WOMEN ARE WITNESSES IN UTILITY PROBE

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Two women were called before congress today to tell what they knew of the utility lobby in a Warren, D. C., telephone office and representative Ralph Brewster's part in a house utility fight.

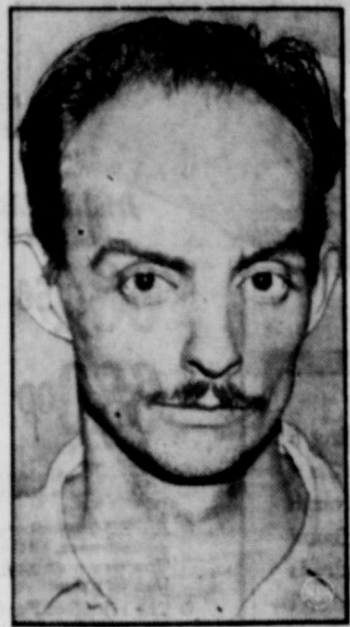

Testimony of Gladys Loding, telephone clerk in the Warren office and Mrs. Frances Duse, secretary to Brewster, occupied the senate and house inquiries.

The senate inquiry was directed toward revealing the details of the disbanding of some hundreds of telegrams from Warren to Rep. D. J. Peck, Dem., Pa., protesting against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill. Miss Loding and other witnesses testified the messages were signed with names taken from a city directory and original copies were mysteriously burned on the eve of the inquiry.

Elmer Danielson, bashful and aged, 19-year-old Western Union messenger, gave halting testimony as to other details of the Warren telegrams.

He testified he participated in the burning of the originals on the night manager of the office.

ROOSEVELT IS CONFIDENT OF PASSING BILLS

WASHINGTON, July 17.—President Roosevelt convinced he has a strong case, revealed to the conference of press men today that he is determined on enactment of his program this session, especially his tax measures.

Mr. Roosevelt, as a lawyer, recalled laughingly that it is an old trick of the defense when its case is weak to ask that it go over to the next session of congress.

He feels that what is happening in congress now in the drive for adjournment without enactment of his measures, such as the tax program.

For the third time he repeated he wanted the tax measure put through at this session, though he had not discussed it recently with congressional leaders.

RANGER POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW AN INCREASE OVER THE FISCAL YEAR OF JULY, 1934

Ranger's postal receipts showed an increase of $395.55 for the first six months of 1935, as compared with the first six months of 1934, it was revealed today by figures released by the local post office, while the increase of the fiscal year ending July 1, 1935 showed an increase of $407.35 over the fiscal year ending July 1, 1934.

The figures were encouraging as they showed a clear increase, not only for the six month period, and for the fiscal year, but every month since January, 1935, has shown an increase over the corresponding month of 1934, with the exceptions of February and March. During the month of February there was a decline in postal receipts when compared with February, 1934, and the decline continued through March.

The total receipts for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1934 were $18,426.66, while receipts for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1935, were $18,834.01.

A comparison of the figures for the receipts for the first six months in the calendar year 1934 with the calendar year 1935 shows the following month-by-month figures:

January, 1934, $1,697.53, as compared with January, 1935, when receipts were $1,845.15, an increase of $147.62.

February, 1934, $1,416.77 as compared with February, 1935, when receipts were $1,280.01, a decrease of $136.76.

March, 1934, $1,416.77 as compared with March, 1935, when receipts were $1,538.51 a decline of 154.74.

April, 1934, $1,475.50 as compared with April, 1935, when receipts were $1,532.48, an increase of $56.98.

May, 1934, $1,586.58, as compared with May, 1935, when receipts were 1,762.14, an increase of $175.56.

June, 1934, $1,280.34 as compared with June, 1935, when receipts were $1,486.35, an increase of $205.89.

MISSING MAN RETURNS TO RANGER HOME

While his many Ranger friends were fearing for his safety, radio stations were broadcasting the fact that he was missing and perhaps dead, and two news associations and several daily newspapers conducted a search for him, or his body, A. F. Hartman, reported missing enroute from Douglas, Ariz., calmly drove his car into Ranger Tuesday evening and went to his apartment in the P. & Q. building, unaware of the fact that he was the object of a statewide search.

Today he was being greeted on the streets of Ranger by his many friends and was being hailed as "the dead man."

Hartman left Douglas, Ariz., as reported in news dispatches from El Paso, on July 10. Several days later a steel lock box, containing papers that identified it as Hartman's, was found in a coal car in the El Paso freight yards. A check-up revealed that he was not in Douglas, El Paso or Ranger, and the search for him started.

