Most Important Question Revival Sermon Subject

An answer to this, "What is the world's most important problem and question?" will be given tonight at the First Christian church, as the evangelistic campaign enters its fourth night. Another illustrated crayon drawing will be made before the audience and given to the person who has brought the largest number of people to the service. It will be "The Way of the Cross Leads Home."

In addition to the large audience, a delegation from Cisco was present last night to participate in the service that featured "Home Jesus Would Have It to Be."

In referring to this important subject, Evangelist Campbell said: "As goes the home, so goes the nation. Where are the mighty Roman and Egyptian empires? Gone! Yes, completely destroyed because of the failure of their home life. May the Lord send that the American homes, of sufficient number of them, remain true to the teachings of Jesus Christ, for only in that way will the United States escape the fate of Rome and Egypt."

It takes more than bricks, fine arts, expensive fixtures, and beautiful grounds to make a home. A real home must have a real owner—one who will lead the way to Christ and not expect mother to do all the spiritual burden of the family, one who will "take care" to be with his children, discuss with them their problems, and prepare them to face life with confidence and spiritual preparation, one who is determined, when he goes, to have left a good home for his family.

If both father and mother are followers of Christ, He is certainly going to be the silent, yet ever-present guest in that home—the home where the Bible and the family altar have the most prominent place—the ideal American home.

"Lease Hounds" Active As Swabbing Shows Breck Men's Wildcatter Near Albany Good For 250 Blbs. Per Day

In Breckenridge the well is interpreted as opening up a new oil era in Stephens county. Pitzer & West have spent about $25,000 on the well and have leased over 5,000 acres on the George DeLafosse ranch, which is midway between Breckenridge and Albany. The best producing pool is five miles north of Hox.

ALBANY, July 18.—On swabbing gauge after drilling approximately two feet of the pay in Shackelford county's deep oil test, the Pitzer & West No. 1 Geo. T. DeLafosse, eight miles east of here, the test showed 15 barrels for the first hour and 12 barrels for the second, being estimated as good for 250 to 300 barrels per day as it is.

Operators have definitely decided to acidize the well which is bottomed at a total depth of 4,452 feet after correction of steel line measurement. After striking the show from the Eilenberger line last week, the producing string of five-inch pipe was cemented and the large pipe was pulled. At noon the well was cleaning out, and after deepening two additional feet no increase in oil was encountered.

A large crowd turned out today for the opening of the test and a considerable amount of royalty and leasing play took place. One of the largest transactions was the purchase of a quarter royalty on 480 acres northeast of the well for a cash consideration of $4,000.

Popular Vote Opposes Statesmen's Wars

Once in a blue moon, someone takes the unprecedented step of trying to find out what the ordinary man in the street thinks about his country's foreign policy. When this is done the results are apt to be surprising. Some 40 organizations recently undertook a great poll of British citizens to see what sentiment might be in regard to the League of Nations, disarmament, and similar issues. All in all, they collected more than 11,000,000 votes, slightly less than 40 per cent of the entire British electorate. If the 11,000,000 people who voted represent a fair cross-section of British opinion—and there is good reason to suppose that they do—here is what the average Briton wants done:

- He is overwhelmingly in favor of British adherence to the League of Nations.
- He is almost equally overwhelmingly in favor of arms reduction.
- He favors international agreement to abolish military and naval aircraft and to prohibit the manufacture and sale of weapons for private profit.
- He favors the use of economic sanctions, such as the boycott, against aggressor nations which make war in violation of such agreements as the Kellogg treaty. By a lesser majority, he even favors the use of military measures against such nations.
- Add all of this together and you discover that the war-weary Briton not only wants peace, but is willing to take some risks and do some unorthodox things in order to get it. That isn't surprising. He lived through four and one-half years of war that almost wrecked his nation; he isn't keen to get another dose of the same.

