Wisconsin Clears Way for Pleasant Touring

Any motorist who ever has plodded along in second gear waiting for some noisy, lumbering truck to get out of the way and let him go places—and what motorist hasn't had that experience?—is apt to feel like taking up a subscription for a monument to members of the State Public Service Commission of Wisconsin.

For this commission has made a surprising discovery, to wit: that the ordinary citizen is the man who pays for the country's roads and that he therefore is entitled to enjoy them when he goes on a holiday trip.

In line with this discovery, the commission has issued an order barring all heavy trucks from 21 main Wisconsin highways on week-ends and holidays, from Memorial Day to the end of September.

If it were not for the fact that the ordinary American is a game guy when it comes to putting up with nuisances, the force of public opinion would long since have caused similar rules to be put through in every state in the union.

If there is one nuisance in American life today which makes weak men weep and strong men swear, it is the nuisance of the heavy-duty, cross-country truck.

Set out on any kind of motor trip these days and you will learn all about this nuisance before you are 24 hours older.

You come to pleasant, rolling country, and you start to drive up one of those long, gently winding hill roads. The wind is in your face and the green is on the cornfield, and you are happy and at peace with the world—and then you find yourself behind a laboring truck.

The truck is going up the slope at the breath-taking rate of nine miles an hour. Since it is as long as from here to Christmas, you cannot pass it; you can only hang behind, take its fumes and noise and dust, creep along at a horse-and-buggy pace, and meditate on the beauties of the old-fashioned freight train.

You finally get out from behind the thing and proceed. Within five minutes you are behind another, and the game is repeated. You finish the next chapter, at last, and a swaying monster coming the other way hogs the road and nearly puts you in the ditch.

It is useless to blame the driver; as like as not he has been in the cab for 12 hours straight, and is almost asleep from sheer weariness.

As evening draws near, you stop for the night in a charming roadside inn or tourists' home; and all night long your sleep is ruined by the heaven-splitting roar and rumble of trucks passing and repassing under your window.

You proceed, in the morning, over roads torn and bitten by these same trucks; and you can reflect, as you bump along, that you, as a taxpayer, have built the roads which these trucks are ruining for you.

Reflect on this sort of thing long enough and you are apt to conclude that these Wisconsin commissioners have hit on an idea which is worth copying—and enlarging.

Mansion Area of Oklahoma City Sacrificed to Oil

By REX CHANEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
OKLAHOMA CITY, June 2.—The roaring days of Oklahoma City's first oil boom have returned. A forest of derricks hedges in the state capital, governor's mansion and scores of fine homes. The rush for "black gold" started when the Mansion pool, two miles north of the old field, was opened up with sensational production. It was "mudhog versus mansion" in some sections of the new Capitol-Mansion pool. Derricks, roaring steam boilers, heavy pipelines, machinery of every description is being jammed between houses, in back yards, near highways and streets. Yards, once covered with a carpet of green grass, are being gouged and plowed, and scraped up into huge "slush pits."

Oklahoma's oil man governor, E. W. Marland, alarmed as the wells were jammed up against state property, declared a military zone over state lands, and started five wells. The city officials would not permit a vote to include the state lands in the zones. The city council and governor were in a virtual "state of war" for weeks, until on May 12, an election was held, and the zones extended over state lands. Marland's action profited the state $372,000 by a bonus on leases granted to oil companies. Then he turned over the already-unable to maintain it and President Houston furloughed it on April 18, 1837. The mansion area of Oklahoma City field was drilled in 1935. Thousands of wells crept north through the east side of the city. The newly-opened Mansion pool is an extension of the rich oil field, which is heavy with oil. The rich Wilcox sand some 6,000 feet below the surface. Marland visions a state income of $2,000,000 from oil wells in about a year.

Houses are being moved to make room for derricks in some of the best residential sections. Some say that soon will be invaded. Oil drilling will keep oil companies out of that section.

MEET HERE TODAY
GAIL EVERETT, winner of a fine costume design offered by the National Needle Manufacturers Association, comes to New York to meet her admirers. She is introduced by the author of the book—MADAME LIZETTE, proprietor of an exclusive shop. Madame proves to be a very interesting and difficult to work with.

HERB HARGREAVES, young artist, is interested in Gail and offers her a studio apartment. Her sister, ROSEMARY, was her roommate at school.

