EVERYTHING IN READINESS FOR SAFETY MEET

"Everything is ready for the safety conference," B. H. Peacock, who is in charge of arrangements of the annual Oil Field Safety Conference, said today.

The parade, which is to be a big feature of the afternoon program, is to form on Commerce street between Main and Cherry streets, with part of the entries in the parade starting from Walnut and Cherry streets.

Fire Chief G. A. Murphy, who is marshal of the parade, said that the line of march would start on Commerce, proceed up Main street to Lillard Field, where it would be disbanded.

It was stated today that a new-reel cameraman would likely be in Ranger to take pictures of the parade, and that he was particularly interested in the pet section.

Estimates of the number to attend the conference and to witness the parade run as high as 5,000, while those who attend the program at the Recreation Building are expected to number about half that many.

ITALIANS ARE PREPARED FOR LAST DRIVE

GENEVA April 30.—Diplomatic advisers from Rome, unconfirmed, today said the Italian foreign office had been advised Addis Ababa has been captured.

Italian armies closed in relentlessly today on the defeated army of Emperor Haile Selassie and the occupation of Addis Ababa and complete conquest of the last independent kingdom in Africa appeared to be in sight.

Just north of the capitol two Italian motorized units were only 60 miles away. The emperor sent his troops back from the front and ordered the capitol should be left undefended and the government moved out.

The southern army, driving toward the vital railway from Addis Ababa to the sea, captured Sasa Banea the last Ethiopian stronghold barring their way.

ROME, April 30.—The government today ordered all fascist organizations to "stand ready in uniform" tomorrow.

It was presumed the order meant another fast test mobilization of fascist strength after announcement of the fall of Addis Ababa.

"Matter of Weeks" Separates Italy From a Victory

HOUSTON.—Only a "matter of weeks" separates Italy from successful conclusion of its invasion of Ethiopia, according to Dr. Bruno Roselli, Italian economist and author.

The problem now facing Premier Benito Mussolini is that of managing Italy's new territory, he said.

"Mussolini now has to work out some means of controlling and colonizing Ethiopia," he believes. "I think he will colonize the new territory to the last ditch. As to how he will rule it, remains a mystery."

Fascism is firmly established in Italy and contains a "molding" of all creeds together in the hand of the dictator.

"Italy thinks and acts in the terms of the state instead of the individual," Dr. Roselli said. "Mussolini has the support of about 95 per cent of the people. He is more powerful in his country than Hitler is in Germany. I think Hitler's support is about 80 per cent."

Hitler's main opposition is in religion. Mussolini is creating law and order and is bringing the different factions together like a magnet.

Italians, Roselli continued, are "born fascists. They know nothing of the democratic form of government which once ruled."

He said that Italy was progressing rapidly, completing unfinished churches, palaces and other projects; thus making it possible to advance into the "international field."

Child Hunger Marchers Sleep Hard

Beds are as scarce in the State House of Trenton as New Jersey relief funds, so the unemployed camped in the legislative halls stretch out anywhere to sleep. These children of the "hunger marchers" were found napping on the hard marble stairs as their parents sent an ultimatum to Governor Hoffman demanding legislation to provide relief funds.

Eastland Gets District Office of Farm Debt Adjustment Program

Revision of the state farm debt adjustment section of the re-employment administration program into 10 districts resulted this week in the location of one of those at Eastland.

Arrangements were completed by Guion Gregg, Dallas, state director with F. Houston of Dallas. P. B. Madison of Littlefield was assigned as district director.

The district will be known as No. 5 and Eastland will be headquarters for 25 counties.

This program attempts to make amicable adjustments with creditors of farmers on debts without necessity of court procedure.

The main duties rest with a committee appointed by the governor. Members of the Eastland county committee are W. R. Usery of Carbon, F. S. Boland of Scranton and Milton Newman. The county agent's personnel and the extension service compose an advisory group upon whose judgment the program's decisions are made.

The Eastland county committee meets the first Tuesday in each month. Madison stressed that the important functions of the program are those of the committee members.