Statesmen are fond of saying that wars come as a result of irresistible popular clamor; that the various treaties, agreements and leagues to preserve peace are all right in theory but do not command the popular support which they must have in order to succeed; and that a statesman who proposed outright disarmament, or tried to put real teeth in such a thing as the Kellogg treaty, would immediately be disowned by his own voters. This British poll would seem to give the lie to those claims. It shows that the people of at least one great nation—a nation which lives under the shadow of war, has enemies at its very frontiers and can look back on a long and proud tradition of military success—are ready, even eager, to go to almost any length to keep another war from overwhelming the world.

Village Philosophers Save Their Forum

The problem of free speech, as far as the ordinary citizen is concerned, is often not so much the problem of being allowed to say what you please as the problem of finding a good place in which to say it. Big cities handle the situation by setting aside public forums, and by organizing a multiplicity of clubs, lodges, and societies in which the individual gets his chance every now and then to air his views. Small towns, equally inventive, but having less to work with, have traditionally fallen back on the local postoffice. All of which is by way of prelude to the announcement that the village of Lincoln, Ind., has saved its postoffice—on the ground that, while it may not do much business in the way of stamps and letters, it does provide the citizens with a handy place to arise and speak their minds about the state of the nation.

Lincoln's postoffice was about to be closed. The village has fewer than 100 inhabitants, and postal business was not flourishing. Washington had decided that Lincoln could get along with ordinary R. F. D. service. But the people of Lincoln rose in wrath to protest. Maybe they didn't get or send much mail—but what would the village debating society do if its meeting place were closed? How could this or any other American small town get along if the cracker barrel philosophers would put out of business? To the credit of the authorities at Washington, these pleas were heard. As a result, Lincoln keeps its postoffice. And the whole thing has a distinctive flavor of rural America which cannot fail to stir the emotions of anyone who has ever lived in a small town. It would hardly be going too far to say that every American administration for the last century has had to stand or fall, in the long run, on the success or failure of its appeal to these village forums of postoffice and general store.

It is there, on drowsy afternoons and long evenings, that local sentiment solidifies; there that issues are canvassed and men's minds made up; there, in fact, that the public opinion of the nation is put into shape. It is altogether about as homely an institution as this country possesses. It is also one of the most powerful. It settles the fate of presidents and senators, of tariffs and foreign policies, of swings to the right and swings to the left. No matter who you are or what you are trying to do, sooner or later you have to sell your idea to the crowd in the village postoffice. If you fail, you are doomed.

Canning Kitchens in Porto Rico To Save Many Vegetables

By United Press
 COLLEGE STATION. — Community canning kitchens, soon to be built in Porto Rico, will make possible the preservation of meats and vegetables heretofore impossible, according to Miss Sadie Hatfield, Texas Extension Service staff member, who has just returned from the island.

Plans for the canning kitchens, where canning will be done on the share basis for relief purposes, were drawn by Miss Hatfield, who has spent the past three months in Porto Rico assisting in the training of native home demonstration agents in canning processes.

Seventeen relief administration representatives and six native home demonstration agents received instruction at the training school conducted by Miss Hatfield and Miss Mary Todd, of Georgia.

Extension Service work has been carried on in Porto Rico for the past 15 years, Miss Hatfield said, but home demonstration work dates only from the summer of 1934.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

WHETHER you live in the city or country, its high time to be thinking of putting a few jars of jam or preserves on the shelves.

Even in these days when the boughten varieties are so good, the homemade varieties have a flavor all their own. Here are a few recipes that will delight your family, just as they do mine.

Ruby Conserve

One quart red currants, 1 quart red raspberries, 1-2 pound raisins, 2 oranges, 6 cups sugar.

Wash currants. Put in preserving kettle with just enough water to prevent burning. Bring slowly to the boiling point and crush with potato masher to extract the juice. Simmer until juice flows freely and fruit looks white. Strain through a jelly bag. Wash oranges, cut in halves and remove seeds. Put through food chopper. Wash raisins, cover with boiling water and stone if necessary. Put through food chopper. Wash and drain raspberries. Put chopped oranges and juice with 1-2 cup water in preserving kettle and bring to the boiling point. Simmer until tender. Add sugar, currant juice, raspberries and raisins and cook until a spoonful tried on a cold saucer thickens. It will take about twenty-five minutes. Pour into sterilized glasses and cover with paraffin.