Mrs. Searles, in Arizona, MARK HAMILTON, long a wanderer, returns to his old home in the South of the Travers Mining Co. Dick suspects the deal is crooked.

HEATHER, who has been the mistress of his niece, Gail, right-ly, HEATHER, Madame Lizette's son, is representing the Travers Mining Co.

Gail goes to spend the weekend at the Searles' home.

guest room. "What a gorgeous view!" she exclaimed, looking at the Sound.

"I thought you'd like it, my dear," Mrs. Searles drew the fluttering net curtains still further aside.

"We're not very formal here. Take your time. There's only the family here tonight. Dick told me he didn't want any other guests," Mrs. Searles smiled significantly as she left the room.

Gail's cheeks grew rosy. She knew Mrs. Searles approved of her friendship with Dick. That it would ripen into a warmer attachment was the wish of every member of the family. Hadn't Rosemary urged her to marry her brother?

Suddenly, as Gail slipped an ornate bracelet on her slender wrist, she recalled a pair of twinkling blue eyes and a lock of dark hair that fell carelessly across a wide forehead. Had she lost her heart to Derek Hargreaves—an artist who could probably never offer his wife anything more than a studio apartment, who'd never know from month to month what his income might be? Yet as Gail walked lightly down the broad, softly-carpeted stairs and past the beautiful antique furniture in the hall, she realized that, without love, even a gorgeous home like this would be a prison.

Dinner was a gay affair. Gail related some of her experiences at Madame's, yet, as she talked, she knew she was giving only one angle of the picture. She did not mention the little meannesses that she had discovered were a vital part of Madame Lizette's character.

PRESENTLY they rose from the table and, as it was now too dark to go outdoors, they played bridge—not too seriously, however.

Ten o'clock was striking when Dick laid down his cards. "We've made game, Gail. Do you want to play another?"

Gail smiled, trying to stifle a yawn. "What do you say, Mrs. Searles?"

"I think we'd better stop. It looks to me as though you need a good rest."

"Oh, I'm not tired, only the minute I get near the sea I'm almost overcome with sleep."

"Let's take a walk, Gail. It's a fine moonlight night. I know you'll like it."

"Oh, Dick," whispered Gail as they sauntered slowly toward a rustic summer house where Mrs. Searles often sat and watched the boats going up and down the Sound, "I feel as though we're in some enchanted spot. Doesn't the moonlight make everything look different?"

Dick drew her close to him, but quickly slipping from his arms. She stooped down and pressed her lips against the velvety petals of a huge, sweet-scented pansy. "I never knew flowers could smell so sweet," she murmured.

"I never pay much attention to flowers. Mother is the gardener in our family, and I guess she keeps old Geddies busy getting all the new varieties she hears about; but, Honey, you were speaking about the moonlight. It hasn't changed you. Don't you love me, sweet—just a little?" He caught her hands in his.

"Of course I do, Dick. I love all your family. I think your dad's adorable and your mother's just too sweet."

"Gail, Gail! That's not what I want to hear. Why must you always bring in the family? When are you going to marry me?"

"But Dick! Gail pushed him gently away from her. "I can't. I don't love you like that. Besides I've my work."

"Oh, hang your work! That's only an excuse."

"Dick!"

"Oh, there, Honey, forgive me. I shouldn't speak like that, but if it's that's coming against us, then—suddenly he stopped. He knew if he raved against her profession, Gail would have still less love for him.

"I'm going in now," she said softly. "Good night!" The gorgeous moonlit garden had become a place of torture for her.

When she reached the Terrace, Dick hurried after her. "Gail, darling, please don't be angry with me," he begged.

"I'm not," she answered.

"Then promise—if you ever change your mind, you'll let me know."

"All right, Dick, I will." She tiptoed quietly into the house.

ONCE more Dick's sleek, shining car drove to the curb before the clubhouse, and Gail stepped to the curb. "Thanks ever so much, Dick, for the lovely week-end."

"We did have lovely weather, didn't we?" Dick replied wryly, reaching for Gail's dressing case.

"There, Dick, I'll easily manage now," Gail stretched out her arm for her luggage. Then, glancing at her companion, she said, in a low voice, "Don't look like that. Maybe some day you'll be glad I didn't take you up. I've a hunch you will."

"Never! You're the only girl I'll ever love. You'll marry me yet!"

Bad Elimination Makes It Easier To Catch a Cold

With the right sort of food and proper exercise, constipation might be rare, but in actual living conditions, how few manage to escape it!

