Folly Blocks Path to Utopian World

Receiving the Cardinal Newman award for 1936, Dr. Alexis Carrel tells an Illinois audience that the power of science may yet enable man to keep his civilization from crumbling into dust.

For science, says this famous scientist, has at last made it possible for man to remake both himself and his intuitions. No longer need he be the slave of blind impulses he cannot understand, or of natural laws whose very existence does not suspect. He can shape his future as he chooses.

If the time ever comes when the race does decide to live by intelligence instead of by habit, prejudice, and emotion, Dr. Carrel unquestionably is one of the seers it will heed. Right at this moment, however, it seems as if the pressing need is less for a scientifically-controlled future than for a present which can be shaped by ordinary common sense.

For the one thing that stands out about the world's present fix is that it is the result of sheer folly.

Here, for instance, we have a world that is sick almost to death as a result of the overwhelming disaster of a world war. The best remedy that occurs to it seems to be a new war on bigger, bloodier, and more destructive scale than the last one.

Here is a world which has taken advantage of the science Dr. Carrel extols in order to increase its capacity to produce the things it needs. Having done so, the world has discovered that it doesn't know how to act in the presence of abundance; and so, within the last few years, we have seen it destroying goods already produced and cutting down on the production of goods that might be produced—while millions of people have suffered from want.

It is a world which endured much agony to get rid of certain irksome depots. The depots eliminated, the people who were relieved of them have turned right around to create new ones, making them more rigid and oppressive than the ones they replaced, and manning them with megalomaniacs who are even more irresponsible than the depots who were fired.

It is a world whose best remedy for a ruinous collapse of international trade is to raise the barriers to such trade higher than ever before; a world which sneers "impractical idealists" at those who talk about the brotherhood of man, and goes ahead with the construction of new bombing fleets; a world which lets the League of Nations die of malnutrition and then inquires plaintively why somebody doesn't do something to ensure world peace.

All you can say about such a state of affairs is that it doesn't come within a thousand miles of making sense.

Dr. Carrel is right in saying that science enables us to remake the world into a fairer and happier place. But are we ever going to rise above our own boneheadedness and start doing it?

Why More Oil Taxes Not Wanted

(Continued from page 1) takes into consideration the entire overhead and investment including dry holes.

Average price per barrel paid in Texas is $1.15.

On a table of average production costs, made by the Petroleum Administrative board survey in 1934, however, the net cost per barrel for producing crude of this district's average production is $1.10.

The survey revealed that on daily production ranging from 0.1 barrel to 3.9 barrels, which would include this district's average, the total operating and overhead cost per barrel is $0.99; the interest on investment per barrel is $0.16; the credit, by-products and sales, increase is $3.05—a net cost of $1.10.

According to the same survey, the cost of producing a barrel of oil in wells making from 24 to 27 barrels daily is $0.71. Prorated wells of the district—averaging 34.2 barrels per day—cost less to produce.

On the average scale, the profit to be realized from the production of one barrel is $0.05. The tax would push the cost of producing the average barrel of oil for this district to $0.95 more than the profit.

The Mid-Continent Oil & Gas association in a recent release reported the increase in Texas levies on oil from 1935 to the projected assessment for 1937—without the addition of more taxes this year.

In 1935 the tax per barrel was 7.6 cents; in 1936 it was 8.2 cents; and in 1937, it would be 8.6 cents.

During 1935, the industry paid in Texas a total assessment of $29,479,644; in 1936, $34,201,196; and for 1937, without an increase in present taxes, will pay $38,932,061. Minus the proposed tax, Texas oil men will pay over $4,000,000 more this year than was paid last year.

MONTANA TO CELEBRATE

Billings, Mont.—Plans are being made under the sponsorship of the Billings Commercial club for a Golden Jubilee Exposition of Montana in August, 1939, to mark the 50th anniversary of the admission of the state into the union.

Texas operator, pointed out at the Breckenridge meeting, the easily recognizable economic waste on the part of the state if it forces the plugging of wells which have not yet yielded their total value in oil. There is, he said, no taxable value in a plugged well.