In the Eastland district office, located at the Eastland National Bank building, are Miss Rita Troxell of Eastland and Miss Katie Potset of Abilene, stenographic and clerical aids for Madison. Gregg is in charge of the western division of the state and Houston for East Texas.

Counties in this district are Garza, Somervell, Kent, Stonehill, Haskell, Hood, Throckmorton, Young, Jack, Wise, Parker, Falo Pinto, Stephens, Shackelford, Jones, Fisher, Seury, Mitchell, Nolan, Taylor, Callahan, Eastland, Comanche, Erath.

WITNESS TELLS OF ROMANCES OF ACCUSED

GREENVILLE, Texas, April 30. Testifying at the plea of Mrs. Velma Patterson, thrice married Commerce widow, that she was innocent of poisoning her two daughters, prosecutors drew testimony regarding her romances into the records of her murder trial today before resting their case.

Bolestering the testimony of Annie Cooper, maid in the Patterson home, that Mrs. Patterson told her she might marry Jimmy Wallace if her children were "out of the way," prosecutors called Fred Patterson, brother of the widow's last husband, and his wife.

Mrs. Patterson said she drove to Lone Oak with her sister-in-law to get Wallace, and drove to Mineola with them.

"Velma said she was crazy about him and wanted to marry him," she said.

The defense was expected to call Wallace as a witness soon after it opens its response this afternoon.

Citizens of Dallas Favor Meters For Parking Spaces

DALLAS.—Citizens of Dallas are almost unanimously in favor of the parking meters.

An out-of-town delegation from Austin, headed by Mayor Tom Miller, picked 30 persons on the streets at Random and asked their views.

Twenty-nine favored the devices. The lone dissenter was a woman law student who asserted her study of legal matters had convinced her that the meters were unconstitutional.

City Manager Hal Moseley told the group that Dallas soon would have 2,000 of the meters, paying $180,000 annually into the city treasury.

ORDER CLEARS LAST HURDLE OF THE WETS

Plaintiff Sought To Show Election Was Same As Held on January 3.

Ninety-first District Court Judge George L. Davenport dissolved Thursday an injunction issued on Monday to restrain County Judge Clyde L. Garrett from hearing applications for permits to retail beer.

Judge Garrett was informed by counsel, in view of the court's decision, that it was his duty to hold hearings on the application of retailers for permits to sell beer.

L. H. Welch of Jireckenridge, attorney for the plaintiffs, Joe J. Mickle, Omar M. Mickle, P. L. Parker and J. F. McWilliams of Eastland, and more than 400 voters, contended that the April 18 election in which sale of 14 per cent beverages was legalized was a re-submission of the 4 per cent proposition rejected Jan. 3.

F. D. Wright of Cisco pointed out that three specific issues can be submitted voters on the liquor question. The first, he said, was voting for 4 per cent alcoholic content beverages, the second, 14 per cent beverages and the third for all propositions.

The defense held to the theory that the election April 18 was illegal since it was held less than a year after the Jan. 3 voting. Wright, however, pointed out that elections on one issue can not be held in the same year. The last voting was a separate issue from the first, he said.

An exhibit of over 400 names as co-plaintiffs in the case was filed by Welch.

Neglectful Parents
Produce Criminals

The oldest arrow in the quiver of the experienced criminal lawyer is the picture of a gray-haired mother weeping over the waywardness of her unfortunate son.

Any reporter who has covered very many criminal court trials can tell you all about it. The thing who is being tried will sit at the trial table, doing his level best to wear an innocent more-sinned-against-than-sinning look;
and his advocate, with quavering voice, will tell the jury about the mother of "this poor boy," and will beg them to send sonny back to her so that her pure mother-love may redeem and ennoble him.

It is all very pretty and inspiring, of course. But it is about time that someone spoke up and inquired why mother isn't right there in the dock along with sonny boy, facing trial on her own account.

J. Edgar Hoover, renowned head of the G-Men, told the New York Round Table Forum the other day that an amazing number of the crimes charged to our underworld these days should really be charged to the underworldings' parents.

