor in organizing and bargaining. He said "it may eventually eliminate or major cause of labor disputes, but it will not stop all labor disputes."

Mr. Roosevelt also pointed out that the law "is applicable on when violations of the legal right of self organization would burden or obstruct interstate commerce."

Industry is expected to introduce early test cases to bring supreme court ruling.

ON TEXAS FARMS

Government reports received here indicate that Texas handled wheat contracts covering 3,674,186 acres which, by Oct. 1, 1934, had brought first rental payments of $3,726,395.44 to producers.

The average local cost of handling this work in Texas was 1.2 cents per bushel. For the United States as a whole the cost was 1.42 cents.

Parker county with a cost of 4.2 cents per bushel, Ellis with 4.3, Fannin with 4.6 cents, and Hockley with 5 cents, are the highest for the state.

Sherman is lowest with a .7 cents per bushel. Next are Bell, Briscoe, Jack, Knox, and Ochilree counties with costs of .8 cents per bushel.

Close to them are Grayson, Hemphill, Lipscomb, Roberts and Tarrant counties with a .9 cents.

Texas has handled AAA programs in which the aggregate payments amounted to about one-eighth of the total for the United States.

Texas expenses in connection with this work amounted to only one-thirtieth of the total expense of the United States.

NEWTON—J. H. Waterhouse of Newton is convinced that it pays him to care for his 100 peach tree orchard, for there is a heavier set of fruit and the peaches are one-third larger where he fertilized his trees than where he did not, according to J. B. Dorman, county agricultural agent.

Waterhouse sprayed his orchard in late winter with lime sulphur. At the suggestion of the county agricultural agent he also used two to three pounds of 6-12-6 fertilizer around most of his larger trees—those six years old and older. It is these trees that have the heavier set of fruit and the larger size of fruit.

ALLEY OOP By HAMLIN

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON PICTURES OF SILVER BEULAH K. HICKS

RELIGION IN NATIONAL LIFE
Exodus 24:3-8, 12-18
Golden Text—Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.—Psalm 33:12.
Moses—the word brings many pictures to mind; Moses as a baby in the bulrushes found by Pharaoh's daughter; the royal heir in the palace; with the slaves; the slaying of the Egyptian; 40 years as a shepherd, and many others.
Mt. Sinai, and abrupt mass of rock runs from the southeast to the northwest, is almost two miles long and one mile broad. It is 6,500 feet high, terminating in two peaks, Jebel Musa is the southeastern peak, 7,363 feet high. Ras Sufah (Sinai) the northwestern peak, 6,935 feet high. Mt. Sinai ends in a precipice 2,000 feet high and directly facing the plain of Er-Rahah, where there is an abundant supply of water from six ever-flowing springs and green pastures. It was here the people camped where they knew that the presence of God was on the mountain which was plainly visible from their abode.
There was a barrier at the foot of the mountain, that the people might not touch it, while a cloud hung over its summit and thunder and lightning played over it.
How great Moses shines out as he ascends into the mountain and talks with God and brings back the messages to the people. The people were ready to receive the messages for they had used two days with which to sanctify themselves. They had bathed their bodies and washed their garments, realizing that physical cleanliness is an appropriate symbol of purity of soul. They were awed and shaken by the physical manifestations of Divine presence on the mountain, but realized that they were entering upon a life of divine guidance, adopting a form of worship and receiving a system of laws.
Moses' life of 120 years was lived in three cycles of 40 years each. The first cycle ended when he finished his life in the royal palace, killed an Egyptian and fled into the wilderness.
He married the daughter of the chief priest of the Midianites and became a shepherd. Perhaps it seemed a pity that such education and culture as belonged to Moses should be used to look after sheep. But it was here that his real education began.
He wandered over blistering sands, up grim wadies in a vast silence broken only by the bleating of the flocks, the scream of the vulture or perhaps a wild beast until the passion, self-will, and presumptuous recklessness of the first phase of character in which we studied his life die down and a great change occurs in his way of thinking.
Can the people of today blame our leaders for a confused political life in our nation? The individual votes and puts the men in office whom they think will fulfill their desires for decency and order in law. But do the Christian people take their political wishes to God asking for advice and wisdom? Too often the Christian says that you cannot mix politics and religion and goes along worshipping God in a half-hearted way, not studying God's wishes in his life. The study of these people, their vows, prosperity, sin and punishment will convince anyone that all of life, no matter what form, can be bettered by taking counsel of God and following after it. No nation that forgets God can stand through the ages. True wisdom is of God.
Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: And with all thy getting get understanding. Prov. 4:7.
A great political life depends upon God's children because they alone have access to this wisdom in God's word. Then having gained this with all of one voice they can place in office great men, who are willing to be led of God and lead the people into a friendship of God.
"Knowledge is now no more a fountain sealed. Drink deep until the habits of the slave, The sins of emptiness, gossip and spite And slander die."—Tennyson.