Thus the argument advanced by the independents of the West Central Texas Oil & Gas association is summed up on two factors: (1) that the proposed tax would force the suspension of operations in many of the stripper well areas of this district, unless owners operate at a loss, and (2) that the plugging of wells which have not been completely exploited of their resources constitute economic and physical waste.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The neutrality law which Congress will pass may close several roadways along which this nation might stumble into the next European war.

But there will be in it no guarantee of peace, such as might lead toward shaving off a little of the 1937-38 budget provision of a billion dollars for the army and navy.

The Pittman bill has more mandatory features than the bill introduced by Chairman McReynolds of the House Foreign Affairs committee, and it is believed probable these added mandatory items will appear in the act as finally approved by both houses.

UNDER the Pittman measure, no arms, ammunition or implements of war may be exported to belligerent nations after a state of war begins to exist.

In the last war the Germans found their troops being killed by American shells when, at the same time, they couldn't get American food because of a blockade. Bitterness arising from a feeling the United States was not being neutral, helped create the German frame of mind which was a factor in bringing us into the war.

In case of a civil war, the President would be authorized to decide whether the situation was dangerous enough, with regard to our neutrality, to declare a munitions embargo.

No American citizens would be permitted to travel on the ships of belligerent nations. (Remember the Lusitania?)

THE Pittman bill gives the President power to list materials, in addition to munitions, which American ships would be prohibited from transporting to any belligerent.

It lays down a drastic "cash and carry" principle by forbidding export of any materials whatever to belligerents unless all ownership and interest therein has been transferred to the foreign purchaser before the materials leave the country.

Loans and credits to belligerents are prohibited.

American vessels are forbidden to transport any arms or ammunition to belligerents, and the President is given power to prevent American ports from being used as supply stations for belligerent ships.

Arming of American merchant vessels would be prohibited. None of this applies to any republic in this hemisphere engaged in war against a non-American state.

THE somewhat milder McReynolds bill differs in that the "cash and carry" principle is left as a discretionary power with the President, instead of being mandatory. It also differs in its omission of the prohibition against arming merchant vessels, in its provision making the ban on American travel by belligerent ships discretionary rather than mandatory, and its inclusion of a ban on solicitation of contributions in this country for belligerent nations.

Neither bill prohibits American ships from carrying non-embargoed supplies into war zones. Neither provides anything which would prevent the building up of a huge war trade with whatever nation controlled the seas.

Dresses to Reach Height of 1929, Economist Says

FORT WORTH.—Dresses are on their way to getting as short as they were in 1929, says Miss Bonnie Enlow, head of the department of home economics at Texas Christian University.

"Soon we'll be able to get a dress out of two yards of materials," she predicts.

"Although girls in my classes vow they'll never wear such short dresses, they will, because the skirts come up so gradually." Miss Enlow's hints for the proper spring and early summer wardrobes of clothes-minded women include:

"Milady's closet must be filled with flimsy materials, to be worn over stiff petticoats, and at least one V-neck costume. The very newest fashion is an apron skirt for day-time wear.

"The wardrobe must have some stripes. Some of the new creations display as many as 12 different colors in stripes.

"The ensemble should be topped with a shiny straw hat, influenced by the English coronation. And there should also be several pairs of pastel colored gabardine slippers.

"A tiny handkerchief, or bunch of flowers, to accent the predominant color of the dress or to match accessories, completes the colorful spring costume."

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

By MARIE BLIZARD

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When DAPHNE BRETT took her younger sister, JENNIFER, under hand in an effort to launch her on a successful career in New York, difficulties immediately arose between the two. Jennifer resented any such interest and promptly defied Daphne.

she planned to sleep with TUCKER AINSLEY, wealthy playboy, and would have had no thought of stopping the affair. And before that, Jennifer had made a play for the affections of LARRY SWIFT, brilliant young architect whom Daphne was in love.

After Daphne had prevented her elopement with Tuck, Jennifer became sulky. For a period of more than three months the sisters scarcely spoke to each other. And then Daphne broke the ice, sending Jennifer on vacation to an exclusive shore resort. And the plan apparently worked, for when Jennifer returned she had lost her old bitterness. It seemed, laughing, she set off her train in New York to tell Daphne that she had met the great theatrical producer, GEORGE HENRIE, who Daphne was thrilled, too, since the theater was her first love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII

"Let me go and tell him. He's waiting in the boat house. Oh, this news will mean more to him than anything else I could possibly tell him."

