MOB FAILS TO LYNCH NINE NEGROES HELD

EL CAMPO, June 18.—An angry mob twice frustrated in its intentions to lynch nine negroes, suspected of slaying death Tip Wiggins, 44, fired a cafe dance hall here today. Firemen extinguished the flames before much damage was done.

Sheriff E. J. Koehl of Wharton, who helped to take the negroes, three of them women, out of danger last night, said one suspect admitted stabbing Simmons, implicating four others.

Charges were not filed because this would force return of the suspects to face trial.

Simmons, who was a part time officer, sought to halt a disturbance at the dance hall early yesterday where about 50 negroes gathered to celebrate payment of the bonus, and was slain.

Bodies of Missing Tourists Sought in Depths of Desert Lake

Seeking the key to a mystery which has defied solution for more than a year, diving operations here are shown in one of the "bottomless lakes" in the desert near Roswell, N. M. Following a tip given to New Mexico police, the search is being made for the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. George Lorus and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heberer of East St. Louis, Ill., who vanished while on a western tour in May, 1935. With the water lighted by a portable plant and a gasoline air compressor on shore, a diver worked in the lake, hunting through the many crevices on the boulder-strewn bottom for trace of the bodies.

FOURTEEN SHOT OR GASSED IN STRIKE WAR

KENT, Ohio, June 18.—Embattled pickets besieging the Black and Decker Tool company plant were ordered today to "cease firing" after a six hour battle in which seven strikers and seven strike breakers in the factory were shot and gassed.

The order was issued by a striker's council as Sheriff E. L. Burr attempted to work out a plan for removing the 40 beleaguered strike breakers from the plant.

The mob of 700 pickets voted behind their barricades of earth and iron to permit the sheriff to remove strikebreakers from the plant. It appeared at the time the National Guards would take charge if the onslaught did not stop.

National Guards workers to remove the strikebreakers from the plant before the 3,000 were augmented by rubber workers from nearby Akron.

YOUTH LEADS POLICE TO SITE OF A MURDER

SAN FRANCISCO, June 18.—Albert Walter, Jr., today lead police to the body of Miss Blanche Cousins, tied to a bed post in her apartment, and calmly told how he killed her because she resisted his advances.

Walter, 28, formerly of New York and Boston, said he attacked Miss Cousins after he choked her. "I don't know if she was dead or alive at the time, but to make sure I knotted one of her silk stockings about her throat, drew it tight and tied it to a bedpost," he confessed.

"I want to plead guilty and get it over as soon as possible," he said.

The slaying occurred after the couple had cocktails and dinner at Miss Cousins' apartment.

Miss Cousins, 24, whose home was in Idaho Falls, Idaho, met Walter on a transcontinental bus two weeks ago.

"The Church" was the subject of Rev. Dossey's message this morning. There was also one addition in this morning's service, bringing the total number of additions to 33.

The Friday morning service has been dedicated to the older people of the church and the community, and special effort is being made to have as many of the older people present for the service as possible.

The subject of the evangelist's sermon tonight is "The Horse Race."

Out of Dirt May Rise The Pure and Ideal

Watching a national political convention in the United States is just about enough to make a confirmed cynic out of the most hopeful of citizens.

A convention is the spot where party loyalties, aspirations, and ideals roll up their shirt sleeves and make their compromises with necessity.

It is the chosen stamping ground of the trimmer, the fixer, and the blatherskite. Watching it, you are tempted to wonder how in the world the republic has ever managed to carry this queer exorcism along with it all these years.

But the cure for the cynicism lies right there, too. For although a great party convention has an underside seamy enough to dismay an archangel...

For if you look back at the long list of men who have occupied the White House at Washington, you cannot help agreeing that, taken as a whole, it is a remarkably high-grade group.

If it contains several men who fell down on the job, it also contains its Lincolns and Cleverlands, its Wilsons and Theodore Roosevelts. All these men were chosen by the same sort of conniving, trading, and crackerbox spellbinding that you see on display in the convention halls of 1936.

