Fugitive's Kin On Trial in Stoll Kidnaping

Thomas H. Robinson, Sr.

Mrs. Thomas H. Robinson, Jr.

Thomas H. Robinson, Jr.

Although Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., sought since last October for the $50,000 ransom kidnaping of Mrs. Berry V. Stoll, Louisville, Ky., society matron, remains at large, the fugitive's wife and father went on trial Oct. 7 in Louisville federal court for complicity in the Stoll abduction. The trial had been delayed in the hope that Robinson, Jr., former inmate of Tennessee asylums for the insane, might be apprehended. The Stolls, their servants, and 24 Department of Justice agents who figured in the Robinson manhunt have been subpoenaed for the trial.

REPORTS SAY ETHIOPIA HAS TAKEN ADUWA

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8.—It was reported without confirmation today that the Ethiopians had recaptured Aduwa and taken "thousands" of prisoners. It was reported without confirmation the Ethiopians had captured forces on three sides of Aduwa and the minister of war Ras Mula Getta was proceeding there to assume charge of the sector.

Find $39,000; Dime Is Reward

Gazing at that dime in his hand, Thomas Wodorow Wilson Robinson, 15, St. Louis, Mo., messenger boy, seems a trifle dazed. And no wonder! It's his reward for finding $39,000. The happy, excited man to whom "Woody" restored the endorsed check for that amount handed him a nickel, said, "No, it's worth more than that," then gave him a dime.

War Loses Its Grasp on Veteran's Mind

An old Civil War veteran named Joseph R. Jones celebrated his 100th birthday in the Soldiers' Home at Washington the other day. He was a lusty old gentleman, and he had cake and cigars and champagne as part of his celebration, and he told his callers about the most vivid memory of his life.

That memory had to do with one time when his mother gave him a licking for telling a lie—way back in 1843. The licking must have been a good one, for he never (he vowed) told another lie afterward.

But the most interesting paragraph in the story about the festivities read as follows:

"About the Civil War, Jones remembered little except that he played the cornet in the Sixth Cavalry band and fought at Gettysburg."

This is a direct reversal of the popular idea about the way old soldiers spend their time. They are supposed to sit on sunny porches, looking out at the landscape with unseeing eyes and fighting again in their minds the far-off battles of their youth.

It is taken for granted that the war was the biggest thing that ever happened to them; that life came to a thundering climax, away back in youth, amid the clang of cannon and the spat-spat of rifle fire and the flutter of battle flags, and that nothing that occurred since then seemed of any consequence in comparison.

But this old gentleman doesn't seem to have figured it that way. He sits back and enjoys the ease and comforts provided for him by the country he defended, and as he lives in memory—which is about all that a centenarian can do—his thoughts skip the war almost entirely, and go back to the peaceful scenes of early youth.

He doesn't even remember much about the war, you'll notice, except that he played in the regimental band and had a part in that stupendous struggle around the slopes of Gettysburg.

It may be that this old chap has a sounder slant on life than the rest of us, who expect him to dream of long-passed battles. As he sits and reviews his long life, the things that seem worth remembering are not the fights, not the moments of drama and excitement, not the great achievements—but the little, homely things, the things that happen to everybody and that go almost unnoticed at the time.

Politics Starts Show By Radio and Film

It begins to look as if the innocent citizen who sets out to get a little harmless amusement for himself during the next 12 months is apt to find himself up to his elbows in a mess of underdone political propaganda.

The Democrats are going to the movies and the Republicans are heading for the radio, and the political strategists are hastening to learn the inside secrets of scenario construction, plot development, joke concoction and the like.

There arrived in Hollywood recently the austere and legendary figure of Rexford Guy Tugwell, who is unquestionably the handsomest man who ever was accused of having an undue amount of brains.

According to preliminary announcements, a movie is to be constructed showing the devastating effects of the great drouth. At the crucial moment, up will come the gallant men of the Resettlement outfit—landing just in the nick of time, like the marines or the U. S. cavalry—to transplant the harassed victims of the drouth to greener fields.