Jennifer stopped and glanced hastily at the blue-covered papers in her hand.

Daphne, sitting cross-legged on the floor, said, "No! A thousand times no. Look, Jennifer, you're only going to tell him that the boss has changed his mind about firing him. Is he your lover? You aren't going to tell him he's been left a fortune and the word 'Oh' is not in the script. Take that transcendent light out of your eyes. Now come back to the right entrance and do it again."

Jennifer looked dubious for a minute and then did as she was told.

"Much better," Daphne said approvingly. "And you're after perfect in your lines. There's only one little thing when you get to the door, open it with your left hand. Don't make a complete turn with your back to the audience when you open the door."

Jennifer blew out her breath and slipped off her magazine. "Daphne, you're wonderful. 'Headly'—'Headly' was the director of Apple Blossoms, the Herberg production—'asked me where I'd picked up that piece of business with the tea-cup yesterday.'"

"It's fun, isn't it?" Daphne said wistfully.

"Yes, Oh, say Daphne," Jennifer said behind a yawn, while her dark eyes gazed her sister. "Tuck is back. I'm meeting him for cocktails tomorrow."

Daphne felt as though she had stepped through a hole in the ice. "I thought I laid down the law about cocktails!"

"And about Tuck, too, didn't you?" Jennifer said with an unpleasant smile.

"Sometimes I think I'll give up, but listen, Jennifer, I've more influence with Tuck than you have and I'm going to tell him that I don't want him seeing you."

"It wouldn't surprise me a bit if you did," her sister answered. "But if I were you I wouldn't try."

Daphne set her mouth in a line as straight as Jennifer's.

"Let's both go to bed. We're tired and this heat is getting on our nerves. You open in Philadelphia next Monday, don't you?"

Daphne stared into the hot silence of the night, long after Jennifer had gone to sleep, until she convinced herself that Jennifer had only meant to tease her when she had taunted her about Tuck. But since she couldn't be sure that Jennifer really had gotten over Tuck, she was determined to appeal to Tuck once more not to see Jennifer. She'd do it even if she had to pretend that she herself was interested in him.

She made a note to telephone him and ask him to take her for cocktails the following afternoon. Daphne made herself sit still and wondered if her lipstick was a little too red.

"Nice work you've done on the Georgian line."

The Georgian line was the merchandise of a cosmetic house, one of the accounts that Daphne had developed. "Oh, thank you, Mr. Johnstone."

"Hammer and I have been talking over your proposed campaign in department stores and the tour you planned in the presentation. We think it is an excellent idea."

"Every bit just the way you laid it out. With one exception: the company wants you to take the show on tour and manage it."

"But I can't. I have my work here and . . ."

"You'll have your work here when you come back, Miss Brett. This account means a great deal to us. The company has doubled its appropriation in the last year and, if this trip is the success we anticipate, it will be more than doubled next year. Also, in addition to your salary, you are to receive a bonus which will amount considerably since you are to receive a percentage of the sales. Mr. Hammer mentioned $2000 as a bonus . . ."

Two thousand dollars!

"Oh, Mr. Johnstone!" Daphne had risen to her feet and bent over the desk toward him. "Of course, I'll do it! When do we begin?"

She would make all her arrangements for copy and tickets and accommodations in the next three days, he said, and she could expect to be back in New York by the middle of November.

TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS! Two thousand dollars! Yes, please, let me talk to the art department. Mr. Jones are the layouts finished for the Journal ads on the Georgian Creme account? Two thousand dollars in the bank will make it possible for me to marry Larry. Miss Blake will you make out a production order for the Tuesday Blade, 300 lines on two columns? I won't ever have to worry about Jennifer if I know that money is there. Jennifer will do well in the theater but, at best, it is hazardous financially.

At last, Daphne gave up. She simply couldn't think of anything else.