The devious back-scratching arrangements that produce a candidate today are not in the least different from those which produced candidates in 1860 and 1912.

Which is just another way of saying that a convention looks messier than it really is.

You hear little sincere talk of high ideals and lofty purposes, at a convention. Instead, you hear that So-and-So has been too outspoken, that Whoozis has alienated this bloc of voters that What's-His-Name will play ball with the old-line bosses, and that Candidate X has made a deal with Candidate Y.

You learn that the famous "smoke-filled room" is a reality, and that the average man is not in politics for his health.

But all that, after all, adds up to very little. What really counts is the fact that somehow, year after year, these conventions do manage to present us with candidates who express the varying hopes and longings of the people pretty faithfully; with candidates who, entering the White House, turn out to be the kind of men who can meet the duties and responsibilities of that difficult post without flinching.

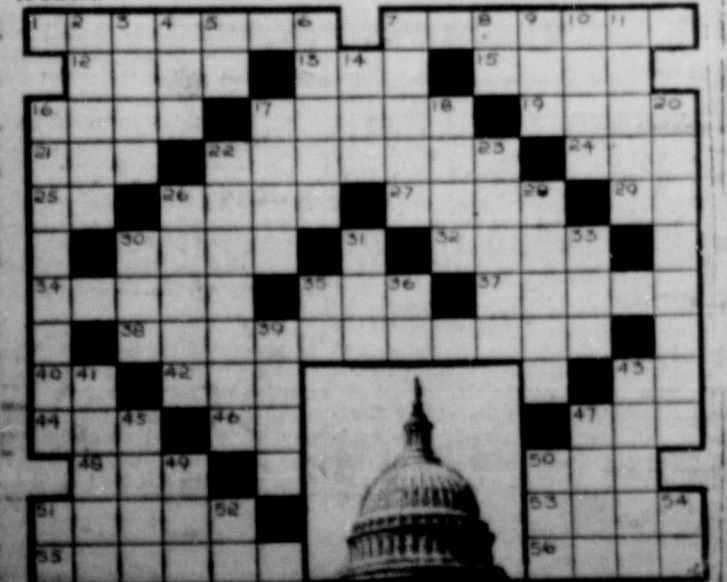

Our nominating machinery, like all human institutions, is sadly imperfect. But it serves us a great deal better than a study of its imperfections would lead us to expect.

CHAPTER 1A

"HALF an hour later a slim girl in a rust frock and cape, headed with dark fur, was ushered into Wenda Andrews' room. Wenda, standing before the mirror, in a green tulle frock that resembled the white tulle one that was spread out on Marcia's bed, gave an audible gasp.

"Marcia, what in the world are you doing running around foot-loose?" As the rust-clad figure sank wearily into a chair, she grew more puzzled. "Marcia, honey, have you forgotten that this is your wedding night? The handsome, debonaire Robert is giving you his name."

Marcia motioned to the green frock. "Take it off, Wenda. You won't be wearing it. There isn't going to be a wedding."

"Are you crazy? Is it a quarrel?"

"No, we'll still be concerned about each other's health when we meet. We just aren't marrying each other. Bob's love is parked around in too many places. But he was going to hang his hat in my house. That's all."

Wenda glanced at the cloisonne clock on the dressing table and pressed a button. "Quick, hot tea, lots of it," she told the maid. "Tell Carl to have the car ready." Then she turned back to Marcia and smiled. "Want to tell me about it?"

Marcia nodded. She made the story brief but complete. "—so the wedding's off and you have to go over to the house and tell my family. Tell them I'll call tomorrow. I can't go back."

"Men are queer," Wenda mused. "Drink your tea, Marcia. I'll warm you up. Men do utterly inconceivable things that look inconceivable. They all like to think they are Don Juans. Maybe he was being dramatic. Your wedding's planned and he chose you. That's something."

"Something—but not everything. That's why I'm not going on, Wenda. He might not be willing to leave his old girls behind him."

