Martyr of Molokai Was True Hero

That natural human desire to go on living as long as possible gives us an especial admiration for the man who seems perfectly willing to give up his life for somebody else.

Such men aren't precisely as common as gooseberries, and when we find one we usually put up a monument to him. Unfortunately the state of the world being what it is, most of the men who get these monuments are soldiers, whose willingness to die carries with it an equal willingness to make a number of other people die simultaneously.

But once in a while we get a man whose bent for self-sacrifice has no strings to it; a man who risks his life in the piping times of peace, and goes down to his death without benefit of blaring bands or fluttering flags.

When we find such a man, we open for him a special place in our hearts, because he helps us to believe that the human race is somehow a better, nobler group than we ordinarily suppose.

A United States army transport will reach the Panama Canal Zone late this month bearing the remains of Father Damien, the famous Belgian priest who gave his life for the lepers of Molokai.

Since 1888 his body has rested in a humble grave on that quiet Pacific island; now it is being moved to Belgium, with the Belgian and American government uniting to honor it.

Now this Father Damien was something special in the way of heroes. Molokai is a long way from his native Belgium, and there was nothing on earth to make him go there except his own desire to lay down his life in the service of total strangers.

He knew, in advance, what it would cost him. Leprosy is about as repulsive and as horrible a disease as there is in the sad category of man's afflictions. It is terror itself, in physical form; through all the centuries, the leper has been regarded with fear and honor.

But this quiet little priest wasn't afraid of leprosy. He went to Molokai, knowing that for the rest of his life he would see no one but lepers, knowing that he himself would become a leper and would die of this infinitely prolonged torture; and he did it simply because these lepers needed help, because he felt that it was up to him to give it to them.

There really are men like that, you see. Selfishness is not after all, the one and only mainspring of human effort. Nor does man need the stimulus of war, patriotic fervor, and an endangered fatherland to go out and meet a terrible death with level eyes.

How we need to be reminded of that, these days! The divinity that lies in the human heart is always ready to serve us; we need only call on it. The one thing we must never do is forget that it is there.

Tuberculosis can be prevented; first, by finding all the active cases of this disease and treating them; second, by discovering all cases of infection and building up their resistance, third, by educating people in ways of healthful living and the prevention of the disease. Tuberculosis has been greatly decreased in the past by this program. It can be eradicated in the future. If you would help in this work which protects you, buying Christmas seals from the Eastland County Tuberculosis Association.

Chevrolet Sales Set New Records During January

Sales by Chevrolet dealers continued throughout January at a rate which broke all January records in the history of the company, besides rounding out the greatest 90 days after announcement that Chevrolet has ever known.

This fact is revealed by figures released by W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager. New records were established both for new cars and trucks and for used cars, Mr. Holler said.

An important contributing factor, he added, was the used car disposal program, under which thousands of old cars were destroyed and forever removed from the streets and highways of America.

January sales of new cars and trucks totaled 75,412 units, an increase of 103 per cent over January 1935. New unit sales for the period since the 1936 model announcement totaled 247,666, as compared with 130,867 for the best corresponding period in the past, in 1929-30. This is an increase of 104.7 per cent.

Used car sales for January were 166,966 units, the second-highest used car month in Chevrolet's entire history. Sales of used cars for the 90-day period since introduction of the 1936 models totaled 490,717 units, 247,003 in 1934—5 being the highest previous total for a corresponding period.

"We regard it as significant that the combined sale of new and used cars by Chevrolet dealers in January totaled 242,378 units and, further, that the combined sale by Chevrolet dealers of new and used cars during the three months' period reached the tremendous total of 648,383 units.

"The fact that record sales in January were not confined to any one section of the country, but on the contrary were general throughout the United States, is a splendid business indication," said Mr. Holler. "It supports our belief that the Spring buying season will be

WHILE we usually choose tender steaks for planked dinners, I have served planked Salisbury steak with excellent effect.

Another point to keep in mind is to put the piping of potatoes around the edge of the plank before you transfer the steak from the broiler to the plank.

Oil Plank Thoroughly Be sure the plank is very hot and well oiled before putting anything on it.

If you are serving a dinner planned to please the manfolk, add a salad of head lettuce with Russian or Thousand Island dressing and finish up with an open apple pie.

