'Hard Luck' Tattoo Traps Suspect

A detective stopped Gail Gilmore (above) on the steps of a Baltimore lodging house and asked for a match. By its light he saw the letters H-A-R-D-L-U-C-K tattooed on the lodger's knuckles. That was Gilmore's hard luck, for he was arrested and brought to State Island, New York, for questioning about the murder of his fishing partner, William Moritz.

BLANKS GIVEN TO EMPLOYERS UNDER AID ACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—More than 240,000 postmen set out from postoffices today to inaugurate the federal social security program.

Before nightfall they will have delivered 3,500,000 pieces of federal mail. The distribution job today will stand as a record for only a day, even though it is greater than last spring's payment of the federal bonus to 1,900,000 soldiers in one day.

On Nov. 24 the same carriers will set out again with 50,000,000 more social security blanks, this time one for every employe federal census officials estimate will come under the new law's provisions.

About 26,000,000 employes will be eligible to start paying taxes on their wages Jan. 1, 1937.

At the same time the Government will start collecting a two per cent tax, shared half by employe and half by employer.

The levy will increase to six per cent by 1949.

Green Challenges Labor to Settle Internal Warfare

TAMPA, Florida, Nov. 16—President William Green challenged the American Federation of Labor's 56th annual convention to settle its internal warfare on the "basis of facts" and to lead the nation's workers in a "strong campaign toward a higher wage level and better living conditions."

"Labor stands at the threshold of a new day," Green told 500 delegates assembled to decide whether an end to the John L. Lewis rebellion shall be sought by conciliatory methods or by ruthless warfare.

Green declared the determination of union leaders to battle the Lewis uprising when he said the Federation would never "abandon our economic philosophy to follow untried experimentation."

SUPREME BID IS MADE FOR MADRID TODAY

The nationalists were making a supreme bid, today, for the capture of Madrid.

The fate of the capital was in doubt. The government defenders resisted with a fury that matched that of the attack and apparently authentic advisers discounted nationalists' claims of a great victory.

An uncensored telephone conversation with a neutral source in Madrid indicated the nationalists were not in the city.

Nevertheless news from Madrid showed the defenders were hard pressed. If the nationalists were not actually in the city they were driving ahead in all outskirts along the western edge.

United Press dispatches showed the fighting was hot and heavy. Aerial bombs, artillery, machine guns, rifles and hand grenades kept up a bombardment.

Aerial attacks which caused 150 deaths and injured Sunday continued today. The extent of the new casualties was not known.

Ranger Police Chief Believes That Times Are Better Because The City Jail Has Few Sleepers

Chief of Police Jim Ingram of Ranger believes that prosperity is returning and that there are fewer unemployed now than at any time since 1929. He bases his belief on the number of "sleepers" who occupy the Ranger city jail overnight each month. These "sleepers" are unemployed men and boys who are traveling around the country seeking work and who have no money and no place to sleep, and since the city jail offers them a free "flop" they take advantage of the opportunity of obtaining free lodging for one night.

"There are fewer sleepers now than at any time since 1929," Chief Ingram said this morning in discussing his free lodgers. "Of course, there are a number of hoboes who sleep in jails during the winter, even when times are good, and we had about as many back in 1929 when times were good as we have now, but the monthly average is smaller now than in the past five or six years."

Chief Ingram stated that the average number of weekly customers now was about 10, or about 40 to 50 per month, while in 1933 the average was about 100 a week or 400 a month.

Twelve-Grade Public School Gets Approval of Department After Ten Years of Experiment by Port Arthur

PORT ARTHUR—Pioneering in Texas with the 12-grade public school system, Port Arthur has been severely criticized from an athletic standpoint, the claim being that Port Arthur's 12-grade boys held an advantage over 11-grade boys.

Now comes the state department of education to vote approval of the 12-grade plan as used at Port Arthur since 1926, and to suggest that the system be adopted in all high schools in Texas.

The first half of the department's tentative 12-grade course of study, contained in a 559-page bulletin, has been received in Port Arthur by G. M. Sims, superintendent of schools. The second half is now in preparation, Mr. Sims was informed. The bulletin is given statewide distribution by the state department.

The new bulletin is titled "Tentative Course of Study for Years Six Through Six," while for the 11-grade setup the bulletin was titled "Course of Study for Years One Through Five."

Materials for the new course of study are divided into four levels, identical to the setup in Port Arthur. Level one includes years one, two and three; level two, years four, five and six; level three, seven, eight and nine; and level four, 10, 11 and 12.

"The entire contents of the course of study, with the exception of that dealing with reading abilities, is classified under these four levels," the bulletin reads.

What of some facts and figures which obtain under the 12-grade plan?

