U. S. Wealth Consists of Goods, Not Figures

After spending six years in a frantic effort to attain recovery this nation now seems to be worrying for fear that it may be recovering too fast.

Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve warns that we shall have trouble if prices and wages go on increasing too fast and too far. Secretary Wallace follows suit with a similar warning, and is followed by Secretary Roper.

Secretary Wallace summarizes the danger very neatly: "There is danger from business men, in search of profits, cutting down production to a point that is bad for the general welfare."

"There is danger that labor, in search of higher wages and shorter hours, will restrict production to a point that is bad for the general welfare."

"There is danger of agriculture, in search of higher prices, cutting production to a point that is bad for the general welfare."

"If all three worked together, they would get more and more money for less and less goods."

It would be perilously easy for the nation to step off into this spiral—if, indeed, it has not already done so. And perhaps as good a way as any to fortify ourselves against it would be to remember just what it is that constitutes wealth, from the national standpoint.

The nation can be just as poor in an era of high prices and high wages as in an era of low ones. For it is not the figures on the ledgers that make national prosperity; it is the bulk of the country's production of goods.

It was recognition of this little fact, probably, that explains the early opposition to the NRA and AAA programs.

Everybody realizes that the farmer had to get higher prices. Everybody realized that the business man had to sell his goods at a profit. Everybody realized that if the working man didn't get decent wages, he could not buy the things business man and farmer were producing.

Yet balanced against those facts was the inescapable fact that the nation's wealth consists of the things it produces, and that the way to increase its wealth is to increase its production, not to decrease it. Offhand, one would certainly say that a nation which turns out necessities and luxuries enough to supply 100,000,000 people is considerably wealthier than one which produces enough for only half that number—regardless of price tags.

Just how to regulate those price tags so that the individual producer can prosper and the country as a whole can increase its wealth is a man-sized problem. We have been pecking away at it since 1930, or thereabout, and haven't solved it yet.

But solve it we must, before long, if we are to avoid disaster.

AROUND THE CORNER

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

A. Uvalde, on the Southern Pacific Railroad, about 100 miles west of San Antonio, is noted as one of the largest honey-production sections of the world, for its extensive asphalt fields, and as the home of Vice President John Nance Garner.

Q. To what are most of the forest fires of Texas attributed?

A. Statistics for 1936, which are a fair average for all years, show that careless smokers cause 25 per cent of forest fires; incendiarism 50 per cent; debris burning 11 per cent being attributable to campers, railroads, lumbering operations, lightning, and miscellaneous causes.

Q. What are the heights of perpendicular walls of the Rio Grande

River in the proposed Big Bend International Park?

A. In places these river canyon walls reach a height of 2,000 feet with the river at the bottom in exactly the same position as the Colorado in the cradle of Grand Canyon.

Q. What probably would be the most distinguishing characteristics of the Big Bend International Park as compared with other National Parks in the United States?

A. The fact that it would be in two nations, that it would have varied scenery of kinds not to be found in other parks of this country, and that the mild weather would render it attractive to visitors at all seasons of the year.

Q. Where is the largest rice

Package plant in the world? A. At Beaumont, Texas.

Q. Were elections ever held on Sunday in Texas? A. Prior to independence all elections in Texas were held on Sundays.

Songs Texans Sing
Know the songs that Texans sing — songs of the Texas ranches, the Texas trails, the Texas firebirds, the state song, the University song, the song, "Will You Come to the Bower?" that inspired the heroes of San Jacinto, negro spirituals.

The TEXAS SONG BOOK contains 32 pages of specially selected songs for Texas people, Texas homes, Texas schools, all chosen by a committee of Texas musicians as popular songs of the state that all should know. Mailed postpaid for only 25 cents.

Will H. Mayes, 2615 Salado Street, Austin, Texas.

I enclose 25 cents in coin securely wrapped, for a copy of the "Centennial Song Book."