Mr. Clyde Martin, of Ona, Va., recently very aptly wrote that "constipation is the root of a lot of sickness, but if Black-Draught is taken right it will keep down constipation."

"If I let myself get constipated," he explains, "and my system filled with impure matter, I feel bloated, take cold easily, and feel out of sorts in a lot of ways. I will take about two good doses of Black-Draught. It seems to cleanse my whole system and I feel like doing my work."

LAMB, new peas, little new potatoes, hot biscuits, with a bit of mint jelly on the side—that's my idea of a fine late-spring dinner.

Leg of lamb is handy because even the bone may be turned into a basis for broth. Have the butcher take the bone from the joint, then fill the leg with good bread stuffing. This gives you the bone at its best for broth.

To make broth, put bone in a kettle, add one small onion and two teaspoons salt. Add cold water to completely cover and heat slowly to the boiling point. Simmer until stock is reduced from one-third to one-half. Let stand over night or until the fat rises to the top and forms a firm layer. Remove fat and strain out bones and onion. Reheat with 1-4 teaspoon white pepper and tomato. One or two tablespoons serve. Catchup can be added to give a pleasantly pungent flavor.

After filling with stuffing, sew the cut edges of the meat together to hold the stuffing in place and make the joint neat for serving. Rub salt and pepper into the meat and place on the rack of roaster without water. Cover and place in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.).

Remove Outer Membrane

Allow thirty minutes per pound for roasting. Remove all strings when the meat is tender. When the roast is done, take from roaster and remove the rack. Pour off all fat and add two cups of water. Put roast back and simmer over a low fire for a few minutes. Blend two tablespoons lamb fat with 2-2 tablespoons flour. Stir and cook until frothy. Add liquid from pan, stirring vigorously with a wire whisk to keep smooth. Bring to the boiling point and cook until thick and smooth. Serve in a gravy boat.

Most butchers remove the thin membrane skin spotted with fat which covers the flesh of lamb, but it's a good idea to make sure this has been done before cooking. This skin is called the caul and is responsible for the strong taste that has made lamb unpopular with some people.

After the first day, serve the left-over lamb in jelly sauce.

Sliced Lamb in Jelly Sauce

One-half cup currant or apple jelly, 2 tablespoons tomato catsup, pimento-stuffed olives, 4 slices cold roast lamb.

Add catsup to jelly and mix over the fire while melting in a shallow sauce pan. Bring to the boiling point, and add slices of lamb. Reduce heat and simmer below the boiling point for ten minutes. When ready to serve, garnish each slice with slices of stuffed olives and serve very hot. You may like to add two tablespoons sherry to the jelly sauce for special occasions.

Monday's Menu
BREAKFAST: Stewed prunes, cereal, cream, soft cooked eggs, toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON: Vegetable soup, ice-cream rolls, rice custard pudding, milk, tea.
DINNER: Boned leg of lamb, browned new potatoes, gravy, mint jelly, peas in cream, frozen fruit salad, toasted crackers, cheese tray, milk, coffee.

"TWO IN REVOLT" NOTABLE ANIMAL DRAMA

Having the double distinction of being the first film in screen history to feature a dog and a horse, and the first talking feature with a dog hero, "Two in Revolt," the film attraction at the Columbia Theatre, is attracting widespread attention from theatregoers.

The unique team is composed of Lightning, a descendant of the silent screen canine favorite, Strongheart, and Warrior, a pedigreed stallion. The adventures of the two animals, who grow up together on a Montana ranch, furnish what are said to be some of the most amazing scenes ever filmed, a battle with a wolf pack being one of the many dramatic highlights of the film.

Lightning's trainer, Earl Johnson, co-authored "Two in Revolt." John Arledge, Louise Latimer, Moroni Olsen, Harry Jans and others participate in the romantic and dramatic themes which prominently involve the animals. RKO Radio produced.

Life Aboard Auto Trailer Forerunner To City On Wheels

BERKELEY, Cal.—The American city of the future may be composed largely of mobile units erected on wheels instead of foundations, according to William H. Stout, former president of the American Society of Automotive engineers.

Already this metamorphosis has begun he declares, and economic conditions as well as the development of the automobile home are the two factors that assure its steady progress.

Stout points out that a large part of the population of the United States is constantly moving. From the present status of merely families on wheels it will be only a step to cities on wheels, he believes.