Another favorite in our family is watermelon preserves. It is very pretty and uses only the rind of the melon.

Watermelon Preserve

Six pound melon, 1-2 ounces powdered alum, 4-1-2 pounds granulated sugar, 3 lemons, 2 ounces ginger root.

Trim off the green rind and cut away the pink flesh. Make small balls with a vegetable cutter or cut in neat half-inch cubes. Dissolve alum in water and let

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, cereal, scrambled eggs, graham muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Liver and cabbage salad, toasted muffins, blackberry tapioca pudding, milk, tea.

DINNER: Pineapple juice cocktail, fried chicken (country style), cream gravy, baking powder biscuits, stewed okra and tomatoes, frozen fruit salad, toasted crackers, cheese, milk, coffee.

watermelon stand in alum water to cover overnight. In the morning, drain and weigh. Slice lemon very thin and remove seeds. Put all ingredients in preserving kettle with 1-2 cup water. Let stand an hour to draw out the juice. Bring to the boiling point and simmer until melon is clear. Skim out fruit and boil syrup until heavy. Return fruit, bring to boiling point and seal in sterilized jars.

Peach Conserve

I like to make this early white pineapples are still plentiful in the market.

Four pounds ripe peaches, 1 medium sized pineapple, 1 large orange, 1 lemon, 1-2 pound blanched and shredded almonds, 1-2 pound white seedless raisins, sugar.

Peel and dice peaches. Pare and grate pineapple. Grate rind from lemon and orange and squeeze out juice. Cook peaches and pineapple until tender. Add grated orange and lemon rind, raisins and lemon and orange juice. Measure and add 1 cup sugar to each cup fruit. Cook until thick, adding almonds ten minutes before removing from fire. Stir almost constantly after adding sugar. Tare into sterilized glasses and cover with paraffin.

Only 13 of these grades would need to be represented by physical type boxes of which at present there are 25. The standard set of boxes would include 8 grades of White and 5 grades of Yellow Tinged. This change would reduce the cost of a complete set of standard grade boxes from $125 to $65.

The standard boxes for the Yellow Stained and Blue Stained grades would be eliminated. The amount of cotton of these grades now found in the markets is so small that the bureau has had difficulty in obtaining enough samples to make up the official standards boxes.

Changes in the color of the crop in recent years have been toward white cotton. Research by the Division of Cotton Marketing—incorporating thousands of samples from the cotton belt checked by color analysis—has shown definitely that most of the cotton crop now falls in the White and Extra White, Strict Middling, Middling, and Strict Low Middling grades, with the higher grades tending toward Extra White and away from creamy or "buttery" color. Under the proposed plan the Yellow Tinged and Stained grades would be changed so that the Tinged grades

Heads Teachers of Nation

Memories of the tiny group organized in Portland, Me., by her pastor husband in 1881 must have stirred within Mrs. Francis E. "Mother" Clark, above, widow of the founder of Christian Endeavor, when she gazed on thousands of youthful delegates honoring her at their thirty-fifth annual convention in Philadelphia. In half a century, the organization's membership has grown from 50 to 4,000,000.

would no longer carry as deep a color as formerly and the new Yellow Stained grades would cover all cottons deeper in color than Tinged.

The Cotton Standards Act provides that any changes in the standards promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture shall be announced at least a year in advance of the effective date of the change. International agreements between the Department of Agriculture and the nine principal cotton associations of Europe provide that proposed changes shall be considered in advance of promulgation.

