Dentist-Benefactor Dreaded Drill, Too

A touch of nature, they say, makes the whole world kin.

Boiled down, this presumably means that you feel a lot more chummy and intimate with some famous man if you can just discover that he suffers from bunions, can't get along with his son-in-law, and likes to put cream and sugar on his apple pie. It's those homely, intimate little touches that do the trick.

Anyhow, long-suffering humanity might pause in its task of laying a wreath at the feet of Columbia University's Dr. Leroy L. Hartman and celebrate the discovery that he is just one of the boys, after all.

Dr. Hartman is the dental specialist who made a chemical discovery that makes the dentist's drill painless. It is a sort of goo which, when mopped on the tooth, enables the patient to lean back in the chair and think about something else while the dentist goes ahead and carves out one of those hideously sensitive cavities.

Now the point to all this is that Dr. Hartman did a magnificent thing in giving this invention to the world; he refused to take out a patent on it or accept any money on it, with the result that the ordinary patient will be able to enjoy the boon at little, if any, added cost.

And in taking this attitude, Dr. Hartman refused to make any solemn remarks about the duty of the scientist. Instead, he simply said:

"I myself have suffered in the dental chair."

There, of course, is this touch of nature about which we were speaking.

Taking the pain out of a toothache probably isn't a discovery that would rank with, say a cure for infantile paralysis, in importance. But a man's teeth can give him some miserable moments on his trip across the vale of tears, and the sum total of discomfort which Dr. Hartman is abolishing from the record of human experience is something pretty massive.

And the point is that Dr. Hartman knows about all this from bitter experience. Like the rest of us, he has lowered himself gingerly into one of those padded-skeleton chairs, winced as the attending dentist (unscrupulous falsifier) remarked gaily, "Now this isn't going to hurt," and then numbly endured the one sure-fire torture which the inventive American Indians never managed to think of.

No man ever forgets his hours in the dentist's chair. Dr. Hartman didn't; and, unlike the rest of us, he resolved to do something about it. The result is an achievement for which all the ages will call him blessed.

Best of all, he didn't present his gift to humanity with a solemn face. He had been there himself, and he said so. And that makes us like him just twice as much.

"Maine Man to Run on Townsend Plank." Until the movement grows stronger, why not just feel the way out cautiously, hold the breath, and drop?

Could the naming of that New York City bridge as "Triborough" be subtle propaganda for the Idaho senator?

The Boy on the Other Side of the Tracks

Your Income Tax

NORMAL TAX AND SURTAX RATES

The Revenue Act of 1934 provides for only one normal tax rate, that is, 4 per cent on the amount of the net income in excess allowable credits such as the personal exemption, credit for dependents, etc. The act provides for an additional credit for the purpose of the normal tax of an earned income credit, that is, 10 per cent of the amount of the earned net income but not in excess of 10 per cent of the amount of the net income. The personal exemption and credit for dependents are also allowable as credits against the net income for the purpose of the surtax, the resulting net income being designated "surtax net income." The surtax is imposed on surtax net incomes in excess of $4,000. The rates increase in accordance with the amount of surtax net income included in varying so-called surtax brackets. On a surtax net income of $4,000 or less there is no surtax. On a surtax net income in excess of $4,000 and not in excess of $6,000, the rate is 4 per cent of such excess. The surtax upon a surtax net income of $6,000 is $80 and upon a surtax net income in excess of $6,000 and not in excess of $8,000 the rate is 5 per cent of such excess in addition to the $80, or a surtax of $180 upon a surtax net income of $8,000. The surtax on a surtax net income of $1,000,000 is $533,000, and upon a surtax net income in excess of $1,000,000, 59 per cent, the maximum rate, is applicable to such excess, in addition to the $533,000. Many taxpayers make the error of applying the maximum rate instead of the rate provided for in the bracket in which their surtax net income is included.

Following is an example of how to compute the tax on a net income of $8,500, all of which represents earned net income, the taxpayer being single and without dependents:

Table showing tax calculations: Net income $8,500, Less personal exemption 1,000, Balance (surtax net income) 7,500, Earned income credit 450, Net income subject to normal tax 6,650. Surtax at 4 per cent on amount of surtax net income in excess of $4,000 but not over $6,000, 4 per cent on $2,000 80, Surtax at 5 percent on amount of surtax net income in excess of $6,000 but not over $8,000, 5 percent on $1,500 225, Normal tax, 4 percent on $6,650 266, Total normal tax and surtax 411.

Tax payers are advised to read carefully the instructions on form 1040 relating to the earned-income credit and surtax, as well as all other instructions thereon, before preparing their returns.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The farm organization lobbyists and the administration have produced a substitute program for the AAA—which already is undergoing repair. Once again the consumer is a conspicuous absentee.