The per capita cost of instruction and tax assessments have been lower in Port Arthur than in a number of 11-grade cities of similar size. Mr. Sims offered the following record as proof:

In 1932-33, Port Arthur ranked fifth with a per capita cost of $45.43, as compared with Corpus Christi, which ranked first with a low of $36; Wichita Falls, second, $38.20; Texarkana, third, $39.52; and San Angelo, fourth, $42.80. Others ranked as follows: Austin, sixth, $45.70; Amarillo, seventh, $47.65; Waco, eighth, $53.46; Beaumont, ninth, $53.60; and Galveston, tenth, $56.31.

In 1933-34 Port Arthur with its 12-grade system, was lowest with a per capita average of $29.35. Beaumont was second with an average of $35, and Galveston tenth, $52.19. In 1934-35, Port Arthur was fourth with an average

Topsy-Turvy Marriages Are Tragic, Not Funny.

It sounded like a joke, when a Los Angeles husband sued his wife for a divorce, asked for alimony, and told of an "inside-out" marriage in which the man did the housework while the woman earned the living.

For nearly seven years this man has been employed only periodically. For the last year and a half failing health has kept him at home. His wife, meanwhile, had a good job teaching school; so he became cook, bottle-washer, and housekeeper, while she acted as breadwinner.

One of the clauses in his divorce suit complains that she criticized his housekeeping, refused to take him to places of amusement and got angry because he failed to darn and mend her clothing.

All this, in our careless conception of humor, adds up to a good joke. A vaudeville comedian or a radio wisecracker could have a good deal of fun with it.

But underneath the surface it is anything but funny; and it reflects the kind of tragedy that must have been all too common in the depression years.

We have gone a long way from the old-fashioned conception that woman's place is in the home and nowhere else. Many and many a family has been held together during the hard depression years only by the fact that the wife managed to get or keep a job when the husband couldn't.

But any such arrangement, no matter how necessary it may be, puts a terrific strain on both parties involved. That it leads occasionally to the divorce court is not surprising.

The wife's position, first of all, is unnatural. The responsibility of keeping the family in funds, of facing the worries, the competition, and the rough breaks of a business career, is hers instead of her husband's.

She is compelled to fill a role for which training and tradition do not in the least prepare her. If, now and then, all this makes her irritable, too critical, and generally ill-tempered, who can wonder at it?

And if it is a hard role for the wife to fill how much harder is the lot of the stay-at-home husband! The whole arrangement must constantly make him feel a dismal failure. Instead of being the family's protector, he is a sort of fifth wheel.

He cannot help feeling that washing dishes, getting meals, and keeping the house in order is a sorry excuse of a job for a grown man. Beginning by despising himself, he is quite likely to wind up by despising everyone connected with the arrangement.

All in all, it is a set up made to order for the production of unhappiness. It speaks volumes for the patience, the self-control, and the good sense of the average American that in so many homes such an arrangement has been carried through the depression years without causing an explosion.

No, there's nothing funny about that Los Angeles story. It is just one more glimpse at the way economic collapse can destroy human happiness.

Years of Mourning Is Termed Proper

MONTREAL. — The Superior Court here has set the proper period of mourning for a widow at one year. Justice Forest handed down the decision in a case in which Rosa L'Heureux, widow of the late Lucien Carmel, wealthy merchant, sought to force executors of the estate to advance her $850 to pay for her widow's weeds.

"Turnip" Platform Elected One Judge

KIRBYVILLE, Texas — During the heat of the recent political campaign, N. F. Belk, 87, recalled how he was elected Jasper county judge in 1890 on a "turnip" platform. The courthouse square had been plowed for leveling purposes and Belk planted turnip seed. "They came up, too," he recalled, "and farmers—even from the country—and housewives of Jasper, came to the square to gather the knee-high turnips."

Twelve-Grade Public School

Among the 10 schools Port Arthur in 1935-36 was second lowest in tax rates with its assessment of 65 cents on the $100. Only school lower was Austin, with 60 cents, but the city of Austin pays for the schools' bonds while the local school district pays for its own bonds.

As compared with 11.0 per cent of 12-graders. Additional figures, as published in the year book of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, shows that the trend is undeniably moving toward the 12-grade system. In the most recent issue it was revealed that 40 states of the union use the 12-grade system exclusively; seven states mixed, with some 12-grade and some 11-grade schools; and that Louisiana is the only state which is exclusively 11-grade.

In the seven mixed states, the movement each year is more toward the 12-grade plan. There are only three 12-grade systems in Texas at present, Port Arthur, Freeport and a Catholic school at El Paso, but if the recommendation of the state department of education is heeded, more Texas schools may be expected to fall in line in the near future, local officials believe.

An impartial committee named by the Texas Interscholastic league ruled early in 1936 that Port Arthur's athletic teams did not hold an undue advantage in age over teams of 11-grade schools. Figures in Superintendent Sims' office show that Port Arthur was No. 26 in a list of 100 Texas high schools in the matter of weight and age of first string football teams. In other words, Port Arthur's team members were older and larger boys than 25 other school teams, but 74 Texas teams (11-grade schools) had older and larger boys than Port Arthur high's team.

