MAIL FRAUD IS CHARGED TO DR. TOWNSEND

WASHINGTON, May 21.—A charge that Townsend leaders used the mails to defraud in seeking to raise a "bogus" $11,000 lobby fund was presented and immediately denied today as the house old age inquiry renewed examination of Dr. Francis Townsend's $200-a-month pension scheme. The charge was made by Committee Counsel James Sullivan, who submitted copies of a "Townsendgram" sent out in March, 1935, which urged members to hurry contributions for a lobby, which he charged did not exist. Townsend, 70-year-old sponsor of the pension movement, denied any fraudulent indications in the Townsendgrams, though he said he was not familiar with all details of the appeal. Sullivan contended a "Townsendgram" solicited funds for support of a Townsend lobby at a time the movement's lobbying activities had ceased. Sullivan brought out that in December, 1934, several months before the Townsendgram appeal, a lobby had been set up by the movement in Washington and a fund of $23,490 raised for its support. The lobby, Sullivan disclosed, consisted of a Townsend "board of strategy," including Charles Randall, former congressman. Its duties had ended when the Townsendgram appeal for lobby funds was made, Sullivan said.

Allred Has Taken No Action On Oil In Rodessa Field

AUSTIN, May 21.—Gov. James Allred said today he had taken no action, either personally or by representative, in connection with oil production in the Rodessa field, now agitating the oil market. Chairman Ernest Thompson of the railroad commission is the state's oil compact representative. "I have had no part in the matter," Gov. Allred said.

Contest Threatened In Jersey Election

TRENON, N. J., May 21.—Supporters of former Congressman Franklin Fort, threatened a contest of Tuesday's election count to keep Gov. Harold Hoffman from going as a delegate at large to the republican national convention. To observers it seemed the governor's seat was safe, but officials in the Fort camp said it was "quite evident there had been skulduggery."

Requests Are Made For Motor Routes

DALLAS, May 21.—The Gillette Motor Transport, Inc., claiming it can reduce the time of freight delivery between Dallas and El Paso by 24 hours, presented testimony on its application for an operations permit before Mark Marshall, director of the Texas Railroad Commission. Other cases on the docket were the application for a Cleburne to Mex. line and the Oatark Motor Line to operate ten additional trucks between Fort Worth and Texarkana.

Irish Government Arrests Opponents

DUBLIN, May 21.—President Eamon de Valera's government today launched its biggest offensive against opposition factions with the arrest of Maurice Twomey, commander of the Irish Republican army and his chief of staff, Frank Connelley, prominent lawyer. The two were arrested by officers of the political branch of the civic guards while they were leaving church where they were attending mass. Both were hurried away to prison, where it was explained they were arrested under the public safety act.

Henry, long her financial adviser, was sentenced to prison, is being made by Mary Miles Minter (above), star of the silent movies, through a suit filed in Los Angeles against the brokerage firm that formerly employed Henry. Miss Minter contends Henry acted as the firm's agent when handling the embezzled securities.

PILOT KILLED IN A CRASH NEAR ITASCA

ITASCA, Texas, May 21.—Officials were at a loss, today, to explain the cause of the airplane accident in which Capt. W. K. Ennis, Houston, was killed near here last night. The national guard plane crashed in a field, hurling the pilot's body more than 50 feet. Parts of the plane were scattered over a wide area. Several farmers heard the crash, but there were no eyewitnesses. Ennis' parachute was found opened, but apparently unused. He was returning to Houston from Fort Worth. The crash was the first fatality of national guards in Texas in 10 years.

Garrett, candidate for congress from the 17th district, to open his campaign in Sweetwater on the night of Friday, May 29. Plans call for an Eastland county motorcade to leave Ranger at noon Friday, to be joined at Eastland at 12:30 by an Eastland delegation and those from the southern part of the county, and at Cisco at 1 o'clock. A short program will be presented at each town along the way. According to J. W. J. Edgar Hoover Sure Spankings Might Halt Crime

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—Head of the department of justice, J. Edgar Hoover, believes that old-fashioned spankings and discipline will put a stop to early crime tendencies in America's youths. He outlined his reasons before the thirtieth annual convention of the Boys Club of America. "Teaching young boys the future of America instead of past history would help many of them from spending the best part of their lives in prison," Hoover said.