Two representatives of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, C. L. Finch and H. C. Slade, will go at once to Havre, France, with sets of the proposed new standards, which will be presented to representatives of British, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Dutch and Belgian cotton associations. Following the discussion of the changes at that meeting the bureau expects to hold similar hearings in the United States. Should the revised standards be promulgated they will be the object of consideration at the regular international cotton standards conference to be held in Washington in March 1936. Meanwhile, sets of the proposed new standards will be on display at the bureau in Washington.

KERRVILLE, Tex.—Kerrville's postal receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30 set the highest mark in the town's history, $27,760, which was $3,103 more than for last year. Total for 1929 was about $400 short of this year.

Trail Herd Passes, Writing Dying History in Dust

Across the vast dust-piled plains, stretching without relief to the far horizon, the trail herd wends its way, in perhaps the last of the great migrations that annually led hundreds of thousands of cattle to market and to new grazing grounds, in the halcyon days of the southwest cow country. With drooping heads, the 2000 cows and yearlings move, as if sensing that their hooves are printing the last chapter of the plains saga in the dust that swirls as they pass. From 27 miles north of Pampa, Tex., on the Grudny Morris ranch, cowboys drove the stock across the Texas Panhandle to the foothills of the Rockies, 225 miles away in northeastern New Mexico. Bitter pasture lands are there, drought and dust storms having taken heavy toll of the Texas buffalo grass on which thousands of range cattle once fattened.

It must be on highways that angels fear to tread; that's how they got that way.

Revision of Cotton Standards Urged To Meet Changes

WASHINGTON.—A revision of the United States official standards for cotton grades has been proposed by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics with a view to making white grades more representative of the cotton crop and of eliminating grade boxes has been changed to facilitate the standards. A set of the tentative revised standards was shown this week in Washington to a group of representatives of producers, co-operatives, spinners, and cotton merchants.

The suggested changes involve dropping the grades for Blue Stained cotton as well as the grade Strict Good Middling Yellow Tinged, and combining the Light Yellow Stained with the Yellow Stained grades. Two new grades, Strict Good and Extra White and Good Ordinary Extra White would be added, making a total of 32 grades instead of 37 as at present.

"it runs for just about a Nickel a day"

She's talking about her new electric refrigerator. She's agreeably surprised to find out that she has all the advantages of electric refrigeration—constant temperatures below fifty degrees, plenty of ice cubes, large food storage space and so on—for just about a nickel a day operating expense.

She's only one of more than a hundred thousand Texas homemakers that have found out that electric refrigerators are best suited to withstand the rigors of Texas' climate. Refrigerators that do a good job in more temperate climatic conditions just can't handle the situation down here. It takes reserve power and lots of it—and that's electric refrigeration's long suit.

Call your electric refrigerator dealer today—he'll be glad to discuss your refrigeration problems with you.

Collector Found His Prospect Dead

By United Press INDEPENDENCE, Mo.—W. S. Gilbert has discovered that collecting taxes from the dead is more than impossible—it is embarrassing.

Gilbert, attorney for the delinquent tax collector, received the following letter:

"The man you are trying to get taxes from is dead and has been for some time. So why pick on a dead man for something he does not know anything about? Let the dead rest and get them that is living and that don't ever pay at all."

much. You see, this isn't just an inn. The guests will come by invitation, and the majority are friends of mine. Of course, if they wish to bring others I don't mind. And I suppose if someone asked to come I wouldn't refuse. He laughed gaily. "I think it will be a lot of fun myself—but Mother's very dubious about it, although she likes the place."

"When will I meet your mother?" Jo asked with trepidation. He glanced at his watch. "You'll have time for a tub before dinner. Suppose we three have dinner together? I'll meet you downstairs—but first I want to see if you like your rooms."