Among advantages seen for youngsters under the local 12-grade system are: 1. Children have a broader knowledge and are thus better equipped to enter upon a college course; 2. Children who have a more complete education than under the 11-grade plan and are better fitted to enter some field of work; 3. Actual reports from hundreds of colleges show that 13.5 per cent of 11-grade high school students fail in college.

Other rankings were as follows: Tex Pac C & O 12 1/2, Und Elliott 84 1/2, Union Carb 92, Un Avn Corp 7, U S Gypsum 112, U S Steel 76.

A. The bridge crosses the river at a point where a town site was laid off in 1838 and was named Montopolis, but which was abandoned as a town when Austin was located as the capitol site in 1839. Montopolis, across the river from the older town of Waterloo on the south side, was surveyed for a town one-half mile square.

HALF-ACRE in EDEN

Marcia lifted the receiver and called a New York number. "I want the first available seat on a plane to Chicago," she said into the transmitter.

BEGIN HERE TODAY MARCIA CANFIELD, daughter of wealthy PHILIP CANFIELD, knows that the neighborhood is buzzing with gossip over the sudden disappearance of FRANK KENDRICK, whose engagement to Marcia has been announced. Since his disappearance, a shortage in Kendrick's business accounts has been discovered. Refusing to let others know how deeply she has been hurt, Marcia goes to the dramatic club try-outs and is given the leading part in the forthcoming play, "DOROTHY OSBORN," which she likes Marcia to give a less important part. Afterward Marcia, her friend HELEN WADDELL, and several others stop at TONY STILLICCI's restaurant. Four men enter and stage a holdup. Tony pu... Marcia did not speak until the Waddells' maid had left coffee on a low table where she and Helen sat before the fireplace. After two months of enduring the knowledge of Frank Kendrick's thefts and disappearance, Helen's news that his whereabouts had been discovered, by mere chance, came as a sudden and unexpected blow, paralyzing coherent thought. An automaton could have added sugar and cream to a cup with less consciousness than did Marcia. She stirred, drank, put down the cup, with a hand become mechanical. Yet her first words to Helen indicated that her confusion was already settling, that she was seeking a channel leading toward a solution of the problem presented. "The first thing that popped into my mind, just now," she said slowly, "was the possibility of amnesia. That's always the pleasant explanation. But I think the embezzlements rule that out. "Frank as a busboy! What does that indicate to you, Helen? Not only that he's short of money—stranded; but that he is living in desperation, feeling himself cut off not only from his old life, but from every manner of his old life. I pity him with all my heart! "For weeks," Marcia continued, looking into the fire, "all of us who knew Frank had been wondering where on earth he could be. Now that he's found, who is clever enough to know what to do about him?" Helen nodded, but was silent. "I MEAN," Marcia said, "that there is a problem of procedure, to say the least. Your information—our information, now—properly belongs to a lot of people. To the people who lost money through him. "We really owe it to all those people to tell them. But, then, what? Should they hold a meeting to decide what to do, since all have an equal interest and therefore equal rights? Somehow, the idea is ridiculous. "Should you and I handle the thing ourselves? Or should we take somebody else or two or three somebody else into our confidence?" But Helen was staring into the fire, as perplexed as Marcia herself. Helen nodded again, the secret, while he makes amends as best he can? MARCIA leaned back in her chair and closed her eyes wearily. Just to think was becoming more and more painful, but she must go on with it. "I'd have a hard time writing down just what I do feel," she said with a half-smile. "Credit what I say or not, but I can't manage to feel that I am the person most concerned or most likely to be hurt. I know the idea behind what you suggest—that because we were engaged I love him, and that because I love him, I would be, perhaps, the chief victim of his returning to face the music. "But—oh, I can't explain it, Helen, except to say that since he went away I haven't been worried over the man I was going to marry; I have been worried over a friend who did something terribly wrong and ran away from it! "The only thing clear in my mind is this: He must come back. He must help repair the damage he caused. He must do it for his own sake, if for no other reason. Frank and I were friends for so long, and he always seemed splendid. What happened to him, what sort of panic he may have got into before he went so completely haywire, I don't know; but things certainly must be maneuvered so that he can get back his self-respect, pay off the losses of people who trusted him. . . . Helen, he is the person most to be considered! And we would be as great cowards as he seems to have been if we let him down now, when he so needs propping up, no matter how the treatment may hurt him. "Do you know," said Helen, "I feel like shaking your hand? You're a good deal of a Spartan. But, since you have demonstrated that you can take it, let me continue in candid vein and remind you of the image you live in. Don't you imagine you'll suffer from the gossip? Heaven only knows how the thing has been kept as secret as has been done. There's no use denying that rumors are going around everywhere, and rumors breed faster and faster. They'd feed on Frank's return, even more than on his absence. And the gossip can't exclude you."