"I have some errands to do, Miss Thornley," she told the telephone operator at 4 o'clock. "If anyone is looking for me, take the message."

Twenty minutes later from a telephone booth in Grand Central she ran up Larry.

"Hi, my gal! Where have you been!" Larry was fairly booming into the telephone. "I've been calling you for the last 10 minutes. I've got exciting news for you."

"But, Larry, you don't even hear what I'm saying. I'm trying to tell you I have exciting news for you. I can't wait to tell . . ."

"No matter what it is, you're going to drop everything when you hear this young lady. It's news!"

Daphne gave up then. "All right, selfish! I'm on my way home now. Come up as soon as you can."

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayo, Austin, Texas.

Q. What was known as the "Butterfield Route" and when was it established?

A. It was an overland mail and express route, established in 1857 between San Antonio and San Diego, California, by John Butterfield and associates. It was also known as the "Old Military Route"

Q. Who drove the first herd of cattle up the Jesse Chisholm Trail and when?

A. Jesse Chisholm marked the trail in the spring of 1865 from Wichita, Kans., to his trading post at the present site of Anadarko, Oklahoma, a distance of 220 miles. Capt. H. Spekes, then past 80 years old, a resident of what is now Bryan county, Oklahoma, took the first herd of cattle up the marked trail in the spring of 1866, to Kansas City.

Q. Who established the first newspaper in Texas, when, and where?

A. Godwin Brown Cotton issued the first publication in Texas that could be called a newspaper, the Texas Gazette, published at San Felipe de Austin, Sept. 25, 1829. It was a four-page weekly, the pages nine and a half by twelve inches, with three columns to the page, the subscription price being $6.00 a year. It was issued somewhat irregularly until July, 1832. Cotton also edited and printed a small pamphlet history of Texas in 1829.

Q. Where is "The Texas Ranger Memorial Park"?

A. It is a 25-acre site (as yet undeveloped) on the east end of Santa Anna Mountain, in Coleman county, which has been selected as the permanent meeting place of the Texas Ex-Ranger association.

Sport Glances . . . . . By Grayson

LEO HOUCK, former great middleweight fighter who now coaches the Penn State boxing team, comes to the defense of college boxing, which was severely criticized several weeks ago when Cadet William Eastman of Virginia Military Institute died after a bout.

"The death of a young man from injuries while participating in a sport naturally brings forth widespread criticism of that sport, whether it's baseball, boxing or football," says Houck. "Injuries and deaths in football during the early stages of the game resulted in a certain hysteria which almost wiped out the sport."

"However, instead of abolishing football entirely, and depriving thousands of young men of healthful exercise, the rule makers set to work and wisely made the game safer and better."

"That's what they ought to do with college boxing. Don't abolish it; just make a few changes in the rules. And," says Houck with emphasis, "see to it that these rules are strictly enforced."

Houck is of the opinion, you see, that the blame for injuries and deaths should be placed on referees and other officials, instead of on the sport.

THE Penn State coach, considered by many the best college instructor in the country, made five suggestions which he hopes will be adopted by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. They are:

Adoption of 12 instead of 10-ounce gloves; prevention of amateur boxers from competing on college teams, unless they enroll in college immediately after high school graduation; disbarment of college boxers who participate in amateur bouts after they have entered school; stop all bouts in which one contestant is hopelessly outclassed; and elimination of all hand bandaging.

A veteran of nearly 200 professional fights, Houck believes in teaching his boys that "to-out-point by skill and speed is more creditable than to win by knock-out." His principal instructions are "keep in shape" and "use your left."

He not only coaches the Penn State varsity—which annually is one of the best in the nation—but Houck also conducts intramural and class tournaments. Many of these boys have never been in the ring before, but Houck sees to it that each has had two weeks' gymnasium work and has been examined by the university physician.

HOUCK is very much in evidence at these tournaments, sitting next to the timekeeper and when one boxer is noticeably tired, he shortens the round.

Houck doesn't agree with some college officials that all boys who boxed in amateur tournaments should be barred from college rings.

"But," says he, "these amateur-professionals" should be barred. "You know the type I mean—the amateurs who get paid so well they never turn professional. They shouldn't be allowed to box with college boys."