Hartman said today that the box was stolen from his car while it was parked in El Paso. After leaving El Paso he continued on to the X Ranch of the Reynolds Land and Cattle Company, where he stayed a short time, continuing on to Monahans, where he stopped for two days before continuing his trip on to Ranger.

Hartman believes that the box was stolen by thugs who followed him from Douglas, where he cashed a large check, as the box stolen was in the bottom of a large carton in his car and the things on top of it had not been stolen, indicating that the thief or thieves were after the box only.

Hartman said, also that the missing interests in which he is interested in Arizona, looked very promising, but that they were shut down at this time because of strikes.

Unloading Lime Basis of Suit

Claiming permanent disability from inhalation of lime fumes which has brought into activity a previous latent case of lung trouble, Sam Garrett has filed suit in 91st district court against Hartford Accident & Indemnity company. The case is an appeal from a ruling of the Industrial Accident Board made on July 9.

Garrett asks judgment for $3.20 per day for 401 weeks or a total sum which the court might decide.

The plaintiff alleges he was working for the Lone Star Gas company as a laborer on a road two and one-half miles west of Ranger August 14, 1934, unloading lime which was in paper sacks; that he was not wearing a mask; that because of the work on April 15 of this year he found out he was unable to work and his alleged injuries are permanent.

RAILROADS MAY REDUCE COACH FARES

LONDON, July 17.—Consideration of the explosive Abyssinia crisis in the League of Nations was regarded as assured today when the government decided to send Anthony Eden to Geneva Tuesday to attend a meeting of the council.

When the council last met it was agreed to meet July 25 to consider the crisis if negotiators had not liquidated border clashes or named an impartial chairman to cast a deciding vote on them.

The big powers tried hard for weeks to sidetrack council consideration. Recent diplomatic activity had been indicated at trying to support Italy, however, and the news of Eden's assignment was regarded as notification this course had been adopted.

Irving C. Koch, examiner for the commission, reported the present regular basis passenger fare structure of 3.6 cents a mile is unreasonable.

He recommends the commission establish 2 cents for passenger fares in coaches and 3 cents in Pullmans. Koch also said:

An organization is being perfected this week to select one or two varieties of cotton suitable to the black land belt of which Dallas county is a part.

The ultimate goal of the organization will be to decide upon one variety of cotton most suitable to the conditions of the black land belt. This type must be selected by the farmers themselves, it was stated out, and their representatives will study the various types. Experimental stations and will hold a meeting probably in the latter part of August to compare results.

By growing a standard type of cotton the authorities hope to avoid the pest problem which has plagued the area in a mixed cotton yield, resulting in a lower grade and a lower market price, authorities said.

How You Can See How Peace Theories Work

Whatever else it may do, the dust-up between Italy and Abyssinia is at least providing us with a practical test of some of our fine-spun theories about the way to work for a warless world.

An example or two can be found in the discussion of the matter held recently in the British House of Commons.

Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, suggested that England would welcome any offer of American co-operation in the effort to avert war; but he warned the Commons not to expect too much, adding:

"Let us foster friendship and maintain in our intercourse a realistic attitude toward each other. We must expect no more from our American friends than they are willing to contribute."

This, of course, was simply a reminder that isolationist sentiment is so strong in America nowadays that Washington cannot be expected to make more than a gesture. And that, in turn, calls attention to a fact that friends of peace often overlook: when you try to stop two persons from fighting, it may be necessary for you to do it by force if they won't listen to reason.

In other words, Anglo-American intervention in this quarrel would have scant effect unless everybody clearly understood that in a showdown the two nations would use guns to enforce their views.

Since it is perfectly obvious that neither cares to do that, the sensible thing is to warn everybody to "expect no more from our American friends than they are willing to contribute."

All this, boiled down, simply means that the world is not yet ready for League of Nations Kellogg treaties, and so on. In the last analysis, these things must rest on force, or at least on the threat of force.

If it be known in advance that the force won't be applied, they collapse—as, in point of fact, they already have collapsed.

Then there is that other stunt, dear to the idealist, of embargoing the shipment of munitions to warring nations. The Commons were told that Britain has banned such shipments to Abyssinia, but has not needed to do so in the case of Italy, because Italy makes her own munitions and doesn't need to buy any.

In this case, the ban is less a move for peace than a deft bit of aid to Mussolini. It will not help prevent the war; it will merely make Italian victory more certain.

Here, then, are two bits of "peace machinery" getting a practical test. The one fails because no one cares to apply it properly; the other turns out to be a first-rate help to the party that is forcing the war.

