Publicity Gag, or Folly

It is possible to suspect that there is more propaganda than news in some of these announcements about wealthy Californians who are fleeing from the state to avoid the state income tax law.

All of which is by way of saying that there seems to be something more or less ridiculous in the recent announcement of Actor William Powell that he is leaving California for England so as to avoid the California tax.

Avoiding the California tax may be a smart move—but people, people, people, would you move to England, of all places on the globe, to do it? England, where they nick even a man of average means for a quarter of his income and think nothing of it? England, where even J. P. Morgan has to pay up?

This actor seems to be priming himself for a leap out of the frying pan straight into the hottest part of a very brisk fire.

Men's Furnishing Store Announces Pre-Christmas Sale

The Globe, Inc., Ranger, and the Men's Shop, Eastland, are announcing the coming opening of their 16th business birthday sale, which will be conducted during the Christmas shopping season.

The high quality merchandise, chosen from the two stores, and for which both have become famous over this section of the country, is being offered during this sale at unusually reasonable prices and the public is being invited to visit one or the other of these two men's furnishing stores and take advantage of the bargains being offered.

Many new items of merchandise, suitable for gifts at Christmas, are being offered in both stores.

Ranger Begins—

Tom Yonker and Buster Mills, who are managing the game in Ranger, have announced that an effort is being made to get Eck Curtis, former Ranger coach and now coach at Breckenridge, to act as one of the officials, while Dexter Snelly, head coach at Cisco has been mentioned as another possible official, provided he does not play on the Eastland team.

It was announced in Ranger today that after the ticket committees complete their work in the short, whirlwind drive, individuals in the town are to be given blocks of 10 tickets to sell. The Ranger Chamber of Commerce offices, in the Hodges-Heal building, are being used as ticket headquarters and all committees are making their daily reports there.

Those who went to work on the campaign in Ranger Monday morning were Mmes. P. M. Kuykendall, Earl Swoveland, R. B. Canfield, Blanche Murray, R. L. Norman, and Saunders Gregg, who were teamed with C. J. Moore, R. V. Galloway, Morris Leveille, J. C. Carothers and J. J. Kelly.

They went back to the men. Dana felt as though she were floating over the floor. Scott it in now and then and they faced almost without words, unaware of their surroundings, unaware of anything except their own ecstatic happiness.

And then, at last, it was time to go home. Dana said good night to Roger, smiling mysteriously. Roger only knew! Tomorrow this time she'd be Mrs. Scott Stanley!

WYING awake in the darkness, Dana's was lost in her soaring thoughts. Drifting at last into a deep sleep, she was awakened by a scented breeze from the garden and the sun warm against her face. Outside there was the insistent clamor of birds.

Then she remembered! It was all exactly as it should be on one's wedding morning. Dana was wide-awake now, deliciously wide-awake. She dressed quickly and went downstairs. Sarah told her someone had called and left a number. Dana did not recognize the number, but she dialed it, heard Scott's voice, groaning: "It's nearly 9 and here you are just out of bed! What sort of wife have I picked out, anyway?"

"I promise to make it up in lots of other ways," Dana said. "What are you doing?"

"Preparing to dash over to see you. Have you told the old lady?"

"No. I haven't had time. I'm just ready to do it now."

"You'll probably need reinforcements."

"No," Dana valiantly. "I don't need reinforcements."

"I'm off to get the license," came Scott's blithe voice. "Don't let me down, darling!"

"I'll never let you down," Dana promised, her lips close to the hard, metallic instrument. And then she ventured daringly. "Darling!"

There was a sound close by. Dana said, "Goodby," huskily. The phone clicked, shutting off Scott's reassuring voice. Dana faced her grandmother.

"What did you mean by reinforcements?" Mrs. Cameron demanded. "I never heard such silly chatter. And what do you mean by calling some young man 'Darling' over the telephone?"

Mrs. Cameron's voice was stirred by excitement and anxiety. "The telephone happened to be the only place at the time," Dana said slowly.

"Such impudence!" Dana still stood by the telephone. A slight frown, reminding a little, preparing to face the storm she was about to invoke: "I don't want to wait, anyway."

"It would be sort of a blow beneath the belt to carry you off tonight," Scott mused. "I guess you'd better go back to your grandmother and hear all the horrible things she'll tell you about me. Then we can be married tomorrow. Maybe that's taking a risk, but I've got to have you with your eyes open."

"Nothing that anyone could say would make any difference."

With All My Love by Mary Raymond Copyright NEA 1933

BEGIN HERE TODAY After the death of her parents, lovely DANA WESTERBROOK came from abroad to make her home with a grandmother she has never seen.

Dana's half-sister, NANCY WALLACE, reveals Dana's coming. Dana's grandmother, with her young granddaughter, will marry rich RONALD MOORE and is pleased when he falls in love with her. Dana, meanwhile, has become attracted to DR. SCOTT STANLEY.

Nancy, who masks her love for Ronald, antagonistic attitude, maliciously watches Ronald's interest in Dana. Just as mysteriously, PAULA LONG watches Scott Stanley's attraction to Dana.