TRAILER ADVENTURE

By Ned Jones

© 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MARTHA BRITTAIN and her husband, Jack Speddon, are on a vacation trip to the Alameda Trailers company to travel on the coast, enjoying the new life, the fresh air, the sun and the sea. Their suspicions are raised when they see a man in a dark suit and hat, who appears to be a stranger, enter the trailer company. They follow him to their apartment and find him in the act of stealing a suitcase. He is seen to enter the trailer company and they follow him to the trailer. They find him in the trailer and they are surprised to find that he is GERRY NEAL, a man they have met before.

you were near the trailer when Sloan was there?"

"I was in the trailer."

Her blood chilled at his reply. Was Neal a madman, too? "No," you couldn't have been."

"I was, though," Neal insisted. "Would you like to have me show you how it was possible?" He released her wrist. "I wouldn't go for your gun, if I were you, until you've made quite sure I'm not a friend."

was working with Speddon, was even now attempting to throw her off the track. But what did Speddon want with Betty? The Haynes family was not wealthy, so she could not be held for any appreciable ransom. The only other alternative filled Martha's head with a cold fright. "Will you go to San Francisco suddenly with me to meet Betty?" she asked suddenly.

"Of course."

Martha's heart leaped. If she could keep him with her, pretend to fall in with him, there might still be a chance to get him into the hands of the police. Perhaps in the crowded Palace Hotel, when she found Betty's wire had been a hoax, she could have Gerry Neal arrested.

GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VII

MARTHA'S first thought was to get the revolver in the car and Neal over to the Monterey. Quickly she turned, but she could reach the door before she had caught her breath.

"What are you going to do?"

Martha faced him angrily. "I'm not to see that you're put behind bars!"

"What's your?"

"You're something to do with my disappearance. You and Sloan are in it together." She vainly tried to release herself. "If you don't let me go, I'm going to scream."

Neal smiled. "Don't make me have to cover your mouth."

Martha faced him, her brain trying to hit upon some way to outwit him. There was a soul in sight, and the nearest dwelling was more than a mile away. "Please," she pleaded, "let me go, and tell me how and where."

She sent a wire to the hotel in San Francisco. Will you meet me at the hotel in San Francisco. Will you meet me at the hotel in San Francisco. Will you meet me at the hotel in San Francisco.

HE opened the door of the trailer and switched on the light. He pointed at the ceiling. To Martha's astonishment a wide rectangular hatch was folded down, revealing a sizeable space between the ceiling and the actual top of the trailer.

She looked at Neal. "But how could you have been up there?"

"It's really quite roomy. And those ventilators on the outside of the trailer go into that upper compartment, not into the trailer."

"But—what's it for?"

"I wondered that myself," Neal said. "You see, I know something of car design. When I came back here to have I spotted something screwy, so I investigated."

Martha dropped wearily to the settee, rubbed a moist hand over her forehead. "I—I wish you'd never taken this job. It's all—"

"She stopped, looked helplessly at Neal. "I don't understand any of it!"

He offered her a cigaret. "The best thing to do for the time being is calm down and don't try to figure it."

"But I can't trust you. Why were you hiding? Why didn't you tell Speddon as you'd promised? Then all this wouldn't have happened."

Neal sat down beside her, looked squarely into her eyes. "See here, Martha Brittain. You've got to trust me. You've got to believe that things might have been worse if I hadn't pulled my little stunt."

"What do you mean?"

"That's all I can tell you now," Neal said.

"But do you know why Betty didn't come back?"

Neal shook his head. "I'm not certain, if you don't accept Sloan's theory."

"I don't!" Martha said quickly. "Betty Haynes wouldn't do a thing like that. She stopped a moment. 'Do you—are you really a friend of Speddon's?'"

"We've known each other for a considerable time."

MARTHA'S head was whirling with questions, but she saw that Neal would not give her any answers he knew. How far should she trust him, she wondered. There was the possibility that she was working with Speddon, was even now attempting to throw her off the track. But what did Speddon want with Betty? The Haynes family was not wealthy, so she could not be held for any appreciable ransom. The only other alternative filled Martha's head with a cold fright. "Will you go to San Francisco suddenly with me to meet Betty?" she asked suddenly.