Italy's African Affair May Be No Picnic

The very old and somewhat out-of-date empire of Abyssinia is about to fight with streamlined, modernized Italy, and if the sports fraternity were making book on the affair the odds would be at least 10 to 1, with practically no takers.

Yet the long shot does have a way of galloping home, occasionally, and if the views of an anonymous military expert writing in the London Spectator recently are correct, Italy stands a very broad chance of coming an inglorious cropper in the fighting in Africa.

This writer makes the point that Abyssinia is apt to be an easy place to get into, but a hard one to get out of. The Italian army, he says, ought to be able to drive its way into Addis Ababa, Abyssinian capital, without trouble; once there, however, its troubles would begin.

All the Abyssinians need to do, he continues, is to retreat. To catch and defeat them the Italians would have to cross a rugged mountainous country larger than Morocco—and it took most of France's great colonial army many years to make the Moroccans knuckle under.

All this is interesting chiefly as a reminder that wars are seldom fought according to the textbooks. On paper, a modernized and well-disciplined army like that of Mussolini's should have no trouble at all with a horde of semi-savage levies such as Haile Selassie can muster. In actual fact, such encounters often turn out differently.

Augustus Caesar of Rome discovered this 1900 years ago, when Varus got the flower of the Roman army entangled in the Teutoburger forest in Germany, where the barbaric tribesmen annihilated it. Cortez nearly met the same fate in his first drive at the Aztec empire.

The British regulars were no match for the Pennsylvania Indians when Braddock was trapped near Fort Duquesne. The crack cavalry regiment of the U. S. army was overwhelmed when the plains Indians got it in a blind alley at the Little Big Horn.

You could cull a column or so of similar instances from the military histories, but the examples that have been given so far are enough to make the point—which is that making war on a horde of poorly equipped barbarians is a much riskier business than it appears on the surface.

Mussolini's troopers will need all the good generalship and the good luck they can command, if the African campaign is to be the triumphal procession it is expected to be.

Alpinists Open Canadian Camp

By United Press
 BANFF, Canada.—The three-week encampment of the Alpine Club of Canada has opened in the Mt. Assiniboine area with camp pitched on the shores of Lake Magog.

As usual, the camp is open to non-members who qualify for membership by ascending such peaks in the Assiniboine area as the climbing committee approves. But there is ample time for recreation other than climbing. Even Alpinists require preliminary hikes. Each day's activities are concluded with a nightly camp-fire meeting where songs and stories alternate with talks on geology and climber's technique.

Special interest centers on one of the hikes to Assiniboine Pass and down to Cascade Rock, where a waterfall drops 1,500 feet sheer from the snow above. The precipices of Cascade and Gibraltar Rocks rise 2,000 feet above the trail. Directly opposite are the secret hollows of Cave Mountain, which are to be explored by veteran Alpinists.

Austrian Premier Hurt in Crash Fatal to Wife

Hints of sabotage and a broken steering gear veiled in mystery the auto accident in which Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg (top) of Austria saw so seriously injured doctors urged him to relinquish his high post and which killed Mrs. Schuschnigg (below) and injured his son, with whom he was returning to Vienna from a holiday trip. His condition made it possible that militant Prince Von Starhemberg would become chancellor.

Parisian Society Punches Cows and Spin Their Laiats

PARIS.—Parisian society is taking up American cow-punching this summer as a social pastime. An organization, known as the Club du Lasso, bringing together more than 300 high-ranking army officers, well-known writers, painters and industrialists, has been formed in Paris and now holds weekly Wild West competitions among members. It has staged two public rodeos which attracted large crowds. Plans are under way to form a branch organization for women which will be called the Club des Cow-Girls. Scores of women enthusiasts have signified their intention to join. The Club du Lasso specializes in lassoing. Members first are taught to become adept with the lariat on foot before they are allowed to do tricks on horseback. Roping experts are attached to the club as instructors. The organization has its own stable of horses and cattle. Its miniature ranch, in the heart of Paris, is decorated to look like the real Wild West of decades ago. The members themselves enter into the spirit of the play and garb themselves in leather chaps, red bandannas and large sombreros. The greatest difficulty, now that these dude ranchers are becoming expert with the rope, is to find cattle wild enough to give them competition. Bronco-busting plays a very smart part in the programs.

CANADIAN EMPLOYMENT SHOWS INCREASE

OTTAWA, Ont.—Nearly 22,750 more persons were working in Canada during June than in May this year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports.