Lumber Industry Forsee Continued Gain In Business

Based upon a detailed economic analysis, the special lumber survey committee in its report to the Department of Commerce states that prospects indicate a continued gain in lumber consumption. However, no extraordinary rise in demand over usual seasonal increases is forecast and the survey committee recommends that any substantial addition to lumber production should follow actual demonstrated increases in demand rather than any anticipated gain. The forest products division of the Department of Commerce in reviewing the committee's report points out that the "ills" of the lumber industry for several years have been due to a large extent to a lack of balance between production and demand. In fact, it has only been since August, 1935, that the special lumber survey committee, during its four years of existence, has not recommended further general reductions in lumber stocks. It is, therefore, of utmost importance to the welfare of the industry that an additional rate of manufacture be restrained until a substantial increase in demand actually manifests itself.

Gen. Houston's Defeat of Santa Anna To Be Celebrated Again Next August

HOUSTON.—Gen. Sam Houston's defeat of Santa Anna, the Mexican "Napoleon of the West," at San Jacinto 100 years ago to gain independence will be commemorated Aug. 9 in a sham battle by 2,500 soldiers and National Guardsmen. The mock fight will be held on the old battleground 12 miles east of Houston as part of the Centennial celebration. Permission for the spectacle was granted by the war department upon request of officials of the San Jacinto Centennial association. "We will have cavalry, just as Sam Houston had mounted men in his Texas army," he said, "but we will show how military science has equipped the modern mounted troops with powerful weapons. It is going to be a fine show—the biggest thing ever seen in this part of Texas." Preliminary plans call for a memorial service at dawn for the heroes of the 141st Infantry during the 100 years of the organization's existence. The 141st Infantry dates back to the Alamo and the regimental coat-of-arms displays the words: "Remember the Alamo." "The 141st has had many names in the past," Colonel Eversberg said, "but we know its men first came from the old Washington Guards and similar units of never-to-be-forgotten fighting men." "This show is our part in the Texas Centennial, and we already have received approval of the state and federal authorities necessary in military affairs of this size and importance."

Townsend Inquiry Reveals Blanton It's 'Worst Enemy'

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Name of Thomas L. Blanton, fiery U. S. representative from the 17th Texas congressional district, yesterday was drawn into testimony of the Townsend old age pension movement probe, with a leader's assertion he "looms as our worst enemy." The reference, from a letter written by Frank Peterson, a Townsend press agent, to Dr. Frank Dyer, Townsend west coast organizer, was read before the house investigating committee. According to Washington dispatches, the letter said: "Congressman Hoempel, Dem., Calif., announced that he would make a speech on the plan next week and draw the fire of congressman of Texas. Blanton looms as our worst enemy. "We should, if possible, have his district organized 100 per cent with Townsend clubs and should start a petition in his district asking him to resign. If we can get from 80 per cent to 90 per cent of his constituents to sign such a petition, and have another congressman present it on the house floor it should be a highly effective and spectacular thing to do. It would have a very chastening effect upon the other congressmen."

ROBBERY BY GOVERNMENT IS INTIMATED

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Philip Roosevelt, cousin of the president, startled a dull senate interstate commerce subcommittee hearing today when he said "certain actions at Washington would aid the robbery of its citizens." Senators who had been doing in their chairs while Roosevelt rattled off routine testimony on a proposal to dismiss the Minneapolis & St. Paul railroad, roused suddenly. "I can't believe you mean the government would rob one set of taxpayers for the benefit of another," said Senator Harry Truman, Dem., Mo., new leader. "All right. Figure it out for yourself if you feel that way about it," Roosevelt rejoined sharply. "Certain actions at Washington lead me to believe that the government would not be adverse to doing that."

The Brown twins will run on the same relay team with Wallender and Grunstein, Texas University flashes who made history at the Penn Relays this year, at the New Orleans classic. If it wins, it will go to the National Meet at Boston, and then to Randall Island, New York, for the Olympic trials.

Elmer earned his right to go to the New Orleans meet by placing first in the 200-meter dash, second in the 100-meter dash, and running on both winning relay teams at Dallas Saturday in the newly-organized Southwestern branch of the A. A. U. Delmer took first in the 100-meter dash and was on the winning relay teams.

We Should Get Truth About Life In Slums

Probably the hoariest and sorriest of the gags in which well-fed people indulge concerning the poor has to do with the tradition that every slum family looks on a bathtub as a good place in which to store coal.