WHEN I was in college we had dried beef in a white sauce or Wednesday luncheons and but day everybody rushed to the lun after classes for waffles and syrup.

The secret of good creamed dried beef lies in frizzling the beef before adding the cream sauce. Dried beef is lacking in fat so this must be supplied.

Beef Is Salty Enough Sauce made this way is the color of old ivory and has a delicious flavor.

An attractive way to serve creamed frizzled beef is to put the creamed beef in the center of a large serving dish.

Macaroni with tomatoes and dried beef is a fine luncheon dish. It should be served with a crisp lettuce or cabbage salad and a custard dessert.

Mushrooms make an effective garnish for creamed dried beef. Perfectly creamed dried beef with a border of broiled mushrooms is worthy a place on any luncheon table.

Prune Custard Two cups milk, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 10 or 11 prunes, 1-4 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 4 tablespoons powdered sugar.

Remove pits from prunes and cut in small pieces. Combine with water, 1 tablespoon sugar and cook in double boiler until soft.

Dried apricots, dates or figs can be used in place of prunes. Use about 1-4 pound of dried fruit to save you the number of prunes because I thought it would be easier than weighing them.

Mining Town Is Beset By Disaster After Indian Curse

FERNIE, B. C.—The course of an aged Indian squaw because of the white man's treachery is blamed for a series of disasters which is threatening to turn this once thriving mining center into a "ghost town."

Indians declare that the "Great Manitou angered by the treachery of the white man" is bringing disaster on the village.

They recall that late in the last century a white man, by marrying an Indian Princess, tricked her into disclosing a close tribal secret—the location of a rich coal deposit.

The mother of the Indian Princess, they say, angered by the treachery and duplicity of the white man, climbed to the high-

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 JANE WESTON feels her dreams are true when she sets out on a three week ocean cruise. She received her ticket to ride on the salary due her when the vessel manager employed her as a typist accepted publication.
 On board Jane meets handsome STEPHEN who has been skiing at Lake Placid. Dirk is as nervous as Jane, injured in saving the life of a child, he accepts the cruise ticket from the girl's father.
 Dirk introduces Jane to his friend, SNOWSHOES, a detective, who tells them that NORA LANE, the famous actress, is on board. Jane Lane owns the famous Kokoi diamond and it is known that she usually has it with her. She is traveling under a false name and no one has seen her for several months.
 Others in the party are security guard MADAME DOREMUS; DETECTIVE LENZ and MANNIE JACKSON, blacksmiths; FINE, opera singer; KEN MARTIN and LINDA BAYES, show entertainers.
 Jane, in her stateroom, hears a knock at the door. She opens it just in time to see a man disappearing across the corridor.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VII

JANE awoke to find the sunshine streaming in through the port hole. She heard the waves lash against the side of the ship for a few minutes she lay there, knowing nothing but the deep wells of the ocean as the twin screw propellers churned the ship rapidly through warm southern seas. At first it had a lulling effect that kept her from coming to life.
 But suddenly she was on her feet. She went joyfully to the porthole looking out at the great green wells which, rising up, seemed at times to blot out a crystalline blue sky. They were coming close to the Gulf Stream, she realized. The colour of the tropics was on her. She dressed simply in a white shirt and blue blouse, and looking in the mirror decided that Dirk Brown was right. She did look a little like Myrna Loy!
 There was a knock at her door. She lost some of her exuberant spirits. A mysterious knock like that had sent her shivering to bed at evening. But she opened the door and there stood Dirk Strom, blond and smiling in his white flannels.
 "Good morning!" he said. "How about an early morning plunge?"
 "Not before coffee," she warned. People are usually hateful before breakfast, but you can take a chance on me. Have you had yours?"
 "Hours ago," he smiled. "Snowshoes and I have walked around the deck a dozen times."
 Jane laughed. "Do tell me why you call that delightful man—Snowshoes?"
 "Oh, that! He's a detective at the big hotel in Lake Placid, and he's sleuthing around the grounds of Snowshoes."
 "I like him," she said, simply. "I adore Donald Duck in the animated movies. He's ten times more interesting than Mickey Mouse. He represents all the pitiful, thwarted ambitions of human beings. I want to laugh and cry at the same time when I see him. I'll tell you what I'll do, now. I'll get down and have my coffee alone and I'll meet you in the Pompeian room in my bathing suit at ten."
 The pool was filled with young couples an hour later when they took dives into the bluish water of the indoor pool. Their heads bobbed up, and they went through the motions of the American Crawl with churning fervor. Then she swung to her side, for all about them in the water were strangers.