Land of Free is Denied as Aim of Puritan Fathers

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Prof. James G. Leyburn, Yale sociologist, has shattered the popular belief that the Puritan leaders were establishing equality when they founded the Massachusetts Bay Colony.
"Instead of throwing off the be-draggled garments of Europe and tried to keep them even when they were in rags," he revealed in a study of pioneers.
"When a group of people leave an old and settled country to start life again upon the frontier," he wrote, "they ordinarily do not wish to give up all their accustomed and familiar ways. On the contrary, they wish to keep as much as they can of the old civilization, merely changing those parts of it which seemed to them disadvantageous."
Harvard System Cited
"To the Puritan leaders there was a natural aristocracy, composed of the clergymen and the small group of 'gentlemen' who stood squarely with the clergy in this theocracy. This new land, they held, should be ruled only by God's elect. Early magistrates came from this class. Students at Harvard were listed and seated, not in alphabetical order, but according to their 'dignities.'
"Merchants and traders ranked next to the aristocrats, and after these the skilled laborers, generally freeholders, who did most of the work of society. Many of them secured a vote by meeting property qualifications."
Laborers Ranked with Indians
Next in order Prof. Leyburn listed unskilled workers, indentured servants, negroes and Indians.
"These class distinctions," he said, "were carried out in the allotment of town lands, of church pews and even the work of establishing the new settlements on the frontier. Various other practices were based upon them: the punishment of whipping was not administered to the gentry; titles of Master and Mistress were accorded to them only; women of the lower class could not wear silk unless their husbands were worth 200 pounds.
"The whole tradition was against democracy—and yet it prevailed."

Merchants Charging For Delivery Must Get State License

AUSTIN—Merchants who are charging for delivering goods by truck in towns outside the place of sale must get motor carrier permits, Tilden Childs, assistant director of the motor division, state railroad commission, has announced.
The order follows a ruling of the court of civil appeals at Galveston in litigation between the commission and the New Way Lumber company, appealed from Houston.

Many wholesalers, Childs said, have been selling goods and adding 20 cents a hundred pounds to f. o. b. prices as a "service charge." Others are including the charge for transportation without separate billing. Still others, he said, call it a "code" charge.

All must meet requirements of the state motor carrier law. "Hundreds of merchants will have to obtain permits from the railroad commission or discontinue hauling merchandise over the highways," Childs said. That will divert the traffic to motor trucks and railroads authorized to transport it.

A series of hearings will be held on applications for carrier permits. Ten days must expire between receipt of the notice of application and the holding of a hearing. Childs hopes to conclude them all by Aug. 31, when the state's fiscal year ends.

CUERO, Texas.—Tom Cheatham, attorney, asked the defendant, Emmett S. Cook, charged with assault to murder, to show a district court jury what transpired in the fight.

Cook straddled the "victim"—Cheatham—on the floor and jabbed him. He had been knocked unconscious by a knee jab to the ribs. When he was lifted to his feet, blood ran from his ears.

Cook was sentenced to one year in prison.

Thieves Take Statue From Houston Park

HOUSTON—Sam Houston park fans raised such a howl when the bronze figure of a gronoe that held aloft a water dish for more than 20 years, disappeared that a corps of city detectives were enlisted in a search.