"The gossip has included me already," Marcia reminded her. "It was a bit of a task to face so many people at the Stagecraft Guild-tryouts last night, as a matter of fact. Probably I don't like to be gossiped about any more than anyone else does, but it's all in a lifetime, literally. "Right. And what's to be done?" "After all my talk, I don't know. If you don't mind, I think I'll ask Dad's advice. He's a clever fellow. He'll know what to do and how to do it, if anybody does."

She stood up. "Meanwhile, let's pretend the problem doesn't exist. Shall we go on over to Mrs. Henderson's for our play scripts?"

EARLY in the afternoon Marcia, at home, was called to the telephone. Her father's secretary was on the wire.

"Mr. Canfield had to leave on a matter in Miami. He just had time to catch the plane. He wanted me to tell you that he would call you by long distance, at the first opportunity, and let you know just how long he would be away. A week or 10 days, he thought."

Marcia remained beside the telephone, considering. A week or 10 days! So long a time to delay in Frank's case. Without her father's advice, how could she?

Suddenly she lifted the receiver again and called a New York number.

"I want the first available seat on a plane to Chicago," Marcia said into the transmitter. In 20 minutes she had packed a bag, left orders with the servants, and was in the car, being driven to the station to take the train to New York. With 60 seconds to spare, the chauffeur pulled up alongside the platform and Marcia stepped down. No time to buy a ticket in the station; she would pay on the train. Fifty-five seconds. She started across the platform, the chauffeur following with her bag. Fifty seconds.

"Well, hello, Marcia!" It was Dorothy Osborn. The acid Dorothy, who had commented for the benefit of all at the Stagecraft Guild tryouts, concerning Marcia's romance with Frank Kendrick.

"Forty-five seconds," Helen, Dorothy. "Leaving us?" "For a day or so." Forty seconds. "Where you going?" "Oh—Schenectady."

"Oh! Didn't know you knew anybody there?" "Didn't you?" In Schenectady? Oh, yes. My aunt—Aunt Priscilla. The one who's out on parole. "Priscilla? Your aunt! My dear—"

"Homicide," said Marcia. "But she didn't know the gun was loaded."

"All aboard!" said a trainman. (To Be Continued)

Errors Reduced In Cancer Data

By United Press CHICAGO—Maude Slye, pathologist, who after 30 years of study developed a theory of genetic characteristics in cancer only 2 per cent in error, has placed her findings before the International Congress for Control of Cancer, which met in Brussels. "If we had records of human beings comparable to those I have kept on my mice, we could stamp out cancer in a generation," she told scientists. She said she based her conclusions on case histories of more than 5,000 mice, from which she developed her theory of incidence and type of cancer. More than 138,000 mice were studied by Miss Slye in her research into the theory of heredity in cancer. Through her experiments she reached the point, she said, where she even can foretell the age at which cancer will appear in her specimens. Her theory of genetic characteristics, following the Mendelian law of heredity, accounts for and predicts such factors as occurrence of cancer in certain parts of the body, susceptibility to external irritation and the type of cancer. A full report of all phases of her research was made in Miss Slye's report to cancer experts. In addition to presenting her theory of cancer, the Chicago woman made a plea for organization of family records much in the manner she used in checking on her mice for the past three decades. "Sweden has made a start in this direction," she said, "but no other country in the world has begun to do so."

A brilliant cast of top radio names, scintillating music, high comedy, gorgeous setting and routines, and an excellent story make "The Big Broadcast" which opened yesterday at the Arcadia Theatre, one of the most delightful and thoroughly amusing bits of movie fare to hit the screen in a long time.

The new edition of Paramount's annual tribute to the air waves finds Jack Benny whose big headache it is to keep George Burns and Gracie Allen, sponsors of an important program, happy.

Bids Are Called For Leases On the Prison Farm Land

HOUSTON—A state board in charge of prison farm land has called for bids on 1,615 acres nearest the Wilkes & Smith No. 2 wildcat well in the Lockridge area of Brazoria county which has just been completed.

Attorney General William McCraw, State Land Commissioner J. H. Walker, and Col. W. A. Padlock, chairman of the Texas prison board, form the leasing board.

Several major oil companies, lacking "protection" acreage in the Lockridge oil field near the well, owned by the Gulf Oil Corporation, were expected to bid strongly for the prison farm land.

The state holds a total of 15,000 acres in the new oil area for use as prison farm land which is less than a mile from the wildcat well to the northwest.

Previous oil tests eliminated other directions from the field as extension possibilities.

Land under the prison board's charge, which yields oil, is located in Fort Bend county. Several small wells in the Blue Ridge field return revenue to the state, Padlock said.