Some 20 per cent of all our crime, said Mr. Hoover, is committed by lads who are not yet old enough to vote.
Many of these youngsters are still of high school age.
Practically all of them come from homes where papa and mama just couldn't be bothered to enforce discipline, set up high moral standards and, in general, see to it that Junior set his feet in the way that he should go.

Worse yet, continued Mr. Hoover when one of these wayward boys does get into a jam with the law, his parents come down to court with only one thought in mind—to get him out of trouble. That he may need a swift rap over the knuckles to straighten him out never seems to enter their heads.

They weep over him and cuddle up to him and save him, if they can, from paying the penalty for his misdeeds; and, by the same token, they leave him feeling that it is all right if he goes out and steals another car or sticks up another filling station as long as the law doesn't catch him.

The attack on crime, then, Mr. Hoover concludes, must begin with "a reconstruction of the American viewpoint toward better parental discipline and a greater sense of law abidance beginning in the home."

This is so undeniably true as to be self-evident. Yet it is the one step we usually overlook when we talk about wiping out the underworld.

The police courts, jails, penitentiaries, and death chambers of our land tell an unspeakably tragic story; and it is a story which, in the vast majority of cases, begins back in some American home in which the father and the mother made a terrible mess of their most important job.

Back of almost every criminal stands a parent who failed.

Carmella Ponselle's shrieks summoned New York firemen to a blaze. They must have been amazed to learn it was a real fire, and not just another soprano.

What's the Big Hurry?

..and here are some of the things
he DID on the way up!

Between 1925 and 1934, inclusive, the rate of death from automobile accidents increased 17 per cent in urban territory of the United States.
But while this change was taking place, the rate of death increased almost 100 per cent in rural territory.
(Urban territory includes all towns and cities more than 10,000 population, and rural territory the remainder.)
Last year there were nearly 160,000 automobile accidents which happened on rural highways which no matter how good a driver a person rewards himself.

Where Italians Have Crushed Foe

Less than seven months after Italy's legions began their invasion of Ethiopia, Emperor Haile Selassie's black warriors have been cut down and driven back by Mussolini's blackshirts, native Askaris, and bomb-laden planes, until Italy's grip closes on Ethi-opia's capital, Addis Ababa, bringing complete victory near. This map shows important dates and extent of the Italian advances as Mussolini insists that peace shall be made only on his own terms.
Arrows indicate the path of Italy's attacks; the shaded area, the territory occupied.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The sooner Governor Landon—or whoever the nominee is—gets to Washington to take over Republican national headquarters, the sooner it will be for the Grand Old Party and all concerned with its immediate future.
An almost incredible series of publicity blunders within the space of a few days has made the present national committee management a laughing stock among the newspaper correspondents—not to mention the gleeful Democrats.
Partisan Republican newspapers in the East already are commencing in tones denoting great pain if you hear further repercussions.
Here are some of the reasons:
1—After many months of paning the "brain trust" of the New Deal—with choice sarcasms from Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard Law School and his numerous pupils employed by the administration—the national committee suddenly hired nine professors with a large staff, at the head of whom it placed a former pupil of Dr. Frankfurter, Prof. Olin Glenn Saxton.
2—Mr. Theodore Huntley, boss press agent of the national committee, broadcast a notice to newspaper editors that he was prepared to furnish news stories and propaganda in accordance with whatever was wanted. He stood ready to arrange a weekly or daily Washington letter if there were sufficient demand, but suggested that most editors would prefer to run the syndicated columns of—and then he named four Washington correspondents with anti-New Deal leanings.
This official endorsement did those columnists no good and the reaction wasn't so good for Mr.
Huntley, either, especially when Democratic Press Agent Charlie
Michelson dwelt upon the impli-

FOLLY and FAREWELL

By Marie Blizard

BEGIN HERE TODAY
LINDA BOURNE, 20 years old, pretty and slightly prominent in the little town of Newtown, is left almost penniless after the untimely death of her father.

She becomes friendly with PETER GARDNER, political reporter, and shows him a scenario she has written. Peter gets Linda a job as society reporter.

DIX CARTER, with whom Linda is in love, goes abroad for a year. His letters are forgotten. She becomes engaged to Peter, but postpones the date of the wedding.