ONCE when her hand slipped from the rope at the side she caught her, holding her up above the blue until she had recovered from the swallowed water. He looked hard at a fat man who came up to say, "Hello, mermaid," at her, and that look was enough. The fat man swung away, saying, "My mistake. I guess we haven't met."
 They came out shrieking with laughter at the intruder's red-faced discomfiture.
 They went straightway to the sun deck where already people were playing Crossing the Equator in the canvas pool and exposing themselves to the actinic rays of the sun.
 A few feet away they saw a boy and a girl in bathing suits like themselves, and tanning. The boy was looking at the girl, leaning very close toward her, gazing at her intently as if there were nothing else on land or sea. It was Ken Martin, the crooner and the young dancer, Linda Bays. They were completely oblivious of the other people, and once Ken said half-aloud: "Linda, promise me, when we get back to New York from this cruise—"
 He looked around and blushed, then he spoke to Jane with his pleasant drawl. "Don't mind me. Didn't mean to propose before an audience." Then he grinned. "I've asked her so much it's like saying how-do-you-do? Don't you think she ought to marry me?" he added.

Linda Bays merely laughed at him. "I'll never marry a crooner, not as long as I live," she said.
 Ken Martin scoffed. "I'm not a crooner by nature. It was grafted on me. I learned how to sing on the open range."
 The dancer talked to them as simply and obviously as Ken had done. Are you two honeymooners?" she asked Dirk.
 "Not yet!" Dirk said, laughing. "I only met him on shipboard." Jane put in hastily.
 "Well, you know these shipboard romances!" Linda said.
 Jane laughed, and forgot all about the strained feeling she had known in the city.

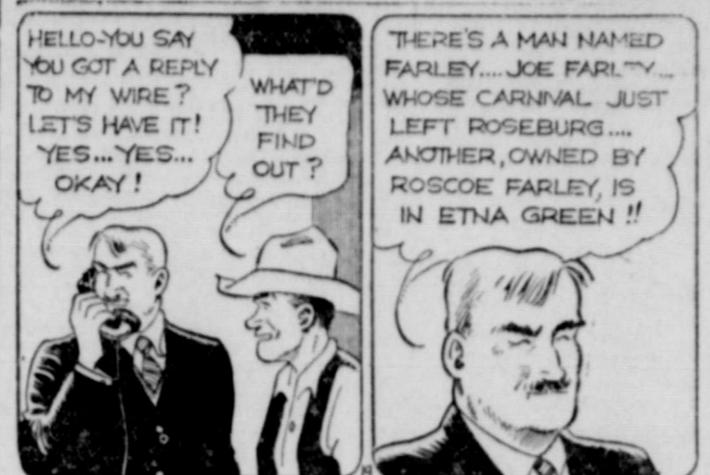

WHEN she had all the sun her skin would take for a first exposure she got up to go. They went to the dressing rooms and came out ready for some easier relaxation in deck chairs. They went up on the promenade deck, where already most of the people were talking walks. Some people were playing shuffleboard on the stern. They looked on idly for a while, and then sat down in the deck chairs reserved for them, side by side. He tucked her in the blanket, and looking up, saw the old dowager, Madame Doremus, watching him.
 "Young man," she said, "I see you got to know her. Such outrageous behavior one sees on shipboard!" Then she clucked like an old hen, and began to doze.
 At last, Jane thought, she is going to get some rest. Jane lay back in her chair and watched the ocean swirls and the sky. She didn't talk. She was content to let there most of the morning, with her dreams of the sun and the moon and the earth and the stars, with a monosyllabic response to Dirk's voice. They were both roused from a full of contentment by the sight of Snowshoes' baldish head, coming along the deck.
 "I've been looking for you," Jane said happily. "I need a policeman!