The joke has done service for a great many years. It had almost died of old age when it was revived by the recent rise of the slum clearance idea. People who ought to know better assured us that it was useless to provide slum dwellers with bathrooms; they'd just put coal in the bathtubs, and all the expensive plumbing would be wasted.

It occurred to somebody, at last, to find out whether there really was anything in this story. The New York City Housing Authority, preparing to build a low-cost housing development, sent a number of investigators through upward of 1300 slum homes to have a look. These investigators looked and came back with the report that in not one of these tenements did they find a bathtub that was used for anything but taking baths.

Some of the slum people were good housekeepers and some were rotten housekeepers. Some kept their dark little suites clean and neat, and others made no attempt to do so. But not one family piled its coal supply in the tub—although, as the investigators remarked, it would hardly be surprising if they did, since most tenement bathtubs are really washtubs in the kitchen, handy to the stove.

None of this is especially important, of course, except that it does give us a chance to kill this cruel old wisecrack; and that is worth doing, because gags of that kind are shields behind which comfortable folk can keep themselves from realizing just how tough life is for some of their fellow citizens.

No sensitive person can look at some of the hovels which thousands and thousands of Americans have to call homes without feeling unutterably heartsick. And to feel heartsick and indignant in the face of human suffering is good—because, sooner or later, that heartsickness and indignation make people get up on their hind legs and do something to wipe out the causes of the suffering.

But heartless, lying jokes such as the coal-in-the-bathtub thing stand in our way. We see people living miserably in a dark hole hardly fit for animals—and then somebody says "Oh, people like that don't mind. They don't know anything better. They like to be dirty. Why, they keep their coal in the bathtub."

So our indignation dies down, and we are content to let our country continue to carry its dreadful, expensive load of slums.

Perhaps if we can once understand that this kind of talk simply isn't true, we can get to the point of being willing to stand the cost of putting slums out of existence.

Tablets found in France reveal human beings had an alphabet 100 centuries ago, which was our first intimation there had been an Antique Deal.

The GLAMOROUS ADVENTURE

by Jean Seivwright © 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GAIL EVERETT, who has won prizes in the Larnie costume design contest, comes to New York to find work. Gail's parents are both in the clothing business. She has spent the past few years at MISS CRANSTON'S fashionable school for girls, and Miss Cranston's generosity and friendship for Gail's mother.

Agreed with a letter from Gail's mother, Gail goes to the office of the large silk manufacturing company of which her father is an officer. She is told Larnie is out of town, and not expected back for some time.

DEREK HARGREAVES enters the scene this conversation. Later he meets Gail in the street. He approaches her and says, "Pardon me, but didn't I see you in John Larnie's office a few minutes ago?"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

A LOOK of surprise widened Gail's amber eyes as she turned to the young man. "Why, yes," she said, "I was in Mr. Larnie's office."

His blue eyes were twinkling. "You got the dope all right that day, though these lovely ladies like grand watchdogs for the boys higher up. Larnie is out of town."

Gail smiled. "You know Mr. Larnie?" she questioned.

"Oh, yes, he's a grand chap, but his partner—well, you'd think his partner was in the business. Larnie's generosity and his interest in artists. Think encouraging fellows like me—and maybe you—(he glanced toward the girl) brown envelope Gail was carrying) "is a waste of money. Held it all never help you, but if you can't think I'm butting in, maybe you can do something. I guess if you wanted to see John S. Larnie, I'm about some art work. I'm Derek Hargreaves. I'm painting some portraits for him."

"That's ever so kind of you to offer, but I don't believe there's anything you can do," Gail answered. After all, this man was a stranger, and Miss Cranston had advised her to beware of strangers, especially in a city like New York.

"Well, if that's how you feel, all right," Derek pulled his hat over his eyes twinkling. "I thought perhaps you were a stranger and a word from someone who knows the ropes might save you time and tears."

For a moment Gail raised her eyes to Derek's. He was so tall. Six feet two in his sox he would have told you. "Well, if you're sure it won't be too much bother, I guess you can help me."

"That's the spirit! I know a little place just around the corner. Let's go there and talk things over. It won't be busy yet. We're early. Later you almost have to fight for a table!"

WALKING along the short block, Gail told her companion about the prize she had won and her hopes to become a designer.

