If Apes Invaded Man's World, who'd Know?

Nothing is more tantalizing that a story that is only partly told. It is all very well to use the imagination to fill in the gaps, but there are places where this is not enough. There must be some special punishment reserved in the hereafter for writing men who arouse one's curiosity without satisfying it.

There is, for example, the little story about the monkey who went to the movies.

This story, originating in India, got on the cables the other day and was printed in divers American newspapers. It told how a monkey wandered into a motion picture theatre in Bangalore. He seems to have come in about 20 minutes after the picture started, walking unmolested through the main entrance and taking a seat in the popular-priced section.

He behaved, according to the story, "like any orderly film fan," remaining to the end of the picture and departing with dignity.

Now that is all very well as far as it goes, but it leaves a lot untold. What picture was it, for instance, that drew this adventurous monkey out of the jungle? Was it, by any chance, one of those miraculous things in which Johnny Weissmuller swings gallantly from tree to tree; and if so, did the monkey understand what Johnny was saying, and applaud? Was it one of those penthouse-and-chorus-girl pictures, with a villain who collects etchings and means no good? Or could it have been a gorgeous Hollywood musical, with phalanxed dancing beauties going through their maneuvers with the camera poised directly overhead?

It would be interesting, too, to know how the monkey reacted to the "trailers"-those combinations of adjectives and action which undertake to tell what is going to be shown next week. Is it going too far to say that he would seem to be the ideal audience for such things?

Far more vital than these questions, however, is the effect which an afternoon of movie-going may have on this ape's future. Will it render him dissatisfied with jungle life, infected with a taste for human society? Will he wind up by leading a jungle exodus, so that monkeys as a group take to dropping in on all kinds of human gatherings?

The thought is a shuddery one. A chimpanzee might 3,000 newspapesr in Spanish at costing nearly $500,000,000. wander into one of our more dignified clubs, drop into the University of Texas, said to an easy chair, and go unnoticed for ever so long, mistaken be the most complete collection in Q. And the imagination reels at the thought of a simian invasion of the House of Representatives. What lean to the north? aws might not get passed, before the correspondents wer able to spot the invaders!

It is a thought-provoking business, that of the monkey at the movie. The Indian correspondent really should have told us much more about it.

Electric Refrigeration actually lowers the cost of living

With electric refrigeration, there are three outstanding ways of lowering the cost of living. A glance at the three ways as they are listed below will give you an idea of how it is done and how electric refrigeration pays for itself.

Canned goods serve as an excellent example. When a small can of corn (10 ounces) costs 12 cents, a large can (20 ounces) usually costs but 15

CIRC

2 "Bargain" Purchases of Food Your grocer has special days when he offers "bargain" prices on certain perishable foods. You can take advantage of them and save considerable money by buying a whole week's supply.

3 Elimination of Food Losses

Authorities say that food thrown away in American homes each year because of improper refrigeration would feed a city twice the size of New York. Electric refriger. ation stops most of this waste.

The most charming hostesses are those whose apparently effortless entertaining comes from exact knowledge of just what to do.

Knowing just what to do embraces much - the choice of foods, their proper preparation, their proper serving.

Those who entertain - and don't we all? - will find a wealth of information on these subjects given out by the lecturer who is conducting the School of Cookery under the auspices of this paper. One's family, too, will profit greatly by this information!

The lecturer uses and recommends ADMIRATION COFFEE, of course. This fine, winey coffee has a sparkle and a smoothness that delight the most exacting connoisseurs of that beverage. Admiration is scientifically blended of the world's choicest coffees, roasted just right, and packed to preserve its freshness.

You'll find an Admiration grind to suit your method of making - Dripkut, steel cut and pulverized. You'll also find a price to suit your pocketbook, depending on the type of package - vacuum glass jars, air-tight tin cans or Cellophane-wrapped bags.
