Where Italians Race to Beat Rains

With Emperor Haile Selassie's disorganized forces put to rout after decisive defeats around Lake Ashangi, Mussolini's legions drove toward Dessye in an effort to reach that strategic city before the big rains start in June. A paved road runs from Dessye to Addis Ababa. Other recent Italian gains in the Lake Tana region brought the invaders to the north shore of that lake, so vital to British irrigation works in Egypt. Next move of the Italians was expected to be Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's long-awaited offensive in the south against Harar, Jijiga, and Dire Dawa, key cities of eastern Ethiopia.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Chemists and psychologists reported today that the man who assaulted and strangled tiny Mrs. Nancy Titterton, probably was one she knew well enough to admit to her bedroom without alarm. GEN. HAGOOD IN CHARGE OF A CORPS AREA

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, who was relieved of command of the Eighth Corps Area after he criticized the WPA, was reinstated today as commander of the Sixth Corps Area, with headquarters in Chicago.

Hagood, whose dismissal raised a storm of controversy, had conferred with President Roosevelt last week and his reappointment was indicated by his smiling refusal to comment when he left the white house.

He had been relieved from command "by orders of the president." The war department, however, said the action was due to the manner in which he criticized the administration relief policies.

In testimony before a congressional committee, Hagood called FWA funds "stage money" and assailed the administration for using money in a way he considered unwise.

At Chicago Hagood will replace Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy, who will go to New York as commander of the second corps area.

Thus, Hagood, having been disciplined by being placed on a status of "awaiting orders" for about two months, has been restored to a position just as high as that he vacated.

What Is To Be Done 'Saved' Labor?

The Rust brothers of Memphis, may or may not have perfected the mechanical cotton picker for which the world has been waiting; but they do seem to have compelled folks to think seriously about the great problem of machines and the men who run them.

These brothers, as you may recall, announced the other day that their cotton picker is at last in shape to go to town; but they asked the country at large to help them find some way of putting it on the market without throwing hundreds of thousands of southern cotton pickers and share-croppers out of work.

"How," they asked, "can our invention bring security and leisure from toil, instead of resulting in starvation and homelessness?"

They have advanced several ideas. One is to lease the machine instead of selling it, requiring the lessee to maintain a definite minimum wage and maximum hour scale for his workers, to abolish child labor and to recognize the right of collective bargaining among his employees. Another is to use part of the machine's profits to set up a social insurance plan for the disabled and the aged, and to develop a program of industrial diversification in the southern cotton belt.

Now these suggestions may be very good or they may be very foolish. The cotton picker itself, for that matter, may fall far short of what the brothers expect it to be. But the point is that here, for the first time we have inventors of labor-saving machinery realizing that the labor which their machine saves has got to have some place to go and something to do when it gets there.

There is something rather ironic about that term, "labor-saving." Labor is "saved," as we say, when some new technical process is perfected; but it sometimes seems almost as if we should say that it is lost, instead. The working man whose bread and butter has been cut out from under him by a whirling contrivance of steel is not likely to look on that contrivance as an unmitigated blessing.

And although our whole society is geared to an ever-increasing use of machines, so that it would be insane for us to try to get back to the old handcraft system, we must realize that this "saved" labor presents one of the foremost problems of this generation.

This machine age contains more promise for the well-being of mankind, in a purely physical sense, than did any other age in history. If man is finally to be released from drudgery he may at last begin to live as God intended him to live, with his mind and spirit as well as with the muscles of his back.

But he has to go on eating while he is doing this high-toned living. A heavy responsibility rests on society as a whole when it bases itself on labor-saving machinery. The Rust brothers deserve great credit for having the vision to recognize this responsibility.

Hundreds of telegrams poured into Washington shortly after Roosevelt's speech, which, for the telegraph companies, was a profitable night message.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
WASHINGTON—That Pan American peace conference we are going to have late next summer in Buenos Aires is no empty gesture. To be quite frank about it—no nobody else is being—the main idea is to imbue the Latin American republics with a pro-United States psychology and to dissuade any of them from getting too chummy with Japan.

Special Attention To Destruction of Insects Is Urged

AUSTIN.—Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer, urges citizens of the state to give special attention toward destroying the breeding places of flies and mosquitoes. With the usual accumulation of winter's debris, the necessity of its prompt removal from the health standpoint is apparent. Conditions that foster fly-breeding are definitely menacing to the welfare of all citizens, and particularly children.