"Congratulations!" he cried. "Larnie's a mighty good judge. Even though he generally has a jury of three or four fashion authorities—editors of swanky magazines—he always has the final say, and he's never picked a failure yet. So there, I guess I'm talking to a famous designer! Well, here we are."

Walking down two steps they entered the basement of a brownstone house. With a gay nod to

"Oh, but I can't have a stranger paying for my first lunch in New York!" Gail told him.

The waitress who was dressed as a shepherdess Derek led the way to a corner table. "Now," he said, handing Gail the menu, "what do you want?"

"Oh, I'm really not hungry," she answered.

"I haven't eaten yet, so you might as well have something and keep me company. Besides, I think you're going to have a busy afternoon. They have delicious Cornish pasties here. Let me order one for you."

"All right then," Gail answered. "Now, while she's getting our order," said Derek, as the waitress headed toward the kitchen. "Let's talk things over. I suppose the first thing you want is a job."

"Yes, I guess a job's what I want. Of course later I'll have 'Here I am, starting to tell you all my dreams when I hardly know you.'"

"That's O. K. We're both interested in the same things. While I'm doing portraits now, I'll tell you a secret of my deep, dark past. I earned enough to study with Loeffler by doing fashion drawings! Lord, how I hate them!"

GAIL smiled. "I'm not so keen either on regular fashion sketches—those black and whites for newspapers! It's designing gorgeous clothes for young girls that I love."

"Say, that's good, for youth's ruling the world these days. There's lots of competition, though. I know two or three youngsters who are making names for themselves, but there's always room at the top, and I guess that's where you're going."

And so they talked. When the waitress brought the check Gail opened her handbag.

"Now, nothing like that," protested Derek.

"Oh, but I can't have a stranger paying for my first lunch in New York."

"Surely you don't consider me a stranger now?" Derek looked steadfastly across at the girl.

Again the color rose in Gail's cheeks. "Yes, but a very nice

one. Maybe he'll be a friend some day."

"That's better. Now, a toast to our friendship."

Gail raised her glass, and as her gaze met Derek's above the rim of the glass she felt strangely thrilled.

As they reached the door, Derek said, "I think you'll stand a chance with Madame Lizette. She's always making changes, but remember, while she's got a wonderful reputation among her customers, I've no idea what she's like to work for. Still, even if she is a temperamental old piece you'll get experience. It would be better than a wholesale house."

"Well, thanks for all your advice. You've been wonderful, and I'll surely let you know how I make out."

"Fine, and here's luck to you," called Derek, helping Gail on to a Fifth avenue bus.

WHAT next, Miss Carolle! Madame Lizette wrung her plump white hands.

The tall, slight woman who attended to the business details of Madame Lizette's gown shop in the upper fifties, swung round on her swivel chair in the tiny, rather poorly-lighted room that Madame designated as her office.

"What am I to do, Miss Carolle! My wonderful designer leaves me flat! Flies to California this morning because a movie magnate wants him to create some clothes for a new picture. And not a thank you, Miss Carolle, to me, for all I have done for him. . . . Can't you say something?" shrilled Madame, as tears rangled themselves on her painted eyelashes.

"We can advertise. There are always designers looking for work."

"Yes, yes—always plenty of designers, but not for Madame Lizette. Will you never learn? We must have something—what you call it?—descriptive?" She paced the floor like a caged hyena.

There was a knock at the door. "Who's there?" cried Madame, her beady, brown eyes eager.

"Mrs. Travers wants to see you about her cloth of gold evening gown," announced a very tall young saleswoman.

"Mrs. Travers!" Instantly Miss Carolle smiled. "Yes, yes! I will be there at once." Snatching a compact from her desk, she quickly rouged her cheeks, accentuating the high bones that told of her Slavic ancestry.

"Do you want me to get in touch with some of those people?" Miss Carolle indicated the file before her.

"Prepare an ad. Maybe we find some one that way."

"I'll have to send it right away if you want it in tomorrow's paper."

"Tch! I want it in the trade paper. That is where you find people like I want. Get it ready. I will look at it later." All smiles, Madame went to the salon. Mrs. Travers was worth a fortune to her.

Miss Carolle turned to the typewriter, a look of resignation in her pale blue eyes. Madame was impossible, and yet she had spent 19 years with her—bullying her, knowing to her, and incidentally handling her affairs in a way that brought Madame Lizette a generous income and a growing reputation for being a very clever designer.