The idea, one gathers, is that spectators will go away from this entertainment purged by the traditional emotions of pity and terror and filled unconsciously with admiration for the administration at Washington.

But if this looks like a low Democratic trick to steal a march on the Republicans, it must be recorded that the Republicans are ready to pull a low trick of their own.

The theatrical trade paper Variety announces that the Republicans are preparing a radio show entitled "Liberty at the Crossroads." This, it is said, is to be made up of a series of dramatic episodes somewhat on the order of the "March of Time" broadcasts, contrasting the dismal lot of citizens who live under a Democratic regime with the happy lot which was their when Republicans were in power.

It is rumored that this will be only the first of a series of such shows, and that a $2,000,000 pot is being sought to finance the production of many more.

And it does look as if our rival party chieftains have got us between the devil and the deep blue sea. If we go to the movies, they will have us imbibing one kind of propaganda; if we stay at home and turn on the radio, they will pour another kind down our throats. Perhaps we'd all better get to work in the garden for the coming year.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON.—When Mr. Jim Landis was made chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission it was widely remarked that Wall Street received the news with a serene equanimity which contrasted sharply with the financial community's last-year conception of Mr. Landis as a red radical who lived in a red house in Georgetown with other red, red radicals and was a serious menace to certain Wall Street methods.

The story behind this complacent acceptance of the young braintrustee is that Landis, as a member of the commission, has been more lenient than Wall Street expected—and much more lenient than many warm friends of the securities and stock market act had hoped.

In this he supported the retiring Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, Roosevelt's gift to Wall Street, who established "reasonable" policies governing issuance of securities and who enthusiastically endorsed Landis as his successor.

IRRECONCILABLES in and out of SEC, believers in stringent regulation, who figure you can't lead wolves without hurting the sheep, while Mr. Kennedy's lenient attitude through appointment of SEC General Counsel John J. Burns, whom Kennedy brought here from a Boston judgeship, to commissionership vacated by Landis.

Although Burns' appointment would give the commission a majority of three New Englanders, he is able and is objectionable only to

Sport Grales. By Grayson

DETROIT—A year ago Bill Terry was picked to piece by the baseball clinic held in conjunction with each world series.

Severe critics pointed out that leadership wasn't there when the New York Giants cried for it. Why was Lefty O'Doul kept in the dugout while fat Freddie Fitzsimmons and others repeatedly lost decisions despite low-hit performances?

There were extenuating circumstances in connection with the collapse of the proud Giants this season, however, so now the boys, particularly those who predicted that the St. Louis Cardinals would repeat, have Branch Rickey on the pan.

There is no getting away from the fact that Rickey waited too long before bolstering the Red Birds, who obviously were shy on pitching strength from the outset. Why in blazes did the director of the far-fung Cardinal system peddle Tex Carleton, in the first place? How the Red Birds could have used the 11 victories the lean Texan turned in for the Cubs.

Rickey plans a drastic shakeup of the Red Birds, which is bolting the door after old Dobbin has taken a stroll. A little succor in the stretch easily might have sent the rough and ready lads in the red blazers into their sixth world series in 10 years. And obtaining help shouldn't have been much of a problem for the St. Louis club, which owns some 300 athletes outright and controls many more.

Good Fortune and Good Judgment

"LUCK has got to be with you when you win 21 in a row," asserts Charley Grimm, manager of the Cubs. Good fortune and good judgment.

Luck smiled serenely on Grimm in deals last winter Kenny O'Dea, able assistant to the veteran Gabby Hartnett, came in exchange for Pat Malone, who flopped with the New York Yankees.

Larry French and Freddie Lindstrom were obtained from Pittsburgh for Guy Bush, large Jim Weaver, and Babe Herman. French, a seasoned southpaw, rounded out the Chicago hurling corps. Lindstrom, starting at third base and switching to center field, was a steady influence when the experts were predicting that the Cubs would crack.