"Maybe you're right—but I'm not sure." Wenda looked down at the green swirls of tulle. "I've always wanted to be a maid of honor. I've qualified as a bridesmaid seven times, but that's as near to the altar as I can get. Never an advanced position! But if the wedding's off—what shall I tell your mother?" She reached for a long white cape, thought again, and began to unfasten her frock.

"That'll get in touch with her tomorrow, and I'm sorry."

"You'll wait here for me? Promise?"

"I'll wait. And don't take off your dress. Go as you are."

Wenda put her arms around the girl in the chair. "Cry, Marcia. It will help." Then she was gone.

FOR the second time that afternoon Marcia was alone in a room that carried the touches of a wedding preparation. Wenda had forgotten her flowers, and the old-fashioned nosegay, fastened with silver foil and looped with green tulle, lay on the dressing table by the slender jeweled vanity case that had been the bride's gift.

The hands of the clock moved slowly. The house grew quiet. Another car pulled out. Evidently Marcia's parents had started to the wedding by now. There was nothing in the world but time—hours and days and months and years, and there was nothing to do with them any more. Nothing to do with them! Marcia jumped up swiftly and scribbled a note at the desk.

"Wenda darling, you're a dear and I tried to wait. The jitters have me—pre-nuptial jitters. I have my car downstairs and I'm going to drive. I'll telephone you tomorrow. Forgive me, Wenda, and thank you for everything."

She climbed into the roadster, stepped on the accelerator, and began to go faster and faster. She wondered what excuses her mother would make to the wedding guests—maybe she would pretend that her daughter had the measles or appendicitis. Everyone would be polite but no one would believe the story. She might have with wheels and hoops and roller skates. She had taken a ride with him in a painted boat, on the little lake where the sailors took their girls when the boats came in. She must stop being a sentimental idiot! She had better see if her money was in her bag. Her father had given her a roll of bills that morning. "To buy yourself some beads and gloves in Paris," he had said. Yes, here they were. Her hand touched something firm and smooth. Her passport. Two passports. Bob's was with hers.

SUDDENLY her mind began to function. She would go to Europe! She would sail alone! Alone at midnight, in the bridal suite.

"Pier Number 59, North River," she told the driver, one eye on the sapphire-studded watch on her slender wrist. "Hurry! The ship sails at 12!"

"But, lady, why didn't you say so?" the cab driver ejaculated, and suddenly sent the jolting car flying across town.

Marcia sat tense, holding the wrist with the watch, so she could tell the time. Now they had turned into the street along the docks—she could smell the water—could catch the tag ends of the day's odors from the fish markets. Her pier—the lighted ship beyond.

"Maybe we're too late. It's 12," the driver warned her.

Marcia pressed a bill into his hand and ran across the floor to the elevator. There was one passenger on it, a tall young man whose face was browned as though he had been in the sun and wind for a long time.

Up, up, up. Slowly. Oh, why did all elevators that carried people to the floor that was on a level with the gangplank proceed so slowly? It stopped. She got off and began to run. So did the young man. They could hear the waves of laughter and chatter on the pier. Chains were beginning to rattle as they grew nearer to the boat.

"Gangway!" the man called, and reached out a hand to her. Laughing, she took it, and followed his broad shoulders as he cleared a passage through the crowd. They were on the gangplank. They were on the ship!

"Your baggage, Madame, Monsieur?" a steward asked.

"It came on earlier," Marcia answered. She turned to thank the young man with the tanned face, but he had tipped his hat and disappeared.

She gave the number of her cabin to an attendant. "Monsieur?" His eyes followed the man.

"I'm alone," Marcia answered, and quite suddenly a wave of longing engulfed her—a wave so fierce that it swept away all her resolutions, dissolved her courage, tore down her pride. She wanted Bob! Wanted him any way she could get him! And she had run away from him! She turned back to the gangplank. It was gone. The ship was moving slowly, quietly.

Specialist Explains Key to Capabilities

PHILADELPHIA.—The intellectual capabilities of the human brain cannot be determined by looking at it, according to Dr. Wistar Green man, director of the Wistar Institute.