The little Brownie was found in a junk yard, sold by thieves who twisted the statue from its foundations and sold it for only $2.87.

Brownie was replaced on a firm foundation. The thieves were never apprehended.

Postal Directory Shows Many Queer Names For Towns
By United Press
DALLAS.—Using the names of Texas towns as a standard, the Lone Star state is equipped for almost everything, the postal directory reveals.
For lovers of ease there is "Elysian Fields," "Comfort," and "Paradise," while for those who prefer a more rigorous life there is "Board House," "Bald Prairie," "Frost," and "Mud."
Bee lovers are particularly well

Texans too, can have all of the advantages of travel along with the comforts of home. They can visit "Albion" or the "Alhambra," go to "Dublin," "Jericho," "London," "Moscow," "Naples," "Nordheim," "New Ulm," "Paris," "China," "Rhome," or "Tokio"—all without leaving the borders of the state.
Or they can go to "Telephone" and "Call," "Louise" or "Fred" or "Katy," or "Margaret," or "May." Cowboys will particularly like "Lariat," "Bronco," "Snipe" or "Spur." Barbers ought to be at home at "Razor," and farmers at "Pumpkinville" or "Blossom."

For soldiers is a "Fife" and a "Flag," and for sailors an "Admiral."
Business men should find "Acme," "Progress" or "Prosper" attractive.
There is almost no end of "trick" names in the Lone Star state. The last town in the directory is "Zybach," but a more appropriate one to end the list on is "Goodnight."

U. S. Makes Example of Conniving Lawyer

One of the most significant moves in the government's fight with the underworld took place almost unnoticed at Oklahoma City the other day, when a lawyer was convicted in federal court of sharing in money that had been paid as a kidnap ransom.

The lawyer was Ben B. Laska of Denver, and his conviction represented one more off-shoot of the famous Urshel kidnaping case, in which 19 other persons have already been convicted. And the significance of this last conviction lies in the fact that it begins a campaign by the government to teach attorneys that they must not share in the illegal profits of gangs.

Laska's case is instructive, as an example of the way in which it is possible for a lawyer to overstep the bounds of proper procedure in defense of a gangster.

Retained as counsel for Albert Bates, one of the leaders of the kidnap ring, Laska was accused of having received $10,000 in cash from Bates' stepson, Edward Feldman. This money, according to Feldman, was part of the Urshel ransom money.

In addition, Feldman testified that Laska directed the hiding of Bates' share of the ransom money, and gave instructions which enabled Feldman to evade arrest for 15 months after Bates had been captured. Feldman's mother testified that she had wished to surrender, but that Laska had told her she would "get her throat cut" if she did.

All this, presented to a federal jury, resulted in a speedy conviction for one of the most prominent criminal lawyers of the west.

Charting a proper course for a lawyer who defends a crook is a delicate matter. Any man accused of crime has the right to hire counsel, and his counsel has the right to pit up the best kind of fight for him that he can. Yet there is a dividing line between ethical practice and outright criminality which an over-zealous attorney can easily cross.

Against the lawyer who puts up an honest fight for a client there can be no quarrel. But the lawyer who takes that one extra step, and gets over the dividing line, becomes an outright accomplice of the gangster.

He profits by the fruit of the gangster's crimes, in a direct and unmistakable way; he helps his client avoid detection and advice he gives, he become a silent partner in the crime ring.

Nothing would help more, in our fight against crime, than an effective campaign to punish such lawyers. The Oklahoma trial ought to remind "border line" attorneys that it isn't healthful to overstep that dividing line between ethical practice and criminal conniving.

Chaco Peace Reveals Futility of Fighting

The war in the Gran Chaco, recently brought to an end through the good offices of diplomats from other South American nations and the United States, has been in many ways a fine laboratory specimen by which war as an institution could be studied.

In no way has this been truer than in the way by which the war finally stopped.

After three years of fighting and the loss of 100,000 lives, Paraguay and Bolivia agreed to sign a truce.