The purchase of Carleton made it fairly certain that the Bruins would have consistent pitching all the way along the route.

Galan Had Most to Do With Cubs' Success

GRIMM gave up on Angie Galan as an infielder in 1934, but felt that the little Frenchman would smack the ball if given an opportunity. Galan developed into one of the finest lugged men and fly chasers in the business, and perhaps has had more to do with the Cubs' success than any other one player.

When lumbago again forced Grimm from the lineup before the start of the campaign, there was nothing for the former banjo player to do but use 19-year-old Phil Cavarretta at first base. The kid stood up.

"You don't have to fine players or kick them on the shin to get them to hustle," explains Grimm. "Show them a chance to win a pennant and they need little urging."

Still, it must have taken some tall talking by Grimm to convince the Cubs that they had a chance with everybody talking Giants and Cardinals on July 6, when the Chicago club was in fourth place, 10 1/2 games behind the front-running New York array and its then seemingly invincible pitching.

MILLIONS OF POUNDS HAVE USED BY OUR GOVERNMENT

The GOLDEN FEATHER by Robert B

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

JEAN DIANE, 27-year-old secretary and HELEN WALL, 35-year-old young automobile salesman spend an evening at The Golden Feather night club.

LARRY LANNING, the proprietor introduces them to NANCY DEB KINN who explains he is in the live on business "hand" and from dance. When he asks if he can telephone her the evader.

LARRY LANNING, federal agent talks with Jean and Helen) after they leave MIKE HAGAN detective on the mean police force joins Larry who shows him several photographs of a serial killer and asks "Ever see her before?" Explaining his presence in the city, Larry reveals details of a recent bank robbery.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER V

PIKE girl, Larry explained, came into the story indirectly, but she might well prove the key to the whole puzzle. To make clear her connection with everything it was necessary to do a little more explaining.

"Everybody down there had the jitters," he said. "They were all too excited to know what they'd seen and what they hadn't seen. The stenographer was no help at all. Evidently she'd never taken her eyes off the pistol that had been pointed at her. The young teller wasn't much better.

"Oh, he gave us descriptions, of course. But you know what these descriptions amount to—medium height, clean shaven, dark hair, weighs about 150 pounds, wore a blue suit and a Panama hat. Lord, you could arrest any one of 50,000 people on a description like that! The only fellow we really got anything from was the old cashier.

"He'd been the worst scared of any of them, but he did remember one thing. The gunman who took him under his wing had been the one with the bag into which all the loot was dumped, and the old chap did manage to notice the hand that held the bag—the left hand, it was. He said that the index finger of this hand was missing.

"Well, that was about all we had in the way of identification. A missing index finger on the left hand! Not much to go on, is it?" Hagan chewed his cigar and shook his head.

"Well, it turned out to be quite a lot," said Glenn. "Or I should say that we hope it'll turn out to be quite a lot. You see, I got off a report to the head office in Washington at once, and I enclosed that bit about the missing finger, of course.

"Now here's where the Division of Investigation is really valuable. They've got more records down there in Washington than you can shake a stick at. They've got millions of fingerprints—literally millions—classified in every conceivable way.

"So somebody down there takes this meager little description of ours and starts rifling through us cards. After about an hour, he discovers that there are in the United States exactly four men with criminal records who lack that particular finger. He got their cards out and had a look at them.

"One of them is a safe-cracker who is now right in the middle of a 19-year stretch in the Massachusetts state prison. That let him out as far as this job was concerned, of course. The second was a Chicago racketeer who got put on the spot and killed with a load of slugs from a sawed-off shotgun just two months ago. The third was a fake oil stock promoter who did a stretch in Atlanta prison and got out two years ago. He's living in Florida now. It took one of our men from the Miami office just half a day to prove that he hasn't been within 500 miles of this Neels bar for eight months.