The Nittany Lions' coach also disagrees with Maj. Harvey L. Miller, Maryland University coach, who has recommended to Southern Conference authorities that collegians be allowed to use vaseline on their faces, that coaches be permitted to act as seconds and to allow heavier hand bandages.

"None of these things would do any good," says Houck. "And, of course, neither would abolition of the sport. It's good for boys and men to box—for their minds and bodies and hearts."

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

By MARIE BLIZARD

When DAPHNE BRETT took her younger sister, JENNIFER, under hand in an effort to launch her on a successful career in New York, difficulties immediately arose between the two. Jennifer resented any such interest and promptly defied Daphne.

she planned to sleep with TUCKER AINSLEY, wealthy playboy, and would have had no thought of stopping the affair. And before that, Jennifer had made a play for the affections of LARRY SWIFT, brilliant young architect whom Daphne was in love.

After Daphne had prevented her elopement with Tuck, Jennifer became sulky. For a period of more than three months the sisters scarcely spoke to each other. And then Daphne broke the ice, sending Jennifer on vacation to an exclusive shore resort. And the plan apparently worked, for when Jennifer returned she had lost her old bitterness. It seemed, laughing, she set off her train in New York to tell Daphne that she had met the great theatrical producer, GEORGE HENRIE, who Daphne was thrilled, too, since the theater was her first love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII

"Let me go and tell him. He's waiting in the boat house. Oh, this news will mean more to him than anything else I could possibly tell him."

Jennifer stopped and glanced hastily at the blue-covered papers in her hand.

Daphne, sitting cross-legged on the floor, said, "No! A thousand times no. Look, Jennifer, you're only going to tell him that the boss has changed his mind about firing him. Is he your lover? You aren't going to tell him he's been left a fortune and the word 'Oh' is not in the script. Take that transcendent light out of your eyes. Now come back to the right entrance and do it again."

Jennifer looked dubious for a minute and then did as she was told.

"Much better," Daphne said approvingly. "And you're after perfect in your lines. There's only one little thing when you get to the door, open it with your left hand. Don't make a complete turn with your back to the audience when you open the door."

Club Names Mrs. J. B. Houghton Delegate to District Convention: Fifteen members of Child study club No. 2, gathered at the home of Mrs. Onis Littlefield for their recent program carrying the subject, "Health," offered by the leader, Mrs. Bill Barnett.

Talks with connecting thought were given by Mrs. T. L. Dupree, "Community and Family Health" and Mrs. Saule Perlestein. Annual summerround up" was well mentioned in Mrs. Perlestein's talk.

With the opening of business discussion, Mrs. J. B. Houghton, was elected delegate to represent the association at the District meeting at Brownwood the 30 and 31 of this month. Mrs. Z. B. Morgan, will serve as alternate, and a group of members are also planning on attending.

Time was taken for the election of officers for the new term, and Mrs. Morgan will serve as president, Mrs. J. B. Houghton, first vice president, Mrs. J. E. Ogg, second vice president, Mrs. Carl Heinlin, third vice president, Mrs. M. O. Lemmond, secretary, Mrs. H. C. Clark, treasurer, and Mrs. Perlestein, outgoing president, historian.

As a climax to this interesting session the hostess, Mrs. Littlefield, served a dainty refreshment plate of salad, cake and coffee, with favors, miniature Easter bunnies.

Present: Meses. T. L. Dupree, Saule Perlestein, Ross Staton, Z. B. Morgan, Carl Heinlin, Ben Odum, L. E. White, R. H. Snyder, Arliss Carver, J. D. Johnson, J. E. Ogg, Roy McCleskey, O. M. Lemmond, J. B. Houghton and T. J. Powell.

Ranger Piano Pupil Places First at Federated District Event:

Saturday was an important day in the life of a group of Ranger's young piano pupils, who study under the capable direction of Mrs. Weldon Webb. Mrs. Webb, who only a short time ago organized her group and even more recently did the club become Federated, and placed in the Sixth district of Texas Federation of Music clubs supervised by the president of Sixth District, Mrs. Art H. Johnson, of Eastland.