Last night I had a mysterious knock on my door, and when I looked out saw a man vanishing around the corner. I was petrified!"
 Snowshoes looked about him furtively, and noticed the old dowager asleep in her chair. "There are queer things going on in this ship!" he said darkly.
 The dowager's eyes blinked open, and she sat up, speaking in a dry monotone. "I came on this cruise to get a rest, and I haven't closed my eyes since I came aboard. Last night when I was down at dinner my jewel box was ransacked. But I fooled them." Then she cackled. "I wore everything I had to dinner. The blithering idiots—to think I'd leave my jewels in a stateroom." She sank back in her chair, and closed her eyes again. "Besides, they're past! Not worth 40 cents, the lot of them."
 Dirk looked at Jane curiously. "Why didn't you call me? But I can tell you what happened. Somebody followed the dinner tray to your room—"
 "Exactly," Snowshoes added, in a whisper. "If you ask me they'll turn the ship upside down to get at the Kokoi diamond. You won't be bothered any more. They probably know where Nora Lane's suite is, now. But she never comes out, has all her meals there."

TO Jane it was an idyllic day. The hours rolled on into the early evening. Most of the afternoon she had spent with Dirk, thinking about nothing except the content she felt when she was with him, hearing his voice.
 "We're all alike," Jane said. "Give us a little music, and a place to dance. That's all we ask. Tell me," she added, "why did you come on a cruise like this? You might have gone to Europe."
 "I don't know," he said confusedly. "I honestly don't know why." Then, tasting her disappointment: "I hurt my leg in a skiing spill at Lake Placid. I have to take the leg in the sun. That's what I was doing all forenoon when you were having your beauty nap."
 "I've never been on a steamship before," Jane said. "I wanted the glamour of tropical islands at the end, I suppose. Most of us born inland have our paradises set on islands in the southern seas."
 It was growing dark, and the deck was almost deserted. Dirk leaned very close to her. He looked at her, Jane thought, as a young man ought to look at a girl when he wants to pry out the inner secrets of her soul in a single glance. It was a very respectful look. "I like you," he said, simply, obediently.
 "Do you know," Jane said. "I like you."
 They stood in a broad band of blackness and all about them was nothing but the sound of swelling sea and the stillness which lay out there.

"I'm a little worried about you on this cruise," he said suddenly. "That man coming to your room last night. Other things, those mobsters on board. I think you are in danger."
 She looked up at him and smiled. "Why do you tell me?"
 He brushed a hand through his blond hair—with a gesture of perplexity, Jane thought. "I suppose I love you," he said.
 He leaned over and kissed her, and Jane laughed softly in the darkness.

DEDUCTIONS FOR PROFESSIONAL EXPENSES

A professional man may deduct all necessary expenses incurred in the pursuit of his profession. These include the cost of supplies used in his practice, office rent, cost of light, water, fuel, and telephone in his office, the hire of office assistants, and expenses paid in the operation and repair of an automobile, based upon the proportion of time it is used in making professional calls or for other professional purposes.
 Many physicians use their residences both as their offices and their homes. In such instance the physician may deduct as a business expense the rental value of the rooms occupied for office purposes if he actually pays rent, and also the cost of light and heat furnished these rooms. Also, he may deduct a portion of the wages paid domestic servants whose time is partly occupied in caring for these rooms. Membership dues in professional societies are deductible. Physicians and dentists who keep in their waiting rooms, current magazines and newspapers for the benefit of their patients may deduct this item as a business expense. The cost of professional journals for the taxpayer's own use is also a deductible item.
 The cost of technical books is not a deductible item, being a capital expenditure, but a proportionate amount for each year's depreciation of the books may be deducted. Depreciation may also be taken on office furniture and equipment. Insurance premiums on office or other professional equipment and liability insurance may be deducted. Automobile liability insurance may be deducted only when the automobile is used wholly in pursuit of the taxpayer's profession, and the cost of the entire upkeep may legitimately be claimed as a professional expense.

Cross Half a Continent and Return in 223 Hours

MEETING WITH western mountain roads for the first time, James Nicholson of Indianapolis (left) and John Ringhofer of Chicago (center), drove the Ford V-8 tractor and trailer unit shown above from Chicago to Los Angeles and return in 223 hours running time.
 The trip was made in connection with a test run conducted by the Keeshin Transcontinental Freight Lines, Inc. The trailer carried eight tons of payload on the westbound trip and six tons eastbound. Stops were made only for fuel.
 One particularly brilliant piece of work by the two drivers was when they made the run from Holbrook to Wickenburg, Arizona, a distance of 265 miles and including the difficult Yarnell mountain section south of Prescott, in 10 hours. The unit climbed an 11 per cent gradient on the trip from Raton to the summit of Raton pass and another of 8.2 per cent extending about 500 feet on Yarnell mountain. Gradients of seven to eight per cent were met with frequently.