Secretary Wallace wanted some provision for consumer protection in the new soil conservation-domestic allotment act through which it is hoped to control production and pay benefits to farmers. The administration, from both standpoints of good politics and public policy, wanted it.

But the farmer lobbyists turned them down, apparently unwilling to place any potential brake on farm prices or on processors and distributors of food.

Many farm leaders really want export subsidies for surplus crops, which the administration thinks are deadly poison—an unworkable scheme for subsidizing foreign consumers at the expense of American consumers.

Republicans and General Johnson are clamoring in ostensible sympathy hence the tossing overboard of the consumer, lest a fight for him spoil everything.

At the same time, there's been appreciation within administration ranks of the fact that city consumers resent the 25 per cent increase in retail food prices since 1933 and blame it on a program which they believe has created a scarcity of food.

The AAA was a political liability in other than farm states and failure to take that fact into account in the new legislation may prove costly in the election campaign.

What Wallace wanted in the bill and what the farmer lobbyists refused to accept was a guarantee to consumers that the program would not reduce food supplies, and domestic requirements. "We want to be sure," he recently said, "that there is the same quantity of food available to the American people that there was in the past."

The bill as introduced is an amount of food supplies, and the extent of crop reduction is left to the discretion of the Secretary. Such a provision is notoriously susceptible to the pressure groups.

Lobbyists have shown their predatory as any other group's chance came at their prices.

Officially, no one is to mention the soil conservation allotment which will be to finance it in the same way as an attempt will be made to finance it.

Thinking that the prime reason for the former is self-interest, instead of federal regulation of agriculture, which the secretary has held unconstitutional, effort will be made to discontinue law as a general bill—even though most of it is to be collected in the way and from the same sources—except the surplus.

Taxes on processors will be higher than taxes on farmers. Soil conservation is expected to be more expensive than agricultural adjustment.

The Treasury scheme as proposed may be revised before the light of day. But in the disorganized proceeding to be an obvious form of what longer clothed with the agricultural adjustment general welfare. Some lawyers think that's a "opening wedge."

Smoking Camels Found to Ease the Strain and Promote Well-Being

Life gets more complex. The pace grows faster. People live harder. Where do we see the effects? Frequently on digestion, so often overtaxed by the busy whirl! Smoking Camels is of definite aid in promoting good digestion. Turn to Camels yourself. They have a mildness and delicacy that never grow flat or tiresome. Make the pleasant experience of smoking Camels part of your daily life, and see how much more zest you have for smoking and how your digestion is measurably improved. Camels set you right.

And now we come to one of modern life's most gracious privileges—dining at Keen's English Chop House in New York, as shown at the right. Like the Mermaid Tavern of Shakespeare's day, Keen's is famous as a gathering place of congenial spirits. "We've noticed that patrons who appreciate fine foods also appreciate fine tobaccos," says William (above), of Keen's. "Camels are a favorite at Keen's English Chop House. We've noticed that our guests who smoke Camels during and after meals seem to find more pleasure in dining."

JUNGLE BOUND! "I smoke Camels for digestion's sake," says Frank Buck, animal collector. "Camels for flavor!" he says. "They are rich and mellow."

NEBRASKA FEARS For Unicameral Legislative Plan

from attempts of members of the legislature to "gerrymander" the state's metropolis for political purposes. A map has been drawn to show that there are blocks in Omaha that are in two districts, other blocks that are in no district and territories that are not contiguous as the unicameral amendment specified. Delay Seen as Likely Chace believes there is a possibility there will be no unicameral legislature in January, 1937, the date set for the inauguration of U. S. Senator George W. Norris' model assembly. It was Norris, everyone agrees, who put over the idea in Nebraska in the face of opposition by most politicians, most newspapers and members of the legislature. The amendment adopting the unicameral legislature was placed on the ballot in November, 1934, by initiative petition and accepted by a vote of 286,086 to 193,152. In the hands of a hostile legislature was placed the responsibility of districting the state. Omaha Center of Storm Chace has called to the attention of Gov. R. L. Cochran and other officials the necessity of calling another special session to redistrict Omaha, which is given seven members out of 43. If there is no special session, he says, there will be no unicameral legislature in 1937. The Omaha election commissioner might save the situation by districting the city himself, attempting to follow the "intent" of the legislature with the hope the courts would sustain him in an inevitable test suit. Of the first 78 candidates who filed for the unicameral legislature, 40 were members of the last bicameral legislature. Among the remaining 38 there were few who were widely known or distinguished. It is reasonable to assume that a good number of present legislators will be elected to Norris' model assembly.