Changes Are Made In Management of Filling Stations

Several changes have been made in the filling station at the corner of North Rusk and Pine Streets, and in the management of the stations.

The Decker Service Station, on the southwest corner, formerly managed by Elmo Decker, is now under the management of Monroe Walker, and is known as the Walker Service Station. Decker is operating a station at Kermit.

Walker stated today that the station would continue to handle Marathon products, as it has for a number of years, and will add Sinclair oils to the lines now handled.

G. C. (Lum) Love, who was manager of the Sinclair Station at the southeast corner of the intersection of the two streets, has moved to the Gulf station on the southeast corner, where he is distributing a full line of Gulf products. No manager, has, as yet been announced for the station he formerly managed.

Paramount Cafe Being Enlarged

Improvements have been made in the Paramount Cafe, with the enlargement of the capacity of the cafe, and a horseshoe counter is to be added to its facilities within the next few days.

The partition between the cafe and the former location of the Singer Sewing Machine Company's showroom has been removed and the cafe remodeled to accommodate a larger number of tables.

The horseshoe counter has arrived and will be installed within the next few days, it was stated today. This will not only allow a larger number of customers at the tables, but will double the seating capacity at the counter, both of which have been crowded at meal time in the past few months.

Country Club and C. of Commerce To Meet Together

Sportsmen Will Help Preserve the Supply of Ducks

NEW YORK—American sportsmen are going up into Canada to help preserve the sport of duck hunting, threatened by the inroads of 'civilization' and drought on the continent's greatest duck-breeding areas.

Wildfowling in 16 states already have organized state committees to carry on the "Ducks Unlimited" program and additional committees are in process of organization in a dozen more, according to the More Game Birds Foundation.

The "Ducks Unlimited" program proposes the restoration and preservation of the last remaining, most important duck breeding grounds in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba—from whence come the bulk of the wild ducks hunted throughout the United States. A non-profit corporation has been chartered for the purpose at Washington and Ottawa.

It is proposed to raise several hundred thousand dollars annually among wildfowling during the next five years. The money is to be used in setting aside and placing under supervision possibly a million acres of waterfowl refuges.

Provincial authorities have offered full cooperation, according to the Foundation, which has underwritten organization expenses of the movement. Four outstanding Canadian businessmen and sportsmen have accepted membership on the non-salaried board of directors, which will also include four representative Americans.

"Until the duck-producing capacity of the settled portion of the Canadian prairie region is vastly and permanently improved, no marked, dependable increase in the duck supply can be expected," the Foundation predicts following a comprehensive survey.

"The settled portion of the prairie region which lies in the United States and in the southern parts of the three prairie provinces, has virtually lost its importance as the once great duck-producing territory."

"Millions of dollars of Federal Government relief funds are being spent to restore water—and with it, wildfowl—in the north-central states. Canada is planning similar water conservation work through its Prairie Farms Rehabilitation Act. Through "Ducks Unlimited" many of these Canadian projects can serve the cause of waterfowl restoration as well."

system under which the project is operated will be explained by the supervisory personnel, which consists of Mrs. Lillian N. Eastland, Myrtle Branton and Miss Helen Coalson.

B.T.U. Plans Banquet For Tuesday Night

The junior, intermediate and senior unions of the Central Baptist B. T. U. are to be in a banquet at the church at 7 p. m. on Tuesday.

The program theme and decorations will carry out the St. Patrick's day motif. The entire group will be led by Roy Moore in some Irish songs.

Several of the members are to make speeches on the Irish contribution to world music, literature and art. The principal speaker of the evening will be Mr. Rupert Ringold of the high school faculty.

A delightful menu has been planned and all B. T. U. members are urged to get in touch with their sponsors as to assignments.

Citizens who are interested in the reorganization of the Ranger Country Club and the installation of grass greens on the course, will be held tonight at the Recreation building. The Chamber of Commerce directors will meet at 7 o'clock, with the entire group meeting at 7:30.

Details of the plan for installation of the greens will be outlined at the meeting and plans for a membership drive completed. The entire board of directors and those interested in the country club have been urged to attend.