Pocket-Sized Parks To Entice Motorists Along Highways

By United Press
 AUSTIN, Tex.—An innovation in highway development, pocket-sized roadside parks to entice the weary traveler to rest and recreation—will be found along Texas' splendid highway system by motorists this year.

 State offices of the National Youth Administration, working in conjunction with the state highway department, have started work on development of the first of approximately 200 such parks which will be found on all main highways before summer. The project is planned definitely as a Centennial year development and the parks are expected to add to the pleasure of the thousands of motorists who will drive through the state as Texas observes the 100th birthday of the state.

 Low stone walls will separate the park from the highway. Stone benches and tables will be placed under trees, as will a stone barbecue pit. Most of the parks will vary from three to six acres in extent, with a few, however, less than an acre in size.
 The NYA will employ several thousand Texas youths to help carry out the plan, which is said to be strictly a Texas development.

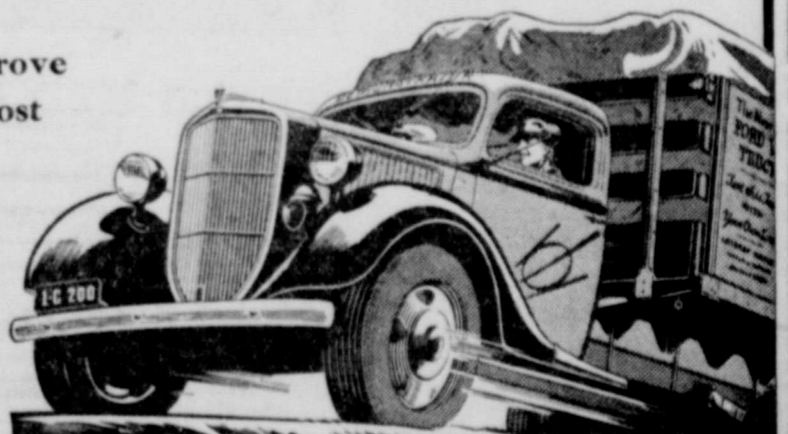

THE DOCTORS ARE RIGHT

Women should take only liquid laxatives
 Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true. Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. Doctors use liquid laxatives.
 THREE STEPS
 I TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION
 II
 III

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time until bowels need no help at all.
 laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.
 Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.
 The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

DURING late winter, when appetites are beginning to need coaxing, fruit, breads and rolls fresh from the oven will be found uncommonly inviting should the urge overtake you to supplement your baker's finest. Fruit rolls are grand served with cottage cheese for luncheon or in the Swiss manner with rich whipped cream, unweetened, accompanied by a steaming cup of coffee.

Marmalade Rolls
Two cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar, 4 tablespoons shortening, 1 egg, 3/4 cup milk (about), 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons softened butter, 1-2 cup nut meats, marmalade.

Mix and sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder. Work in shortening with tips of fingers or pastry blender. Beat egg until light and cut into first mixture, adding milk to make a soft dough. Turn onto a lightly floured molding board and roll with a floured rolling pin into a sheet about 1-2 inch thick. Spread with softened butter. Cover with a layer of marmalade and sprinkle with chopped nut meats. Roll up like a jelly roll and cut across in slices about one inch thick. Dip knife in flour before cutting each slice. Place slices, cut side down, on an oiled and floured pan and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven (375 degrees F.). Orange tea rolls are delicious with tea.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Stewed dried apricots, cereal, cream, sausage rolls, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Oyster stew, oyster crackers, celery and radishes, orange tea rolls, milk, tea.

DINNER: Filet of haddock with tartar sauce, potatoes au gratin, parsnips and pineapple, Chinese cabbage and olive salad, marmalade rolls with whipped cream, milk, coffee.

Orange Tea Rolls

Two cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup milk (about), 4 tablespoons shortening, loaf sugar, orange juice, grated orange rind, melted butter.

Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Work in shortening and cut in milk, making a soft dough. Knead lightly on a floured molding board and roll into a sheet about 3-4 inch thick. Cut with a small cutter and make a depression in the top of each biscuit with the handle of a silver knife which has been dipped in melted butter. In this depression put a cube of sugar which has been dipped in orange juice. Put about 1-2 teaspoon melted butter on sugar and sprinkle grated orange rind over the whole biscuit. Bake twenty minutes in a hot oven (375 degrees F.).