"That left us with just one man. He's a bird named Lewis—Wingy Lewis, they call him, due apparently to the fact that he got 'winged' once by a bullet in some saloon fight or other and thereby lost this telltale index finger. Now this Wingy Lewis used to be a confidence man out west. A year or so ago he's believed to have joined the bank-robbing mob of the notorious Red Jackson.

Hagan nodded thoughtfully. There was no need for Larry to tell him who Red Jackson was—Red Jackson, a desperate criminal wanted for more crimes than could be pamed in one breath, who roamed all across the country in a way that left city and state police forces utterly helpless and who gloried in the title of "Public Enemy Number One." No, there was no need to tell Hagan or anyone else who Red Jackson was.

"Did you show this Wingy guy's photos to the bank people?" asked Hagan.

"Of course. They identified it, but in a rather hesitant and uncertain way. Honestly, they were all so jittery that I'm not at all sure that their identification would stand up in court. There's a perfectly good chance, of course, that our four-finger suspect is someone we never heard of before.

"So," he said, "I dropped around and got acquainted with the manager of the theater—without course, letting on that I'm with Department of Justice. An said, after a while, that some other had told him that he had been seen right here in recently.

"The next step was fairly simple. All of these mobsters their activities are bound to the hot spots. They just can't stay away from joints like this Golden Feather. So the thing to do was to keep snooping about these clubs, keeping the eyes open for Evelyn Brady. Once we spotted her, provided that all our information is correct, we ought to be getting the scent of Wingy; and under that, we'll be on Red Jackson's trail."

He put the sheet of photographs back in his pocket. "So there you have it all said.

Hagan nodded absently, stared out into a cloud of cigar smoke. At last he spoke, despondently.

"You don't know how lucky you are," he said. "Being with the Department of Justice. Look at the way you guys can operate, and compare it with the way we have to work here in Dover. Now, guess I wrote you, didn't I, about getting promoted to sergeant in local detective bureau last month?" Larry nodded.

"WELL," said Hagan, "with you the difference. With you, the chief problem is to get you what you want and where you want it. With us, the tough part is to figure out some way of anything to the guy after we find all that out. In the first we haven't got the facilities people have. If he goes out to Dover, we have to trust to the coppers in the next town to cooperate with us and tip us up, and like as not they won't. Suddenlv, he's your friend or some politician or—so what happens? We put up, book him and turn him in the prosecutor; then he's Montague or some other named moutpithce, and there's now you see it or you don't see it off behind the scenes. So the thing we know he's loose and we have to grin and bear it."

Hagan looked somewhat startled. Suddenlv, Larry remembered something.

"What'd you say was the name of the lawyer who speaks for these birds?" he asked.

"Montague. Donald M. He's got more crooks out than you can shake a stick at. It's not all because he's a lawyer, either. His clients don't come to trial. Why?"

"Oh—? Larry hesitated. A girl in Dover, comes home town. I feel sort of sible for her. Anyhow, she's for him."

"Well," said Hagan, "I he's all right to work for." "Yeah. But I met her before Golden Feather tonight. Montague had introduced me. I'm Lanning the proprietor, but through this was best. I'm Lanning and already I'm planning her to some good-looking fellow and she'd been standing with you. Hagan frowned.

"Tell me to my self," he said. "Montague as a love out of their way; Montague introduced me to the Lanning—he's a state the way—and Lanning introduced her to somebody else. If the girl means anything, I'd hate to see the Lanning look the looks of it."

"So," he said, "I dropped around

Centennial Buttons Will Go On Sale

M'ALLEN.—Sale of 10,000 Centennial buttons for one dollar each was started in the Valley this week under the direction of J. C. Paxton, McAllen, chairman of the sales campaign.

The sale is expected to bring in a substantial part of the $25-000 needed to finance the Valley's exhibit at the Centennial exposition. Living citrus and palm trees together with other tropical vegetation, will be featured in the exhibit.

Famous Old Horse
Dies at Age of 29

By United Press
BORGER, Texas.—"Nigger" a 29-year-old horse known as the "Old Faithful of the Hutchinson County Range," is dead.