Ronald becomes jealous of Scott and sneaks away. Dana wonders what his happened. Mrs. Cameron asks Scott to stop eluding Dana. Believing Dana accuses her grandmother's interference, Scott comes his attention. Dana claims to be there, wondering if Scott will be there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY! CHAPTER XVI EVERYONE, apparently, was at the College Club dance. The ballroom floor was crowded, almost suffocatingly, though it boasted one of the largest dancing areas in town.

Scanning the crowd, Dana saw Paula Long several times, but she failed to find Scott among the dancers. Apparently he hadn't come after all. It made all the difference: most of the buoyancy left her mood.

"It's hot in here," she said. "Let's go outside for a moment." Roger, dancing with her, smiled. Sometimes a suggestion to go outside meant the girl was inviting a bit of flirting. Dana, through the weeks he had known her, hadn't seemed that kind of girl. Rather the opposite. But then you never could tell.

They went out on the porch. And suddenly, there was Scott leaning against a post, smoking. Dana put a hand on Roger's arm. The hand trembled a little. "Let's go back," she whispered. "I feel better now."

"You don't look better," Roger retorted. "You look all in. What you need is something to pick you up. Let's go downstairs and find it."

They were quite near the figure leaning carelessly against the porch pillar. Dana, her heart throbbing violently, ran up the red flag of courage and recklessness.

"Fine," she agreed, with what she hoped was a nonchalant inflection. The man against the post moved suddenly, barring their way. Dana, startled, ran up the red flag of courage and recklessness.

"I think this is our dance, Dana," Scott said, with such cord intensity that Roger was backing off awkwardly before he realized it. "Sorry. Sorry," Roger said. "See you soon."

THERE was a moment of silence after Roger had gone. Then Dana said grimly: "It isn't our dance and you know it."

"When little girls start going silly," Scott answered coolly. "It's necessary to do something about it."

"When did you qualify as my protector?" Dana's voice was trembling. "I can't see that you've got a right to interfere. I'm not a little girl, and I'm able to take care of myself. I don't care for your interference—" Her voice broke. "I gathered as much from your grandmother," Scott said. "She made it pretty plain."

"Made what plain?" Dana's amazed eyes met his. Scott bent slightly, holding her gaze. Then he straightened. "I guess there's a little matter to be cleared up between us," he said. There was a note in his voice that stirred Dana strangely.

"Get your coat. Never mind—you can use mine," Scott linked his arm through hers, closed his hand over her hand. Dana found herself walking with him along the side driveway. They located his car and Scott took off his coat and placed it about Dana's shoulders, against her protest.

"Even if I were not a doctor, I'd know what night driving in an outfit like that would do to you," he said. "I never seem to meet you in a conventional mood," Dana said. Scott smiled. "I'm not a conventional person."

"So I've discovered. I'm always running away with you, or you're picking me up and running away with me. And then," her voice faltered a little, "you're running away from me."

"No," Dana objected, "you just stopped without a word. Without even telephoning, or writing, or dropping by to say you would be busy. And what do you mean, anyway, by saying my grandmother—" Her voice broke treacherously. Tears rolled down her cheeks.

SCOTT guided the car expertly to the side of the drive where a willow conveniently dropped a protecting screen. He took Dana in his arms and they kissed while the world spun around them.

CACTUS SPINES MAKE EXCELLENT PHONOGRAPH NEEDLES.

CONSIDERING THAT THE MOLECULES COMPRISE ABOUT 50 ATOMS, IT IS A MYSTERY HOW, WITH SUCH A SMALL DIFFERENCE IN COMPOSITION, TWO DRUGS CAN HAVE SUCH UTTERLY DIFFERENT EFFECTS UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM AS DO QUININE AND STRYCHNINE.

Fred G. Brunk's Comedians Are In Ranger For Week

Fred G. Brunk's Comedians arrived in Ranger Sunday and immediately began erection of the large, heated tent, on the lot east of the city hall, where they will present a show each night during this week. The show is being sponsored by the Ranger Fire Department.

The play Monday night will be "The Pajama Bride," considered one of the best shows in the Brunk repertoire, and one which is expected to meet with the wholehearted approval of the people of Ranger.

A large tent, which is to be amply heated, has been erected and plenty of good seats for a large audience were installed in the tent Monday morning and everything was in readiness for the opening of the week's engagement of the stock company.

HEPBURN PORTRAITS

GIRL OF COURAGE IN "ALICE ADAMS"

Another facet of the scintillating genius of Katharine Hepburn is said to be revealed in her interpretation of the role in "Alice Adams," her current starring vehicle. Strongly resembling the role in "Morning Glory," which won her the Academy Award in 1933, Miss Hepburn portrays a sensitive, ambitious girl from a humble Midwestern home. The heroine of the story desires to throw off the millstone of family and poverty and win a place in the wealthy and socially prominent sphere from which she is barred.

"Alice Adams" epitomizes millions of girls in similar surroundings who wage the same unequal battle against social barriers. Heartaches, suffering and gallant courage are woven into a gripping human interest story. Never has the fiery star given a more human role than she has as Booth Tarkington's heroine. She is required to swing from light comedy to pathos with amazing rapidity.

