Peace Sets Its Price In Great Sacrifices

For a people so anxious to keep out of war, we Americans do singularly little thinking about the price of remaining at peace.

We talk as if war were something that nations went into absent-mindedly. We assure ourselves that since the overwhelming majority of Americans don't want another war, we shall be able to stay out of it simply by an exercise of the will.

By talking and acting that way, we help to pave the way for a repetition of what happened in April, 1917.

What we need to understand is that peace has its price. It isn't something you can have by just wishing for it, in this modern world. You have to prepare for it, plan for it and make sacrifices for it.

George Sohle, editor of the New Republic, discusses the price of peace in a recent issue of his magazine. He points out that sales of American goods to warring nations, visits of American business agents to war capitals, loans of American money and the presence of American ships in war zones got us into the last war and would almost certainly do the same thing in the next.

The one remedy, therefore, he adds, is to follow a different course.

"If we give up the old conception of the 'freedom of the seas' and do not try to protect our ships or goods they may bear to the belligerents," he writes, "if we do not attempt to guard the interests or lives of our citizens in the war zones, and if above all we prevent the growth of war trade with the belligerents by embargoing all loans and all shipments of contraband to them, most of the economic complications that entangled us in the last war will not be given a chance to weave their fatal web."

There, then, is the formula; simple, but expensive. Shall we have the nerve, as a nation, to apply it when that next European war breaks out?

It would mean, for instance, depriving our south of a market for half of its cotton, and out northwest of a market for half of its wheat. It would mean depriving our great industrial districts of the chance to grow rich and prosperous—the chance, also, to end our unemployment problem—out of war orders. It would mean refusing to let all the idle ships in our harbors go back to gainful employment.

In simple English, it would mean turning our back on the certainty of a year or more of top-speed prosperity.

It can be done—if we want to do it badly enough. It can't be done at all, however, if we fail to count the cost in advance. Unless we realize that remaining at peace in a world that has gone to war will call for sacrifices right out of the old pocketbook, we shall get into the next war just as we got into the last one—and for the same reasons.

Black's 30-Hour Work Week Labor Bill Sidetracked

Senator Hugo Black of Alabama was responsible for a 30-hour week bill. Well, it has been sidetracked. The senate refused to substitute the bill for an administration sponsored measure "to fix wages and standards on government contracts." The Black substitute was defeated 61 to 33. It is important that a short time later imposition of code wages and hours on any industry dealing with the government "or operating with government money" was provided in a bill passed by the senate and sent to the house, where it is certain to receive an overwhelming majority report. Leaders of organized labor had declared its opposition to substitution of the Black bill for the Walsh bill "requiring government contractors to observe NRA labor standards."

The congress has voted billions to take labor from the dole, many huge projects are outlined in the program all for the benefit of labor and to provide jobs for those who are without jobs. All the American people are interested in the success of these projects, including highway building and all other government works. They are interested for the reason that they are the taxpayers of the republic and are willing to do all in their power with their influence and their pocket books to reduce the number of the unemployed in the United States.

All men who are able to work should be taken from the relief rolls. They should be glad of the opportunity to assist a patriotic and humane administration in bringing about the greatest of recovery programs and in the reducing of the army of the idle from the dole list to the salary list.

It required three republican administrations, beginning with Harding and ending with Hoover, to create the greatest army of unemployed known in American history or the history of any other nation.

It is sound business deduction that the great stumbling block to the development of some cities resolves itself down to just the lack of confidence between its citizens. Without the understanding of their city, its resources, its ambitions and an understanding of each other, how can they build for the future?

There are still a lot of gullible people in this world.

Trench Silos Are Big Benefit to Farmers of Texas

STEPHENVILLE, Tex. — The importance of simple holes in the ground for wringing the greatest possible benefit from the huge Texas feed crop received emphasis from E. R. Eudaly, extension dairyman of Texas A. & M. College, in a talk to vocation agriculture men gathered at John Tarleton College from thirty-two Texas counties.

These holes in the ground, otherwise known as trench silos, are inexpensive and easy to construct. Properly made and used, they will preserve feed for about seven years, at the end of which time they will yield twice as much food value as would the same feed six months after harvesting if used in the form of hay. It is more palatable than hay, and keeps free from dust and attacks from rats. Every farmer, Mr. Eudaly urged, should have a trench silo even if he has only two milk cows to feed, and has to cut the feed with a butcher knife.

In selecting the location for the so-helpful hole in the ground, it is wise to look around to see if erosion has not left a likely ditch somewhere on a gentle slope. If so, the farmer doesn't even have to dig. He can just manicure the sides of the ditch to the proper slope, put the feed in, and cover it with water so that all air will be excluded. Then, after shoveling out a very thick topping of dirt, he has some canned pasture ready to give his stock when the fresh pasture gives out.

In case it is necessary to dig the trench and it probably will be, it should be located on the slope of a hill and near water. The size of the trench will be determined by the size of the herd, since when it is once opened it is necessary to take off a slice of feed every day. For that reason, the width and depth should be that which will afford an adequate day's ration for the number of cattle to be fed. The length of the trench makes no difference.

Helpful hints Mr. Eudaly gave include these: Be sure to replace ALL the air with water, and to pile on so much dirt that no air can get in. Round up the top. Make future feeding easy by putting a

Then the heavy lifting and carrying can be replaced with relatively negligible work. Use only ripe feed for silage. Its sugar is its greatest value, and ripeness develops the sugar. Provide an ample supply of silage. Then when feeding it, don't be stingy. Give the stock generous rations, and watch for improved production.