Plan Services for The Short Course

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—A union service for visitors to the twenty-sixth annual farmers short course has been planned for Sunday evening, July 28, in the A. & M. college stadium, as a feature of the program for the second annual rural pastors and laymans conference to be held in connection with the short course. Dr. Harry G. Knowles, pastor of the First Christian church, Houston, will be the principal speaker at this service. Pastors and laymen of the various churches at College Station and Bryan will participate in the open-air service and congregational singing will be directed by R. J. Dunn, director of the A. & M. college band. Special music will be given by local musicians. Daily meetings have been scheduled for the pastors and laymans conference for the entire short course week in which prominent churchmen and laymen of the state will participate. Vesper services on the campus will be held throughout the week.

Carada Fells More Timber In Crisis

VICTORIA, B. C.—British Columbia is increasing its lumber operations despite the threat of being forced from the British and Japanese markets. A total of 569,322,377 feet of timber were cut in the province in the first four months of this year, compared with 478,337,335 feet last year. Whether the increased activity will be maintained depends on developments in two of Canada's greatest lumber markets, Britain and Japan. Timbermen here fear the threatened invasion of cheap Russian timber in the British market will drastically reduce the demand for British Columbia timber. Japan's treat of tariff reprisals against Canada, if carried out, would also deal a severe blow to the province's lumber export trade.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

SUN-TAN

When she was no longer sobbing, when the wells of her grief were dry, she lay there, staring at the pattern of the davenport.

started Jo. If he wrote her father, Jo knew, Arthur Darien would certainly prevent her from going to Crest Lake. He would be as quickly suspicious as Bret was. Jo's eyes narrowed, and her chin tilted upward a little.

"You haven't the right to advise my father about this," she said quickly. "Because—because you and I are finished."

Bret looked at her a long time, silently and contemptuously. Then he said quietly, "All right, Jo. Goodbye." The next moment the door had shut and he was gone. Jo heard his heavy, angry footsteps down the hall, heard the clang of the elevator gate as Bret let himself into the automobile.

For one uncertain instant she was about to follow Bret, crying out to him that she hadn't meant what she'd said. But in a sudden wave of clarity her brain told her she must stand solidly now on her own two feet, alone. Fortune had been good to her, unbelievably good, and she mustn't turn back the gift because her emotions wouldn't let her see clearly. If Bret really loved her he would believe in her; he would come back. And if he couldn't believe in her then she had lost him... forever.

In a sudden burst of tears she threw herself down upon the davenport and buried her head in her arms. Even when she was no longer sobbing, even when the wells of her grief were dry, she lay there, staring at the pattern of the davenport. Outside, the sun sank below the roof tops, and the little room in the Fendale grew dark.

At last, mindful that tomorrow she must make the journey to Crest Lake, Jo undressed for bed. It was only after she had reviewed again and again her argument with Bret, only when she had thought again and again that surely he would telephone for forgiveness, that Jo's eyes closed and her young breasts rose and fell rhythmically in sleep.

UNFORTUNATELY there was no night train which made connections with Crest Lake at a decent hour, and the day ride was dreary indeed. But, once the train reached the vicinity of the lake, Jo laughed. "They certainly did! You would have thought the Princess Marina was shopping. I'm afraid the bill is pretty large, so I hope—"

"Nonsense! I wanted you to do it up right, and I hope you did." He was silent a moment, giving all his attention to the twists of the road. Then he said, "I think I told you that some people call Mother 'eccentric,' didn't I?"

"Yes, I believe you mentioned something about it."

"Of course you'll meet her when we get to Crest Lake, and I want to warn you not to be alarmed or disturbed by anything she may say. She's a very outspoken old lady—and that's probably because so few people have ever had the nerve to talk back to her. She—" he cleared his throat nervously, and began again: "She wasn't very delighted about my idea of having a hostess at Crest Lake."

"Wasn't she?" asked Jo, her heart sinking.

"You see—I'll let you into the family skeleton closet just so you'll understand better—you see, Dad was a bit of a gadder, I'm afraid. And Mother's always afraid I've inherited the tendency. She may view you with a good deal of suspicion at first. But I know she'll like you once she knows you better."

"I—I hope so," said Jo uncertainly.

"I know she will. The main thing is not to be concerned about it. Just don't let it disturb you."

"I'll try not to," said Jo.