Fundamentals of Art

Color is the complement of blue... This is painting a picture, creating a home, or combining colors for our clothes, knowing these color contrasts help us to create pleasing effects. Suppose the breakfast room has orange as the strongest color or is the color seen most in the drapes or wallpaper, to still amplify this color or to enhance it, blue may be used as the edge trimming on the drapes or there may be blue dishes on the table. Chair backs are effective if blue. A room in which a sunny effect is desired, yellow drapes are hung, then somewhere in the room, something in lavender as a vase, lamp or pillow will increase its loveliness. In the pot plant of geraniums, the blossoms appear very red because it is surrounded with its complimentary color, green leaves. Everywhere we find the use of this law of color and to apply it where nature can not in our artificial lives, we will only have balance of color but also enhance the beauty of the colors we use. A maroon living room suit is enriched with the selection of a dull green occasional chair. It is popular to wear three colors this

By REV. T. E. BOWMAN
We had a great day yesterday in starting off our revival. The church was filled with folks and the spirit in the services was fine. The choir rendered a program of Easter music last night. It was heartily enjoyed by the large congregation present. The second quarterly conference was held in connection with the service.

We had our first week day service this morning. It was a good crowd and a fine service. Here are the announcements for the services: Each morning from 10 to 11. Each evening the services will start at 7:30. The young people will meet at 7 p. m. The intermediates, seniors and young people will meet at that hour. The children will meet in the afternoon the time to be announced later.

Brother Kennedy is here and will be in the services tonight. We hope to have a large crowd to greet him. An urgent invitation is extended to all citizens of Ranger to meet with us in every service. We will do our best to help you. Come to the services tonight.

Allred Has Simple Way of Handling All Extraditions

By United Press
AUSTIN.—A simple method of handling extraditions has been adopted by Gov. James V. Allred. It saves time and prevents duplication of hearings.

When another governor calls upon Texas for someone in Texas who is "wanted" for an offense in the foreign state, Governor Allred asks two questions: "Was the man where he could have committed the offense?" and "Is there a formal extradition charge filed against him?"

If these two requirements are shown to be met, Governor Allred honors the requisition and authorizes an extradition proclamation.

He keeps a string on the action, however. The extradition papers are not issued until there has been an opportunity for the extraditee to contest removal by writ of habeas corpus. The Governor insists on an agreement between defense counsel and prosecutors that there will be no attempt to spirit the man out of the state before a hearing, if one has been sought.

The system lets courts decide if the removal is justified. In many cases defendants resorted to court tests after a hearing before the Governor. That meant two hearings of the same matter. The new plan makes one suffice.

Spy Hysteria Is Gripping England

By United Press
LONDON.—As in pre-war days Merric Englund has become once again a playground for the ancient but ever new and always fascinating game of espionage and counter-espionage.

"Spy-hysteria," fanned by sensational newspapers, gets ever more contagious. The atmosphere of war-clouds over Europe makes a feasible background for the wildest stories.

Spies are alleged to be responsible for the sabotage of the battleship Royal Oak and the submarine Oberon in December last and of the cruiser Cumberland in recent weeks.

Britain's billion and a half dollar rearmament program is said to be responsible for the sudden increased activity in espionage. The mention of secret high-speed airplanes during the sittings of the Arms Commission, the details of the government's new air program which is said to include robot pilots for bombers, and the frequent hints of new air fighting developments and discoveries of anti-aircraft weapons all suggest profitable fields for spying activities.

The preliminary hearing for espionage of Dr. Hermann Goertz, a German citizen who described his activities as those of a novelist looking for material, provided excitement.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer
WHEN I was a little girl, a roast done to a turn used to be an achievement that made our whole family hold its breath. Fortunately, the days of guesswork as to when meat is cooked enough are over. With a meat thermometer it is easy to bring roasts to perfection every time.

The old way of determining when a roast was cooked by calculating the number of minutes per pound it must be in the oven is of course better than no guide at all, but it is far from accurate. There are several reasons for this. First, not only the size but the shape has an effect on the time. Cuts without bone seem to take longer, too. And fatness or lack of it affects the roasting time. A fat piece of meat will cook quicker than a lean piece. We have learned, too, that low cooking temperatures produce juicy and seemingly more tender meat with less cooking loss.

Lamb Takes About Three Hours.
Lamb is inexpensive this spring and a lot of lamb will make several meals. Put it in the oven preheated to 350 degrees F. and roast until the thermometer registers the right temperature. At this temperature it will take about three hours to roast a six pound roast.

Since lamb has a pronounced flavor it is at its best served with green onions, say, which have a flavor of their own, too. Remove the outer skin and cut off all but about 2 inches of the green tops. Boil, uncovered, in salted water. Drain and season with salt and pepper and butter and a sprinkling of lemon juice.

Brussels sprouts, stuffed green peppers and cauliflower are also good with lamb.

A plain lettuce salad with a tart French dressing is a happy accompaniment to this meal. Make

The general situation was aggravated greatly when, following the violent death of the victor Max Kassel, known as "Max the Red," disclosures were made as to the ease with which vice-gangs obtained British citizenship for undesirables of all nationalities.

The latest official report bearing on the subject is that the British Secret Service is to be allocated several thousand pounds extra in the budget estimate which is said to be deemed necessary for its increased activity. Scotland Yard men do a great deal of the work connected with the frustrating of spies but the Secret Service is an important factor in counter-espionage activities.

Among the victims of spy hysteria are the political refugees from Continental countries who mostly have no fixed occupation in Britain and do not always speak good English.
