Fear of Spoils Halts Change in Basic Law

The American people have an odd little habit of carrying on earnest public discussions without ever mentioning one of the most potent issues at stake.

If we presently get into an argument over whether we should amend the Constitution, it is a fairly safe bet that one of the primary considerations will be passed over in silence.

This primary consideration is the politician-the kind of politician who rates the adjective "petty". In any discussion of constitutional change, he is the Ethiopian in the woodpile, the joker in the deck. He's on everybody's mind, but nobody brings him into the open.

We are going to hear a good deal about the need of a constitutional amendment that would give the federal government power to do some of the things which the supreme court has recently said that it cannot do. Before he hears any of the arguments on this proposition, the ordinary American tends to be deeply distrustful of it. And the reason for his distrust is the politician.

Lay aside, for the moment, the question whether such amendment is vitally needed, and consider what its first and most obvious effect would be-namely, to increase enormously the power of the federal government. That naturally would mean a vast increase in the number of government job-holders-a permanent, from-now-on increase, ours through rain or shine, through sickness or health, to cherish forever.

Those jobs would be permanent, but the job-holders wouldn't. They would be named by and for politicians, and there would be a housecleaning every time there was a new administration in Washington.

The bulk of them wouldn't be much good. They might know how to carry precinct K in ward 9 for Congressman Whoozis, but what they would know about the administration of coal mines or the handling of farm surpluses you could put in your Aunt Minnie's left eye.

That is the sort of thing that sticks in the average people. As evidence of good faith inquirers American's craw. Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 Miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 Miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pend energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 2 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop, causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Fills, which have been used accessfully by millions of people for ever 10 years. They give happy relie; and will help to flush out the 15 Miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Fills at your druggist.