It occurred to her that Douglas Marsh might have been just a little more explicit about his mother before he had suggested Jo come to Crest Lake. The fact that Marsh was speaking of it now at such length surely indicated that Mrs. Aaron Marsh had decided against Jo Darien even before she had met her. She was probably inordinately jealous of her only son. Perhaps—perhaps something had happened in Marsh's past to make his mother suspicious of an unknown girl to whom he had offered this job. Was this an old story with Douglas Marsh, and was his mother's angry suspicion wholly justifiable? Jo could not bring herself to believe this, but in any event a jealous and unpleasant mother was not likely to increase the joys of a summer at Crest Lake. Jo almost wished she had never climbed aboard that train.

Locomotive Runs Wild Down Main Street of Town

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., July 17.—The locomotive of the Pennsylvania crack passenger train, the Liberty Limited, exploded in Main street today after striking a trailer, leaving the rails and plunging two blocks through town. Seventeen were injured. More seriously hurt were the engineer and fireman.

Roaring through town on its regular non-stop run, the train crashed into a truck trailer on Main street. The locomotive wrenched loose from the train, jumped the track and ran down the street at right angles to the rails. It overturned and exploded. The injured were in the three coaches which left the rails.

A real spirit of evangelism and religious fervor was paramount throughout the entire service. Evangelist Campbell said, during the message on "Self Discovery and Character Growing," that God was wise when he left out of man the gift of contentment and complete satisfaction...

CAPACITY AUDIENCE HEARS REV. PAUL CAMPBELL AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH REVIVAL

An audience that completely filled the church auditorium was present for the second service of the evangelistic series of meetings now being conducted at the First Christian Church by Rev. Paul Campbell of Weatherford. As interest has progressed so rapidly, arrangements are now being made to add extra chairs and seats, the benches to be placed on the walk leading outside of the building.

In addition to the sermon and illustrated crayon drawing, which was earned by Mrs. J. C. Carothers for her fine work in having 27 people who attended services through her invitation, Mr. Fisher delighted the audience with a beautiful solo.

Evangelist Campbell said, during the message on "Self Discovery and Character Growing," that God was wise when he left out of man the gift of contentment and complete satisfaction, for life's greatest moments come with the discovery of God and self. However sad it may seem, very few of us ever really discover our real worth and ability before we die. This is because we set limitations over ourselves and never explore the undiscovered qualities that are to be found in every person.

Police Pass Bogus Coin In A Case

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—Police Chief Paul Frey and Detective Baker Owen unknowingly passed a counterfeit half-dollar to a restaurant operator recently and were called immediately on the bogus coin. Frey gave the coin to Owen to pay a meal check. Owen gave it to the proprietor. The proprietor gave it back to Owen. As Owen started to return the coin, a secret service agent appeared, took the coin out of circulation.

CHAPTER 3 WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE... Paroled from the galleys after a five year sentence for stealing a loaf of bread, Jean Valjean, with revenge in his heart, struggles into the home of kindly old Bishop Bienvenu and finds in him at least one man with faith in the world and willing to trust an ex-galley-slave.

There is a knock at the door, and the housekeeper shows in a man in police uniform. As the man comes forward, Jean's hands, still holding the candlestick, drop slightly. It is Javert, when of the prison-ship. The two men come face to face, but Javert is precise and also deferent.

"What was that name?" "Jean Valjean." "Ah, and what was his crime?" "As an ex-convict he was ordered to report to the police at Pontarlier. He has never reported. I have been missing five years. I traced him to the Bishop Bienvenu. He stole silver, but the bishop would not charge. The trail ended there, and although I had no positive proof, I was so sure I denounced you."

"Real" Valjean Found... "And—what—what answer did you get?" "That I was mad. I must have been mad to make such a mistake—where, I was a fool, for the real Valjean has been found."

"I have denounced you, sir, as an ex-convict." "Yes, they arrested him last week at Arras. He gave by another name, Champmathieu, but he was caught for theft. The dates of his disappearances are identical with Valjean's records—situation will as near to him—a fellow-criminal recognized him. Undoubtedly they have the man, Valjean."

"You did your duty—it is your place to suspect." "Now for the first time we learn something of Javert's creed. His confession is in a husky whisper, a man deeply and sincerely ashamed and broken by his failure."

"You must. If you don't, then I must." "You have your creed, Javert; I have mine. As mayor, I refuse to accept your resignation. I order you to think it over."

"I am sorry to disturb you at this hour, but I have a duty—an urgent duty to perform." "Go on as I was sure—I had to act at once."

"I have denounced you, sir, as an ex-convict." "Yes, they arrested him last week at Arras. He gave by another name, Champmathieu, but he was caught for theft. The dates of his disappearances are identical with Valjean's records—situation will as near to him—a fellow-criminal recognized him. Undoubtedly they have the man, Valjean."