Pandro S. Berman, producer for RKO-Radio, has surrounded Miss Hepburn with a perfect pictorial setting, and the direction is by George Stevens.

Canadian boys pass resolution that, rather than go to war, they'll "face a firing squad." Well, it's quicker.

DESDEMONA

Thanksgiving services of the Parent-Teachers Association were held in the High School auditorium on Tuesday night, Nov. 26. The following program was presented to a large and appreciative audience: Thanksgiving prayer, Rev. E. M. Dailey; welcome song, four girls; violin solo, "Old Faithful," Herbert Roberts; mother singers, "Give Thanks and Sing," "My Childhood Home," Mmes. Ed Hanson, David Parks, Willis Mathis, Joe Quinn, Henry Gentry, Clarence Jones accompanied by Miss Edith Creighton at the piano and Mrs. C. C. Walker on the violin. Thanksgiving Turkey, Dot and Dolores Rushing, Unthankful Harold, Helen Moon and Evelyn Joinder, Glee club, "Walking in the Winter Wonderland," "World's Waiting For the Sunrise" and "Voice in the Old Village Choir." After the program Mrs. Ed Hanson, president of the P. T. A., took charge and counted the parents present for each room. Mrs. R. D. Wright's room had the greatest number of parents present and will receive the book for its library. Following the P. T. A. meeting talks were made about life insurance by three representatives of the Woodmen of the World.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Wright returned Sunday from a visit with her sister, Mrs. A. T. Whitte and family at Crane and also a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Hoover at Jal. N. M.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lee Anderson attended the picture show at Gorman Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Moore and their daughter, Miss Pauline, drove to Abilene Friday.

Mrs. John Nabors returned Sunday from Lubbock where she had been visiting her son and other relatives for a week. She was called there by the death of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Caruth, who was a former resident of this section of the state. The many friends of Mr. Caruth and his son, Pierce and Mrs. Nabors will extend sincere sympathy to them.

Miss Rebecca Dailey, who is attending Weatherford College, spent the Thanksgiving holidays here with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Dailey.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Bragg and son, Charles, spent Thanksgiving holidays with relatives at Santa Anna.

On Saturday night of last week Miss Boyd Crenshaw gave a delightful dinner party at the home of Mrs. S. E. Snodgrass. Guests who were present were Misses Madeline Robert, Jolene Arnold, O. T. Arthur and Ruth Abel.

Mrs. Flavil Robinson, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Blackwell Sanitarium at Gorman has improved.

David Parks and family, G. S. Bruce and family and John Hammond and family went to Comanche Thursday.

In order to get the news letter in last week's issue a day earlier than usual we failed to get several items which will appear in this issue. Among those items are as following:

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Davis left Monday for their home at Valley Mills after a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Hugh Abel and family. On Sunday before they left, they and the Abel family went to Breckenridge and visited A. G. Abel.

E. E. Tetens of Gorman, manager of the Empire Southern Gas Co., was here Monday paying the taxes of the company for both the city and school. His many friends were glad to hear that his little son who has been ill was improving and would likely be well in a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Armstrong and their daughter and their son and his wife of Searlesville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Whit Richards and their daughter, Billie, Thursday. Mrs. Armstrong is a sister of Mr. Richards. They went from here to Stephenville to visit her mother.

Mrs. Eula Jones returned Wednesday from Breckenridge where she had been visiting her children. Her son Wofford Jones and his wife and baby came with her and spent the day with his wife's sister, Mrs. Henry Gentry.

W. F. MacDermott of Fort Worth was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Williams, Sunday.

Mrs. J. E. Derreck and her daughter, Mrs. Style McEntire and baby, James Edward, drove to Dublin Thursday to attend the funeral of the father of Mrs. W. R. McNeill who lives near Lingville.

Robert Howell of Dallas was the week-end guest of Dr. J. M. Wright and family. During the two days he visited quite a number of other friends who were delighted to see him. His parents, Rev. and Mrs. Z. L. Howell, who lived here two years, are now located at Gordon.

While here he traded his stock horses, cows and hogs and farming implements to Wiley Powers and on Saturday the Powers family moved out to the farm a mile and a half north of town and the Gentry family moved into

MOTHER HELD IN SHOOTING OF JESSE LIVERMORE, JR.

Little hope was held for Jesse Livermore, Jr., 15-year-old son of the famous Wall Street stock operator, pictured above with his mother, Mrs. Doretha Livermore, who is reported to have shot him at their home in Santa Barbara, Calif. Young Jesse is said to have handed his mother the rifle with which he was shot when she protested that she'd rather see him dead than a drunkard. He was placed under guard. The boy's parents were divorced in 1932.

Primes His Guns for Standpats

His decision on entering the presidential primaries will be left to "events" when Senator William E. Borah launches his campaign for a liberal Republican party with the first of a series of radio broadcasts Saturday, Dec. 7. The Idahoan is expected to deal with the attitude of the G. O. P. toward "big business" and with his demand that the 1936 platform declare against monopolies.