Under the terms of this truce, a neutral military commission fixes the lines separating the rival armies. Demobilization is undertaken by each side, with the understanding that each army will be reduced to 5000 men within 30 days, and that no new war material will be bought.

Once the armies are demobilized, direct negotiations between the two nations will be held at Buenos Aires to settle the territorial question at issue. If these negotiations fail, the two nations agree to submit the whole question to the World Court for final settlement.

All of this seems to be a sane and sensible way to settle a bloody and expensive mess. But there is one point about it that is bound to strike any student of international affairs with tragic force.

Since the two nations have finally agreed to put the whole dispute up to arbitration, failing agreement between themselves—why could not they have agreed to this three years ago and saved the lives of 100,000 men?

What has the war brought Paraguay and Bolivia, anyway?

They wind up exactly where they started. They spend three years in a struggle which, in proportion to the wealth and population of the nations involved, was about as costly as the World War itself. They kill off the flower of each other's manhood, and saddle themselves with debts which will not be paid for generations.

And at the end, they agree to do exactly what they might have done in the first place—settle it peaceably, by negotiation if possible and by arbitration if negotiation fails.

Could there be a more eloquent sermon on the futility of war?

"Dusting the Covers of Texas History" For the Texas Centennial Celebrations of 1936

A motion was passed in the house of representatives that "such labor on this house as disturbs the deliberation of congress during the hours of its session shall cease." The new capitol building at Houston, unfinished when the session began, was still unfinished, and congress had been transacting business in it for two weeks. In October, plaster in the hall of representatives was removed as being unsafe, and a stove was ordered. Efforts at improvement did not help matters much. There was much discontent among those assembled over the selection of Houston as the seat of government. Secretary of Treasury Henry Smith had only a temporary shed for his office. Nothing was suitable for occupation, and the streets were almost impassable. An editorial in the Telegraph in October respectfully called the attention of the mayor and aldermen "to the muddy condition of the streets about the capitol, and the president's house. The comfort and health of the inhabitants and visitors demand that these streets be drained." It was signed "Many Voters."

At the special session held in September, T. J. Rusk suggested that a committee of three from the house and a committee from the senate meet to select a site suitable for the government that would be permanent. Some site between the Trinity and Guadalupe rivers, no place over 20 miles above north of the upper San Antonio road, nor south of a direct line, running from the Trinity to the Guadalupe, crossing the Brazos at Fort Bend, was to be selected. Citizens of Houston objected to the inconsiderateness of the legislature. They believed the people of Texas "have too high a regard for justice to sanction such a measure" as moving the capitol. The committee reported that it had good timber—pine and cedar—and it was located on a navigable stream. There was enough good drinking water, much tillable land, and only 110 miles from schooner navigation. Washington-on-the-Brazos was next choice, eight miles from schooner navigation, in a rich and fertile country. A third suitable site was on the east bank of the Colorado river 35 or 40 miles below Bastrop, at the La Bahia crossing. San Felipe and Gonzales were possibilities, but neither had good timber. Below "first class" were the towns of Nashville, Tenoxiclan, the Falls of the Brazos, Henry Austin's site on the west bank of the Colorado, and a point near Sulphur Springs. Texas is justly proud of the rich lands which still characterize the Colorado and Guadalupe country. Those who visit Texas for the Centennial in 1936 will understand why the commissioners favored the sites mentioned.

Dead Man Recovers In Ship's Ice Box

PORT ISABEL. — Guadalupe Martinez, fisherman, suffered stroke while aboard the "Dorothy" a sloop, 25 miles from shore. His comrades applied artificial respiration for three hours, gave him up as dead. Martinez was placed in the boat's ice box pending return to shore. Martinez revived during frigid confinement and pounded on the box for release. He recovered.

BOSTON.—Patrolman John J. Kelley knows how it feels to get a kick out of work.

While on duty with his back turned, Kelley received a terrific kick. He grabbed the kicker, who assured him it was all in fun. The jokester explained, "You know how it is—I've wanted to kick a cop like that all my life. It's a joke." Kelley saw the point and released the man.