OLDEN

This community lost one of its old time settlers this week when Mr. A. M. Wright died at his home here following an extended illness. He was survived by his widow, several sons and a daughter, to whom the sympathy of Olden is extended in their loss and bereavement. A wedding announcement came last week of the marriage of Jean Mitchell and Pete Wright, who were married some time ago but kept it secret until recently. They are at the home of John B. Wright here. They have the good wishes of the community. Raymond Stark of Gorman but formerly of Olden, and Miss McGuire of Desdemona were married last week and have the good wishes of a host of friends in this and their home town communities. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Buckley of Houston were guests here this

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

A party of young folks were entertained Friday night, Aug. 16 at the Chas. Koch home, guests of Jackie Lee Koch. J. L. Kuhn is having his house remodeled this week. Word was received from Gee Ford with the Humble Oil company at Overton that he is in a group of rotary drillers being transferred to West Texas, near Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. Ford and children have made their home in the Humble camp near Overton the past several years. A going away shower was given in honor of Miss Mary Evelyn Edwards at the J. C. Jarrett home by Mrs. J. C. Jarrett Wednesday morning, Aug. 14. Miss Edwards expects to leave within a few days for Nurses Training School and she received many useful and appropriate gifts at the party honoring her. She will take training at St. Joseph's Hospital in Fort Worth. Lem Loftis and family recently moved into the Hyatt house across the street from the drug store. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Adams and family who have been living in Roscoe for more than a year, returned to their home in Olden last week and are at home to their friends here again. This community was glad to welcome them back. Mr. Adams, formerly agent for the T. & P. Railway company here, and agent at Roscoe during their sojourn there is now with the T. & P. Railway company in Ranger. Messrs. George Munn, Willard Hambrick and Starr were transferred this week by the Magnolia Petroleum company to Senton, Texas, a little distance from Corpus Christi. They left Wednesday night for Senton. J. L. Kuhn of Olden is the new school board member, appointed to fill the vacancy on the board occasioned by the resignation of C. L. Hyatt, who had been a school trustee here for several years. Bill Alsop, who has been visiting relatives in Lubbock, returned to Olden Thursday.

SUN-TAN

BEHOLD HERE TODAY
JO DARRIN breaks her engagement to BRIT PATE, college athlete star because he objects to her taking a lot as business at Crest Lake. Lolo gets her summer resort owned by wealthy DOLLY L. HALLIB. Jo goes to Crest Lake and later she arrives on the island.
DARRIN'S mother's neighbor, Mrs. FRAGONET, who is a former actress, is looking for a job and Mrs. Fragonet enters the picture to doubt Fragonet's promises and moves to a rooming house where he cannot find her. Lolo Monte offers to help Jo find a job. SILAS DANN, the director asks Jo to come to the studio for a screen test. She goes.
DANN tells her the screen test was a success. But later Jo learns she is not true. Lolo gets a job in a sandwich shop. Fragonet comes there one day to get rid of him. Jo agrees to see him that night. She is surprised, instead, by a visit from Mrs. Fragonet.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLIII
JO'S face drained of color at sight of Edna Fragonet, and instantly the thought crossed her mind that Fragonet himself would unwittingly appear at any moment now.
"Please don't look so astonished, Miss Darien," Edna Fragonet said, her voice heavy with sarcasm. "Surely you must have expected to see me some time during your stay in Hollywood."
"I'm afraid I didn't," Jo hoped her words were steady. "But now that you're here... won't you sit down?"
"Thank you, no. I'll be only a moment, Miss Darien. I want you to know I don't intend to give Fragonet up."
"I had no idea that you did, Mrs. Fragonet."
"Then what's your game?" asked the other woman. "What do you expect to gain by flying to Hollywood with him, by bounding him—?"
"Just a moment, Mrs. Fragonet!" Jo interrupted quietly. "I'll answer your questions—and I'll answer them truthfully." Her voice was steady now, she knew, and it was steel-edged with pride and hatred. "My game in Hollywood is simply to earn an honest living. My reason for coming in your husband's plane was to save the fare, I suppose. And because he invited me. As for bounding Peter Fragonet, I'd be eternally grateful if you'd take him to Europe and keep him there!"
Edna Fragonet's expression did not change. "Suppose," she asked, "that Peter and I stay in Hollywood—where we belong—and you leave?"
"I'll leave Hollywood when I'm ready, Mrs. Fragonet, and I don't believe you or anyone else can make me leave until then."
Fragonet's wife was silent a moment. Then she advanced toward Jo, her face clenched and her eyes pin-points of anger. "I wouldn't be too sure of that, if I were you. Would it interest you to know that after tomorrow you won't have a job?"
The effect of this question, the woman relaxed, smiling. "And jobs are hard to find here, I think you'll decide you'd best go now."
At first Jo could hardly believe what she had heard, but as she entered at the cold, venomous

What will HER NEXT STEP Bring?
When Elaine Chalmers set out to win a proposal from John McNeill (whom she hadn't seen in years), she thought it was an amusing prank. Elaine did not know that another girl was using her name, pretending to be the Chalmers heiress. Nor that an escaped criminal, a half-blind caretaker, and the secrets of a grim old mansion were to complicate her plans.
Swiftly dramatic events move to a tense crisis, involving Elaine and all the other fascinating characters in the new serial, "The Blue Door." It begins THURSDAY, AUG. 29 IN THIS PAPER