Jo did like her rooms. She liked them tremendously, and she could imagine they would be twice as attractive in broad daylight when the sun streamed in on the ray carpet and the chintz curtains. There was a fair-sized sitting room, furnished with comfort and dignity; a small bedroom; and a shower and bath. There was even on the desk a row of new and brightly jacketed modern novels! "I never saw such a charming room," Jo told Marsh, her eyes taking it in delightedly. "I'm kind of like them," Marsh answered. He seemed genuinely pleased at her delight. "I don't want you to feel you have any set hours here. Jo. If some morning you feel like staying in bed until noon, then by all means stay in bed until noon. You can play tennis, or go bathing, or dance, or—well, anything you like—because you'll have to be the feminine touch in the management. I'm just a mere male, and of course I can't expect Mother to go in for these things." Jo laughed. "It doesn't sound like a job at all. Mr. Marsh, I'm afraid when summer is over I'll be so spoiled I won't even be able to find a job that suits me!"

Lost Diamonds Found In Shoe

DURHAM, N. C.—Two diamond rings which Morris H. Clarke lost have been found after more than a month, in the toe of his shoe.

After spending two days here in April and returning to his home in Washington, Clarke missed the rings. He notified Durham police, who conducted a careful investigation. Maids and bellhops at the hotel where he stayed were questioned. A heavy carpet was ripped up. Then came word Clarke had found the rings.

tor. You know, long-distance records and all that business." Jo laughed. "I've seen his picture in the advertisements, endorsing a cigaret." "Well," Marsh replied, joining her laughter, "he can't be flying all the time!" "As they drew alongside the huge wooden steps of the Inn two white-coated Japanese boys appeared excitedly and began groping for the luggage in the rumble seat. "I'll tell you now about these boys," Marsh whispered, "because you will have to direct them occasionally. We have six at the Inn, three on a shift—and just to simplify matters I call each set of three Tom, Dick and Harry. That's Harry taking your bags up the steps, and this—hello, Tom!" "Morris! Mistah Marsh," said Tom, grinning. "Have you Miss Darren's rooms ready, Tom?" "Yissah, yissah," said Tom, opening the roadster door for Jo to alight. Jo could not repress a gasp of delight at the great lobby of the Inn. Its expanse of gleaming floor was dotted with thick bear rugs and at one end a fireplace was throwing out a cheery blaze. Jo reflected amusedly that the Inn's fireplace was as large as the apartment she'd taken at the Fendele!

"The place is a bit deserted as yet," Marsh told her. "They'll begin to drift in next week, I imagine." He led her to the desk where a young man waited smiling. "Miss Darren," the owner of the Inn went on, "this is Mr. Penton who's at the desk in the daytime." "How do you do, Miss Darren," Penton said. "If there's anything I can do to make your stay more pleasant be sure to let me know." "When she and Marsh were returning across the lobby Jo smiled and said in a low tone, "I'm afraid you haven't told your employees that I only work here, too. Mr. Penton makes me feel like a guest." "Then I shall have to reprimand him," Marsh said, "because I want you to feel not like a guest, but as if this were your own place. Seriously, I've told them all that you were coming—and that they were to do anything you suggested. You see, you're the most responsible job of all, to see that the guests are made to feel at home." He smiled down at her. "You'll have no difficulty with the men, I'm sure." He was interrupted by one of the Japanese boys hurrying toward him with a penciled note. "This was telephoned from the station, Mistah Marsh. They send the wire by the next bus mail." Marsh nodded. "Pardon me, Jo. I think this may be from Pete Fragonet. . . ." He glanced at the short transcription of the telegram. "Yes, it's from Fragonet. The studio has given him some time off, and he'll be here with his wife next week." He showed the note into his pocket. "Now let me take you to your rooms. I didn't have an elevator put in," he laughed. "After all, people should have exercise on their vacations—and it's only one flight." "Most of the people who will be here," he continued, starting for the stairway, "are slender and young enough not to mind too

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Javert, inspector of police in a small town in Alsace, suspects M. Madeleine, magistrate and mayor of the town, and Jean Valjean, ex-galley slave, of being one and the same man. He reports the findings of his exhaustive research work to the authorities, but is laughed down as crazy. Considered that he is right, however, Javert dogs M. Madeleine's every step certain that sometime, in some way he will make a mis-step—and then he'll get his man.