Peter writes a play, submits it to a producer who tells him to "write a comedy."

HONEY HARMON, film actress, comes to Newtown on a "personal appearance" tour.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER VIII

NEWTOWN didn't close its shops the day Honey Harmon arrived to shed her cinematic glory over its modest environs. Nor did its mayor meet her train with the keys to the city. But what the town lacked in civic welcome, the residents made up by their massed attendance at the Palace. Complete from whole families to Linda Bourne and Peter Gardner, they waited patiently in line for the tickets that would give them first-hand knowledge of what a real movie star could do, as an entertainer.

Unfortunately there was little that this one could do that night. For, she gave them an excellent chance to see how lovely one small, golden-haired dynamo could be in the flesh. A glittering halo in her famous blond hair, a sheath of white satin, a coat of snowy ermine and the famous diamond bracelets and the famous diamond bracelets held well by the picture, but the dusky tones that only Honey Harmon boasted were lost. The rosy-red mouth smiled appealingly. Blue eyes looked out sadly from under nearly-inch-long blackened eyelashes while Honey's manager explained to a disappointed audience that Honey was ill. Brave little thing that she was, she felt she could not let her public down. She spoke as bravely as she could. A cold shiver developed into something serious and she had lost her voice. She spread her hands, bowed and blew kisses and became less real to them than her shadowed self that appeared later on the screen.

Pete, sitting beside Linda in the darkened theater, was, for once, in complete agreement with the girl beside him. He watched the screen with absorbed attention, and slipped the ever ready scrap of paper from his pocket to make surreptitious notes as the figure of the famous heroine glided, swept and stormed across the silver sheet. "Brave!" he said once under his breath.

That night, when the picture was over, Pete literally dragged Linda to the Mason House, Newtown's leading hotel, "for supper" he said. And when they had ordered the usual chicken sandwich and coffee, he excused himself and made a beeline for the desk. Was Miss Harmon staying there?

She was, but she had gone directly from the theater to the Newtown Hospital. The cold in her throat was as serious as her manager had claimed. When Pete heard this he smiled with satisfaction. Hardly an expression one would expect at such news.

Pete did not mention his visit to the hotel desk to Linda. Nor did he tell her that the next morning he ordered—after personally selecting them—a box of long-stemmed roses sent to Miss Honey Harmon, Newtown Hospital. And therewith enclosed a card marked simply "You were charming last night."

—Peter Gardner.

That day he made two telephone calls to the hospital. Miss Harmon had lost her voice quite completely. Yes, it was likely that she would remain for a few days.

Pete waited a few days. Then, three days later, dressed to what he called "the gills" (by which he meant his shoes were neatly shined, his English suit well pressed and he wore a low stiff collar) he presented his card at the hospital after scribbling "Representing the Newtown Blade" across his name.

HONEY looked like a picture titled "Hollywood Star Receives Reporter in Hospital." A little-girl hair ribbon bound the golden hair that flowed over a lace pillow. The darkened lashes dropped shadows on her unrouged cheeks.

"Please don't try to talk," Pete said hungrily, looking at her face. She looked back at his, not so hungrily but appraisingly. This was nice.

"But I can," she said with a throaty huskiness. "And I want to. The flowers were divine. And I adored the message."

Pete looked embarrassed. "I didn't know I was going to have to come to see you officially when I sent them." He said it quite simply.

"Have to come?" she asked with a questioning smile.

"Say, you don't think I'd have dared to come on my own?" He managed to make it sound the way the words might.

"Oh, you've come from the paper?" She pouted.

"They want a story about your illness. I don't usually do this sort of thing, but they wanted . . . the . . ." Pete was becomingly modest—"well, you know, they took me off a big story to get it."

"Oh, you're the star reporter?" Honey reversed their roles. She sat at the feet of a great man.

"Nonsense," answered Pete, and proceeded to act like a star reporter for the next 10 minutes while he questioned and made voluminous notes. He wrote and Honey watched. She broke off one of the long-stemmed roses and played with it, trailing it across the satin coverlet.