British Expand Travel Service

LONDON.—British railroads have spent in excess of $5,000,000 during the past three months to extend and accelerate facilities for summer travel business.

Equipment which has been overhauled includes 20,165 steam locomotives, 1,567 electric locomotives, and 100 steam and 14 oil rail cars.

Railroads are operating 645 restaurant cars and 52 buffet cars. British railroads have 77 hotels. There are 6,754 passenger stations along the 19,267 miles of British lines.

The penny-a-mile, third-class return ticket introduced last year are being retained with extended privileges. Other cheap fares and excursions are to be offered.

Ship Service Offered

British railroads also operate 140 steamships with a total gross tonnage of 182,571 between Great Britain and the Continent, Irish Free State, Northern Ireland, Channel Islands, Western Isles of Scotland and Isle of Wight.

Regular routes operated by Railway Air Service will be increased to 62, compared with 42 last year. The 500,000 miles flown last season are expected to be doubled this year.

Services are confined entirely to the British Isles.

New routes, on which large luxury air lines will be used, link Interfermes, Perth and Glasgow; Glasgow and the Isle of Man; Belfast and the Isle of Man; Bristol and Cardiff; Leeds and Bradford; and the Isle of Wight and Brighton.

Fast Schedules Arranged

Flying times will be reduced, making it possible to travel by air from Manchester to the Isle of Man in 50 minutes and from Liverpool to the Isle of Man in 45 minutes.

Railway Air Service offer tickets which permit the traveler to make the entire journey by air, or to use part air and part rail and steamer. Passengers holding a return railroad ticket may pay a slight supplement and travel by air. Slight discounts off the air fare are allowed railroad season-ticket holders on routes which also have airplane services.

Combined surface and air travel facilities are being offered at lower rates this season.

Most of the shipments are from the Imperial Valley and Yuma. Additional train crews have been required to handle the shipments.

'Landon Speaking; I Advise—'

The voice of Gov. Alfred M. Landon, spanning the 750 miles between Topeka and Cleveland, caused some delay in final approval of the Republican national platform, as the builders were about to call their work completed. Finding Labor for Building Capitol Was a Problem

By United Press
AUSTIN—Fifty years ago when the state capitol was being built, the problem was not how to give most employment but how to find labor to do the job.

The conditions that then existed are related by Gus Birker, Luling, in a letter to State Comptroller George H. Sheppard. Birker, now 75, says he was a rock mason working for Gus Wilke who held a sub-contract from the guilding syndicate.

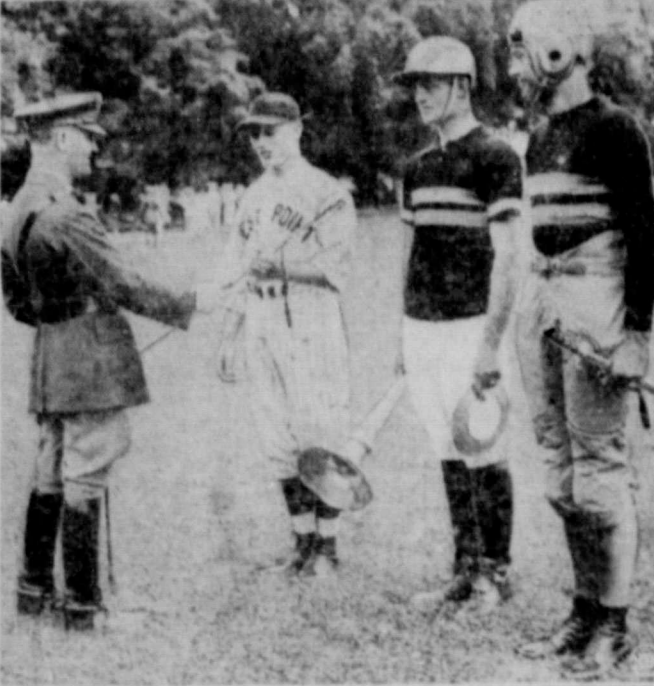

When the contractors found they could not quarry material in time to finish the building in five years with available labor in the state, they applied to the state for the service of 500 convicts. The convicts were used in the granite quarry at Burnet and the limestone quarry at Oatmanville, now called Oakville, Birker writes.