Leaders Are Candidates

The Democratic floor leaders of the house and senate are candidates. So is the speaker of the house. Political observers are asking: "Will they be strictly non-partisan?" This applies to the Republicans, too, but there were few of them in the last legislature. Observers are asking, too, "Will the unicameral legislature draw a higher type of men?" The answer so far seems to be that it is drawing the same type. U. S. to Reduce Park Elk Herd By United Press YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo. Poor conditions of the winter range has made it necessary for the National Park service to reduce the Yellowstone elk herd by 3,000 head. Successive years of drought have curtailed the feed until it will support only 7,000 head of elk, park officials said. They estimated there are 10,000 elk in the park herds. In addition to the elk there are 1,000 buffalo, 700 antelope, 800 mule deer and about 150 mountain sheep which must make their living in the park. Acting Supt. J. W. Emmert estimated that the 3,000 elk could be disposed of through live shipments and by extending the length of the hunting season. "If it is not possible to cut the herd in his manner it may be necessary for the park service again to resort to slaughtering a number of animals and disposing of the meat to the Indians on the reservations." Last year 223 elk were killed and given to the Indians, Emmert said, but added that the park service would much prefer to see the hunters allowed to shoot more game. In this connection the hunting season in Park county, Montana, where a number of the elk winter, was extended from Jan. 10 to March 1.

Irish Humor Eases A Boundary Row
By United Press
DUBLIN.—Irishmen may like to wax eloquent over the distressful state of the border between the northern and southern sections of the Emerald Isle, but it's just provided them with their biggest laugh for a long time.

Patrick Gallen owns a farm at Aughrim, near Ballyconnell, County Cavan, in the Free State and the rest in Northern Ireland, with a tumble-down wall to make the frontier. It was this wall that nearly precipitated an international incident, according to the story just told in the Dublin High Court.

Some of Patrick Gallen's cattle roamed over the frontier from time to time, thereby arousing the suspicion of Sgt. Henry Murray Lee of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. One day, accompanied by a muscular constable, the sergeant walked up to the wall and blew his whistle to attract Gallen's attention.

The farmer and the sergeant had a friendly "chin-wag" over the wall. Then the sergeant sat on the wall, with his feet dangling into the Free State, and asked the farmer to sign a statement about the cattle. While Gallen was doing this, it was charged, Sergeant Lee seized him by the collar and with the assistance of the constable tried to drag him into Northern Ireland territory.

Farmer Gallen was hefty. Instead of being dragged over the wall, he and the sergeant and the constable all collapsed in a heap and starting rolling down a hill, fighting hard all the time, in Free State territory. Gallen loudly protested that the two had no right to arrest him.

When they were disentangled Sergeant Lee retired behind a rock and sent his subordinate for reinforcements. Meanwhile Farmer Gallen's children, taking stock of the situation, quietly solved the whole problem by driving the cattle back into the Free State.

British Movies Face Busy Year

By United Press
LONDON.—The British movie industry, originally a romance, will emerge into reality in 1936, according to plans.

Judging from the ambitious programs of productions scheduled to be realized in '36, this year ought to rank as the Year 1 of British Moviedom. Seldom was the saying "truth is stranger than fiction" better applied in describing the romantic and mushroom development of the moving picture industry in this country, according to those who have followed it closely. Little by little, scorned attempts at ridicule, organizations like Gaumont British and Korda's London Film Corporation, have become household words wherever movies are shown. Perhaps more than any other British organization, Alexander Korda's may be given the title of "leader."

Korda is considered by many to have "put England on the Movie map" by his now famous production of Henry VIII. He followed up his feat with a number of other productions like Scarlet Pimpernel. Continging his pioneering, Korda will lead the way to color productions. His organization is to produce at least one great all-color picture during the 1936 season. The process used will be technical.

Other important London Film productions are to be "Elizabeth of England," "Revolt in the Desert," (Story of Lawrence of Arabia), H. G. Wells' "Things to Come" (written especially for the movies), and "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" by the same author.

Charles Laughton, whose name is now synonymous with Henry VIII, will play "Cyrano de Bergerac." The extent to which Laughton's performance in the famous film has impressed his admirers is illustrated by the following anecdote: A party of distinguished foreigners, including the young Finance Minister of Brazil, Senor Souza Costa, were visiting the Tower of London under the leadership of Brazilian Ambassador Regis de Oliveira. The guide showed the party the statue of Henry VIII, on horseback. Minister, turning to Ambassador remarked unhesitatingly: "My but doesn't he look like Laughton!" Laughton is only one of a formidable array of talent signed up for 1936 by London Films. Others include Conrad Veidt, Clive Brook, Robert Donat, Roland Young, Paul