The animal, owned by Walter Christian of Stinnett, was found dead in a garage. Cowboys said that the horse had been ridden further and by more cowboys than any other horse on the range.

WOODEN NICKELS CLICK

By United Press
RALEIGH, N. C.—The time-worn admonition, "Don't take any wooden nickels," has assumed a new appropriateness here. Small boys have discovered they can play slot machines with nickel-sized slugs whittled out of wooden ice cream spoons.

Today Detroit glories in its first World Championship! These 1935 Tigers have punched out a story of courage and energy that stands among the masterpieces. They could "take it!" What do the Tigers say about smoking? Here's Mickey Cochrane, dynamic Tiger manager: "One thing the team agree on is their choice of cigarettes
—Camels. 19 of the 22 regulars smoke
Camels. The Tigers say they can smoke all they want because Camels are so mild that they don't get their wind or upset

Mrs. Wier Club Guest
Monday evening at the Gholson hotel, the Junior New Era club held its first program of the year. At the business meeting new members were elected and plans for their initiation were made. The program was in charge of Ruth Shirley and Lucille Buchanan, who each gave interesting papers on "Special Points of Interest in Texas."

The next meeting will be at the home of the president, Mrs. M. O. Atterberry, Oct. 21. It will be in the form of a party. The members were delighted to have as a guest their old member, Mrs. D. T. Weir, who is visiting here from New Mexico.

Club Meeting Wednesday
Child Study club association No. 1 will gather in the home of Mrs. E. L. Fontaine, 1105 Railroad avenue, Wednesday afternoon for a lesson to be given under the direction of Mrs. Troy Grubbs. The attention of all members is called to this session which gives promise to be worth while.

Mrs. Claud White Presides In Absence of President
Mrs. Claud White, graciously presided over the Women's Missionary society program at First Baptist church Monday afternoon in the absence of the president, Mrs. W. A. Lewis, who was unable to be present due to the illness of her little son, who is reported to be much better today. The devotional offered from the 47th Psalm, was said by Mrs. White, followed by prayer given by Mrs. G. W. Thomas. Outstanding reports were heard from committees, and members of social service were appointed. It was voted to send a $10 donation to state missions. Mrs. Nannie Walker, Mrs. McDonough and Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Thomas, were appointed to attend the district associational meeting in session at Albany today. Mrs. W. L. Jackson, active worker of the organization is also named among those representing Ranger. A good attendance is reported.

Attendance Increases For Bible Lecture
The attendance of Bible students for the regular Monday afternoon Bible lecture given at the Church of Christ, by Rev. D. W. Nichol, was increased to a total of 32, according to yesterday's roll call.

The fifth chapter of Espesians, was discussed and questions asked at the close of the lecture. Interest continues to soar upward at each of these lessons.

Married at Cisco
Miss Pauline McGowan of Ranger and Ray Kennedy of Cisco were married at Cisco Saturday morning in a quiet ceremony performed at 11 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy will make their home in Cisco, where he is employed.

The World Outlook and Council Program Featured At Methodist Church
"The World Outlook and Council Program," was featured topic for the Women's Missionary society at the Methodist church Monday afternoon when Mrs. Stanley McAnelly opened the lesson with a talk on "Our World Seoul Korea." Mrs. L. H. Flewilen offered new thoughts on "Our Endsley, Ah," and Mrs. J. M. Bond gave the devotional. Mrs. Fred Warren and Mrs. J. A. Johnson continued the chosen topic with talks on "Our World in Korea."

Meeting was adjourned with prayer offered by Mrs. R. R. Stafford. Winter Garden Orchestra To Play at Gholson Hotel
Ben Jann and his 12-piece Winter Garden Orchestra will play for a dance to be given in the Colonial Room of the Gholson Hotel Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock. This is the first dance to have been given in the Colonial Room in a number of months and dance guests are looking forward to again enjoying the delightful floor and distinctive melodies of the musicians under the direction of Mr. Jann.