There also was difficulty in obtaining enough skilled workmen. Rock masons were brought from Chicago and granite cutters from Scotland. When the contractor imported them, the state fined him $50,000, Birker said.

He relates that Swedes, Irishmen, Frenchmen, Germans and Italians worked on the job. Most of the iron workers came from Berlin, Germany. Carpenters came from all parts of the United States.

Thirteen large derricks were used for hoisting material. Guy-wires for the hoist to supply material to the home builders "ran a mile out of town when the boom was at the highest point," Birker recalls.

Decorating Army's Athletic Heroes

Sabres and trophies were bestowed on the heroes of West Point's athletic wars at the annual athletic review. Major General William D. Connors presents Cadet W. R. Grohs of St. Paul a sabre designating him the best all-around athlete; Cadet H. M. Estes, Jr., of Washington, D. C., holds the Howze polo trophy; and Cadet W. R. Shuler of El Monte, Calif., clutches the Edgerton sabre as outgoing football captain.

Female of Species Not Only Deadlier But Also Stronger

DALLAS.—The female of the species is not only more deadly than the male but is the stronger and sturdier, Dr. H. V. Halladay, trainer of athletes and professor of anatomy at Des Moines (Iowa) College of Osteopathy, said at a recent convention in Dallas.

"Women do not bruise as easily as men and have much greater recuperative powers," said Dr. Halladay, who is in charge of training Drake University and Des Moines high school athletes.

"A coating of fat under the skin not only gives women curves but gives them a protection from muscle bruises that proud males do not have," he said.

Attributes possessed by women that enable them to survive childbirths without ill effects probably give them an ability to recuperate from exhaustion and injuries more quickly than men, he added.

Dr. Halladay said he had seen women athletes return to competition the day after suffering injuries that would have kept men out for a week.

Men have greater muscular strength, he noted, but women undoubtedly possess the greater ability to absorb punishment.

SOVIET WOMEN SNIPERS

MOSCOW.—Soviet women are prepared to go out to battle "elbow to elbow" with their husbands and sons in the event of war. In Moscow alone, there are 17,500 women sharpshooters and 370 first-class women snipers, Olga Yakovlev, "ace" woman paratrooper of the U. S. S. R., told the Congress of Engineers and Technicians Wives.

The Breckenridge National Guards defeated the Robinson Grocery team at Municipal Field Wednesday night by a score of 7 to 6 in the opening game, after which Lone Star Gasoline team of Ranger defeated the Piggy Wiggly team from Eastland by a score of 8 to 7.

Pellizzari, National Guard pitcher, struck out 16 of the Grocery batters, though he was a little wild, walking eight men. Only seven hits were made off his delivery.

Piggy Wiggly made four costly errors that accounted for part of the Lone Star scores in the night-cap.

Humane Snare Made To Replace Traps

By United Press
PHILADELPHIA—A flat chain trap which will replace the vicious steel-jawed type has been invented by Vernon Bailey, veteran naturalist and employe of the U. S. Biological Survey.

The trap has been designed in three sizes and will catch anything from a barn owl to a grizzly bear without hurting its prey according to Bailey. To support his claims before an audience, Bailey placed his finger in the trap.

Local WPA Heads To Hear Program

Announcement was made today that all WPA supervisors and other officials of the federal work group, would gather at the Recreation Building Saturday afternoon for the purpose of listening to a 30-minute broadcast concerning the program.

The Ranger Furniture Exchange will install a radio in the building in order that all the WPA officials might gather and listen in on the program.

Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator; Governor Earle of Pennsylvania; Mayor Rossi of San Francisco; and Aubrey Williams, director of the National Youth Administration, will be among the speakers.

It was pointed out that it was not compulsory that all WPA officials of this section gather at the Recreation Building, as they could listen to the program at their homes, if they had radios, but the arrangements were made so that all might listen in.