"You've been a peach to let me take up so much of your time," he said when he finished the 10th page.

"You're a peach to come and see a sick girl," Honey said softly, and added, "Please don't go. It's terribly lonely here all by myself. Tell me about yourself."

Pete wasn't ready yet to tell her about himself, so he asked some more questions about her.

But when she had finished telling him about the finishing school in the east, the year dear Papa died, and how frightfully hard it was for Mumsie to get along on $15,000 a year, how Honey herself had gone into a beauty contest for a lark and won it, she came back to the subject of Pete. This was the first time she had met a man who actually fitted the Hollywood version of the tall, striking, silent newspaperman. Honey was tired of producers and juveniles.

"Why did you say you 'wouldn't dare' to come to see me if the paper hadn't sent you?" She managed to wriggle the rose into his lapel.

WHEN Pete had finished telling her why he wouldn't dare and she had invited him to come and see her the next day, it was well after 7 and Pete had promised to be at Linda's house for supper at 6:30.

"Are we going to a party?" Linda asked when she saw the stiff collar and the rose in his lapel.

"None," he said and that was all. Linda wrinkled her nose delicately as a wave of perfume (not the kind she would have used) wafted from Pete's coat, but she said nothing about it.

Linda didn't see as much of Pete as she had expected for the next week. Pete did not explain his absence, and she would not ask him to, but when she alighted from the trolley at the end of her street and saw a sleek Rolls parked in her path, she was curious enough to look at its occupants. Therein, in unaccustomed luxury, sat her Pete, a rug of fur over his knees and Miss Honey Harmon on his arm.

Linda got back on the trolley car and rode to the end of the line, trying to decide whether she was angry, jealous or disgusted. She decided she didn't know, but she would have given a great deal to know what Pete could have been saying that had brought a look of such utter absorption to Honey Harmon's face.

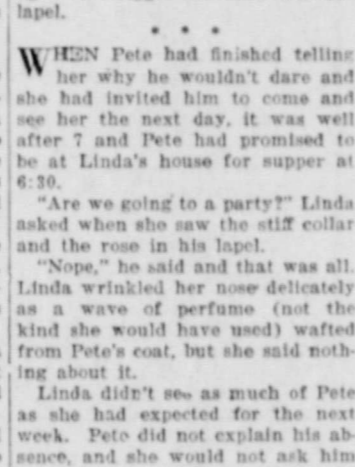

Pete, his fingers crossed, had been saying, "I have a play I'd like you to read. I had you in mind—a woman just like you—when I wrote it."

Better Be Vig'ant

Here is an example of what too many pedestrians do. The person illustrated above never had time to wait for the green light, but now, as he will admit, he has P-L-E-N-T-Y of time. No doubt any person who has had such an experience will decide it's better to wait a few seconds than to spend weeks and even months getting over a serious ailment because of impatience.

Last year there were more than a thousand pedestrians killed when they crossed at intersections against the signal, and there were more than 10,000 who were injured, according to the Travelers Insurance Company. Many of those killed, if they had a chance to do it over again, would be more than willing to wait for the light to turn in their favor. Very likely those injured feel the same way. It may be a little irksome to wait for the signal to flash "Go," but it is far from being funny to be left in bed recovering from injuries.

Our Young Drivers

The Most Dangerous Age
(Percentage Change in Death Rates 1922-34)

Many ask the question, "which is the most dangerous age in driving an automobile?" The chart above gives the answer. It shows that between 1922 and 1934 inclusive the rate of death from automobile accidents in the United States increased 107 per cent. Grouping all the ages under 15 shows that the rate of death has decreased 7 per cent. If the ages are grouped, however, by each five years, the data developed by the Travelers Insurance Company disclose that the only reduction has been in the group of five to nine, where the rate of death has decreased 26 per cent. Hats should be off to this group and to the police and teachers for the savings in life.
The really serious fact that this chart brings out is the very great percentage increase in the death rate in the group between 15 and 24 years of age. A part of this age corresponds to the high school group. Such a bad record gives emphasis to the question whether high schools everywhere shouldn't be providing instruction in the safe use of the automobile.