Fight and Flight
Jean has to make up his mind whether he will save Champmathieu or not. As he stares, he instinctively feels the iron collar round his neck—it galls him. He feels the chain in his foot. The cunning, crafty look comes back into his face. Why should he give it all up? In a moment of hysterical rage he cries out:

"Toussaint! Cancel the carriage; I'm not going."
As he comes to this decision his eyes light upon the bishop's candlesticks. The sight of them brings him up short. He stares at them fascinated. The cunning look fades.

"No, I go to Arras at once."
The court is filled to capacity, but Jean is ushered to a place behind the magistrate's chair. The old convict, Champmathieu, is standing between two gendarmes. The only similarity between him and Jean is in the build, and with his rough beard and hair he has the same expression Jean bore while in the galley. There is no resemblance in features.

The unfortunate, half-stupid defendant is saddled with all the evidence piled up against Jean Valjean. Brevet, Champmathieu's Cochepaille, Jean's companion of the galley, all too readily identify him.

"You all know me? You recognize me? Good—I say—good—splendid—ha, ha! All right, send me back to prison—You might as well—for all the chance they ever give you. If, that's justice, send me back, I say! Send me back!"

The helpless agony of the man is too much for Jean. He comes to a conclusion, and as Champmathieu concludes his hysterical outburst he leaps to his feet.

"Brevet! Champmathieu! Cochepaille! Look this way!"
All eyes in the court turn to Jean, standing among the privileged spectators. Jean walks across the court to the witnesses, turns and speaks to the court as a whole.

"I Am Jean Valjean"
"Sir—I apologize—I beg your attention—a great injustice—the witnesses are mistaken—this is not the man—I am Jean Valjean!"
The announcement makes a sensation. The counsel looks up at the judge.

"You think I'm mad, gentlemen? My mind is clear, very clear. Look, I'll show you—"
"Brevet! You had number 13 place. You paid the warden ten francs to change it to number 12."
Brevet looks at him in amazement.

"Champmathieu, your left shoulder is bumped. You tried to efface the marks of the branding iron."

"Cochepaille, your right arm, a date in blue letters put on with burnt powder. Lift up your sleeve!"
Cochepaille does so and shows the mark.
"But, M. Madeleine," interrupts the judge.
"There is no M. Madeleine. There is only Jean Valjean. The law has a case against me. I shall be ready. You know where I am to be found."
But Jean never expects them to find him. His one thought is to lose himself to the authorities again as quickly as possible. He goes to the hospital to leave money with Fantine to take care of herself and Cosette. Javert arrives on his heels. He is no longer the humble, deferential person. This man, M. Madeleine, humiliated him before.
Fantine falls back in a fit of coughing in her excitement.
"Jean Valjean, I arrest you by order of the court. We want the saintly M. Madeleine, the forgiving Christian. Yes, you could afford to be lenient, couldn't you? You could afford to let me crawl to you and to forgive me. How beautifully you did it! Didn't you laugh to yourself afterwards—laugh heartily at that fool Javert, cringing to you—because all the time you knew I was right—M. Madeleine—Jean Valjean—convict!"
The shock is too much for the fast-tiring Fantine. With a faint cry, "Cosette! Cosette!" she falls back on the pillow—dead.
Jean moves slowly to Javert, his anger mounting.
"You did it! Your very presence killed her. So? Cosette shall go to an institution, eh? It's the law, is it? But there's an old law—older than ours—"
Then the whole of his restraint gives way and with something of the strength and fury of the man of the street he seizes Javert by the throat and huris him across the room with terrific force against the wall. Javert drops to the floor, insensible.
Jean and Cosette are standing at the doorway of the Convent Petit St. Jean, outside of Paris. The mother superior is reading a note Jean himself has penned:
"This will introduce my good friend, M. Duval, and his daughter Cosette—"
It is signed M. Madeleine.
"M. Madeleine has always been most generous to us," says the nun.