Mrs. L. R. Herring Presides At Missionary Study
The home of Mrs. Nath Pirkle, Young street, was opened to members of the Monday afternoon Bible students of the First Christian Church yesterday for the lesson given under the leadership of Mrs. R. A. Steele, taken from the topic, "Seek Highways and Byways." Mrs. C. L. Childs said devotional followed with an interesting book review offered by Mrs. Pirkle, "Christians of America." Mrs. H. B. Johnson talked on "Our Brotherhood at Work in Rural Areas."

After the lesson a short business session was presided over by the president, Mrs. L. R. Herring, after which refreshments were served to Misses E. T. Matthews, Christine Ware, E. T. Walton, F. N. Benjamin, C. L. Childs, B. S. Dudley, H. B. Johnson, R. A. Steele, J. C. Carothers, C. M. Per-

Jobless Musicians In Paris Increase

PARIS.—The number of musicians of all kinds now out of employment in Paris is large. Mechanical music has displaced them in most cafes and cinemas. Evidence of their professional solidarity was furnished, not long ago, in the boulevards, where groups connected with the Foyer des Artistes gave concerts in aid of their distressed colleagues. These concerts would attract considerable crowds in the Place de l'Opera, the Place de la Madeleine and other centers, in respect of which police permission was usually obtained. Many well-known singers and musicians contributed to this very cheap entertainment to the public.

Woman's Weak, Nervous Condition Helped by Cardui

In thousands of cases where Cardui has been taken to help women overcome monthly discomfort, it has been reported to have been of valuable assistance. "Before I began using Cardui, I was so weak that when I closed my eyes I felt like I was going to fall," writes Mrs. J. W. Harris, of Pelzer, S. C. "I was very nervous and had a pain in my side. At times, I would have to go to bed. This made me more nervous as I had six children and there is always work on a farm. My mother had taken Cardui and told me to try it. I took six bottles, after which I was up and able to do all my work, washing and ironing. I have nothing but praise for Cardui." Of course if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

R. L. Bowen New President of the Community Co.

R. L. Bowen, formerly vice president and general manager of Community Public Service Company, was elevated to the presidency of this concern at a meeting of the board of directors held in Chicago. Bowen, who has many friends in this community, having made a number of visits here, is a native of Van Alstyne, Texas, and has been connected with this company and its predecessor companies in various capacities since 1921. He began his utility career as a line walker at Graham, Texas, and worked his way up in successive steps to his present position. His election to the presidency completes the roster of officers for Community Public Service Company. All are native Texans, and all have been connected for some years with the predecessor concern, Texas-Louisiana Power Company. They are: N. R. Pearson, treasurer; Bennett L. Smith, secretary, and W. Z. Leatherwood, assistant secretary.

As president, Bowen will carry on the active management of Community Public Service Company, which will continue to function as an independent operating company, serving electricity, gas, water and ice in over 200 towns and communities in Texas, New Mexico, Louisiana and Kentucky. The concern has no holding company affiliation.

How to RUN a WANT AD

PICK UP YOUR TELEPHONE
CALL RANGER TIMES
2-2-4
TELL AD-TAKER WHAT YOU WANT
THERE'S NO MYSTERY
or hocus-pocus about putting an ad in this daily paper. It's as easy as falling off a log. You want to sell something or hire somebody or rent a room or find a job and the quickest, cheapest, surest way is with a Want Ad.
Pick up your phone, call 224, and tell your story to the Ad Taker. She will write your ad for you on the spot. With short, easy-to-understand words she will save you money and get you more results from your ad. She will read your ad back to you over the phone for your O.K. Not a chance of a thing going wrong.
That's all there is to it. And if you are selling something that someone wants, or want something that somebody has—it's dollars to doughnuts you'll get results! Because the The TIMES reaches nearly everyone in Ranger and because wise people turn to the Want Ad first!
USE THE WANT ADS