Century Old Pear Trees Show Vigor

By United Press
SAN RAFAEL, Calif. — Pear trees, planted more than a century ago by Franciscan monks, give every indication again bearing their annual crop this summer. For half a dozen years past, the "crop" of the ancient gnarled trees has not exceeded from four to six bushels each year.

One of the trees still stands the spot where it was originally planted in 1818, presumably Father Vendru Fontani, one of the founders of the Mission of San Rafael Arcangel. The second was transplanted from its original orchard site to Boys' Park in San Rafael by the Women's Improvement club.

WIRE-HAIRED AND SMOOTH-HAIRED FOX TERRIERS SOMETIMES ARE BORN IN THE SAME LITTER

The MEXICAN ORCHID
GROWS WITH ITS ROOTS UPWARD, AND ITS BLOSSOMS DOWNWARD.

A POUND OF FEATHERS IS HEAVIER THAN A POUND OF GOLD! FEATHERS ARE WEIGHED BY AVOIRDUPOIS WEIGHT (7000 GRAINS PER POUND), WHILE GOLD IS WEIGHED BY TROY WEIGHT (5760 GRAINS PER POUND).

THE Mexican orchid breaks the rules of the plant kingdom. It clings to a piece of dry bark, with its roots in the air, instead of the soil. The atmosphere furnishes it with sufficient moisture, combined with that in its bulbs.

ON TEXAS FARMS

Searching questions are being asked of would-be gardeners by J. F. Rosborough, Extension Horticulturist, as the gardening season opens.

No cross-examining gardener can beat Rosborough when it comes to this questioning business—"were five loads of manure applied to each half acre of your garden? he asked (if not, rotted manure, leaf mold or rotted ground burrs can still be applied, he says.

"Has the garden soil been plowed six inches deep?"

"Where there is excessive rainfall, is the garden ditched to prevent water standing?"

"In areas subject to wind damage, has a wind break been provided?"

"Is your garden large enough to provide 500 feet of row for each member of the family?"

As a reminder Rosborough never forgets to say that for each person in the family there should be 175 feet of potatoes; 150 feet of tomatoes; 150 feet of mustard, cabbage, green beans, carrots, or other leafy green and yellow vegetables; and then there should be 125 feet of such vegetables as onions, beets, and radishes.

WHEELER—"Forty-one seed crops were grown as a part of terracing demonstrations in 1935, Jake Tarter, Wheeler county agricultural agent, reported in his annual check-up.

"Those 41 seed crops produced an average of 54 per cent more seed per acre than the same crops were grown on adjoining farms that were unterraced. Some of these crops were grown by the same producer. All field crop demonstrations in the county were demonstrations of conservation of soil moisture and soil fertility," his annual report reads.

The county agricultural agent also reports that 116 farms were terraced in this county during 1935 which amounted to a total of 11,670 acres terraced and 800 acres chiseled. The total value of this work was estimated at $117,600 which included the renovating of 16 tractors, 44 implements and 16 plows.

BEEVILLE—Annie Butts, garden cooperator of the Normanna 4-H Girls' club, planted 6,326 feet of vegetables last year for the family garden, according to the annual report of Lorena Yates, Bee county home demonstration agent.

Twelve varieties of vegetables making a balanced diet were grown by Annie. She has canned for the family 711 containers.

Also Miss Yates reports that 38 girls grew gardens in Bee county. A total of 14,445 pounds of vegetables were produced for home consumption. The value of all the gardens grown by these club members amounted to $784.85.

BAY CITY—"That an appropriation for native shrubs is being developed in Matagorda county can be seen by the number of yard demonstrators, accompanied by their husbands, that have been found recently in the woods with spades and sacks for hauling and hurling shrubs," Leola Cox Sides, home demonstration agent, reported this month.

She reports that yucca, cherry laurel, sweet hay, cedar, Indian holly and coral berry are being used extensively for transplanting.

MULESHOE—"We know what subirrigation will do so that is why we have made enough tile for the whole garden this year," said Mrs. G. P. Howell, cooperator in the Enochs Home Demonstration club in Bailey county.