She slipped a sheet of paper into the machine. After all, it would be up to her to decide what to do. It was always like that. She wondered sometimes why she ever consulted Madame, for in the end she settled everything, the eccentric Slav insisting that Miss Carolle's calm, capable judgment was far better than her own.

The door of the office opened, and Clytie, one of the mannequins, announced, "Some one to see you, Miss Carolle."

"Who is it? You know I never see buyers in the afternoon," she answered sharply, without turning her head. "Don't you see I'm busy!"

"She isn't a buyer," declared Clytie, gliding away as Gail Everett stepped into the room.

Electric Sign to Welcome Roosevelt To the Centennial

DALLAS.—A two-ton electric sign will welcome President Franklin D. Roosevelt June 6 when he comes to visit the Texas Centennial.

The "motorgraph" will be used throughout the exposition. It is the largest traveling electric sign in the nation. It cost $22,000 to build, and is 75 by 10 feet in dimension. Letters used on its surface are six feet high.

Other distinguished visitors to Texas' 160th birthday party will include Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York; Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia of New York city; and the two United States senators from New York, Dr. Royal S. Copeland and Robert F. Wagner.

The New York party will arrive in four special trains July 29. After visiting the exposition here, they will be guests at the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial.

The arguments aren't as violent, Seoberger says, as in the old days, "because men generally are a lot better informed on the economics involved," but there are a lot more of them!

"THE ADMIRAL'S JUST DISCOVERED THEY STAY CRISPI"

You are expected to be skeptical. It's hard to believe that a wheat cereal has been discovered that actually retains its crisp crunchiness in milk or cream!

You'll have to try Kellogg's Wheat Krispies. The Kellogg kitchens have found a way to blend rice with whole wheat. The result is a marvelous new cereal. Delicious with milk or cream. Nourishing and easy to digest. Buy a package of Wheat Krispies from your grocer. Enjoy a bowlful for breakfast tomorrow. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

BLENDING for CRISPNESS

"I lost my shirt . . . and found HANES!"

"I could kick myself when I think how I used to shell out for an undershirt . . . Paying fancy prices, because I thought they wouldn't be comfortable—thought they wouldn't wear—unless I threw the bank-roll for a terrific loss. But like a lot of others, I lost my shirt in the late depression. And that's how I found Hanes. I had to cut down expenses, so I started buying HANES for thirty-five and fifty cents apiece. And I want to say—you never had a sweeter shirt on your back! They're light. They're cool. And Hanes knits them with plenty of snap so they bug right up to your skin as comfortable as you'd want. And look how long a Hanes Shirt is. You can tuck it way down in your shorts so it won't creep up at your waist. Sure . . . I lost my shirt. But I've got some sense in my head and some cents in my pocket today!"

total assets of close to $480,000, 600.

The associations approved for federal charter during April include 20 formerly state-chartered institutions with total resources of approximately $20,000,000, and 6 newly organized associations.

Illustrating the growth in private share investment and lending activity of many of these new associations which started from scratch, eight of the new federally chartered associations report assets of more than $1,000,000 each. In New York City and Miami, Fla., two of these institutions have passed the $2,000,000 figure. A federal association in Chicago, chartered in 1933, now reports assets of nearly $2,000,000. New federal savings and loan associations of more than $1,000,000 in resources are located in Los Angeles, Cleveland, New York City, Omaha and Hollywood, Calif.

Investors in all federal associations are protected by insurance of their accounts up to $5,000 each through the federal savings and loan insurance corporation. This protection of individual savings is also available to state-chartered institutions of the thrift and home-financing class which choose to apply for insurance and are approved by the corporation. To date, 207 such associations throughout the country, with resources aggregating $323,000,000, have become insured.

An April 30 report also showed that federal savings and loan associations are leading in the number of institutions requesting and receiving federal investment in their shares, for the purpose of increasing the volume of credit available locally for loans for the construction, purchase and refinancing of homes, from a fund of $300,000.

000 authorized by Congress in 1935. However, other eligible institutions are increasing their applications for such investment, indicating a larger demand for home loans in their areas.

TORONTO, Ont. — Toronto's chorus girls don't think much of English people. Returning from a two-month engagement in a London night club, five young Toronto dancing girls reported that English girls have "large feet" and wear clothes like flour sacks.