"Of course."

Martha's heart leaped. If she could keep him with her, pretend to fall in with him, there might still be a chance to get him into the hands of the police. Perhaps in the crowded Palace Hotel, when she found Betty's wire had been a hoax, she could have Gerry Neal arrested.

"I'm going to get some rest," she said. "Then we'll start early in the morning."

"You won't run away from me?"

"No."

Neal smiled. "I really wouldn't. I can help you. And you must believe me when I tell you that this whole thing may be bigger than you imagine. A girl can't back it alone. And whether you realize it or not, you're in it up to your neck." He started for the door. "I'll be at the Del Monte. If you want to come by for me there at 8 o'clock we can breakfast together."

"The Del Monte? I—I thought you were broke?"

Gerry Neal grinned. "I wired for funds." he said. "See you in the morning." Then with a pleasant "good night" he left the trailer.

Tired and befogged, Martha wondered dully if he'd really been there. Perhaps she'd blundered again, and he would rush on to San Francisco to warn Speddon that she was on the trail. Who was Gerry Neal? How could he be stay at the Del Monte when he had sneaked away from his land-lady in San Diego and gone hitchhiking on the highway?

It was too much for Martha to solve that night. With a shudder she closed the ceiling compartment in which Neal had hidden. Once closed it was almost impossible to detect without the aid of measurements. She recalled with chagrin how she had slept in the trailer at Santa Barbara—and with Gerry Neal all the while in that compartment above! She remembered his slow, engaging grin, and his deep friendly eyes. Why did she want so to trust him when everything about his actions was against him? Was it because she needed help so badly, or because she had believed in him?

Martha slept, with the question unanswered.

Oklahoma Town to Have Pioneer Fete

By United Press

GUYMON, Okla.—Plans for the prelude to this city's annual Panhandle Pioneer celebration have been completed with the selection of Jim Wilcox, Texas cowboy, to ride a 275-mile pony express route from Guymon to Oklahoma City.

Wilcox plans to use relays of horses and arrive at Oklahoma City within four days, carrying four pounds of mail. His ride will precede the main celebration by one month.

The Guymon pioneer celebration commemorates passage of the Organic Act of 1890, by which the Panhandle became part of the United States. Unlike the remainder of Oklahoma, the Panhandle was not part of the Louisiana Purchase, but was a discarded remnant of the Republic of Texas. Because it lacked government, the Panhandle became a "No Man's Land," infested with outlaws and cattle rustlers.

During recent years residents of the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles have devoted one day of each year to commemorate the annexation of the once lawless land to the United States.

Report Glances By Grayson

SONJA HENIE rhymes with pretty penny, which makes it because every time it rains, rains pennies from heaven for her.

In the short time since she has become a professional, the winsome little figure has made herself a cool star of a million dollars which is real-making a lot of pieces of cut out of a pure eight.

And, to be sure, Sonja is skating on thin ice as she slides along gathering gold in her silvery gait. She has a five-year movie contract which calls for two pictures a year at the rate of $95,000 a film. This is the figure she is supposed to have cut out for herself in the movie, "One in a Million."

Truly, Sonja is one in a million. No other woman athlete ever has collected the money Sonja is getting. And, if she has many more even any more—years like she, one, she may surpass the earnings of the Messers, John Smullyer, Gene Tunney, Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey, the athletes who are believed to have found her "pep" abilities most profitable.

WIESSMULLER is the only sporting figure to make a lasting success in the movies. Others, of course, made fabulous sums for one picture. But only one picture.

Bobby Jones made a series of shorts, but that was all he was good for because he had absolutely no acting ability nor desire to be an actor. Max Baer's movie with Myrna Loy and Primo Carnera, "The Prizefighter and the Lady," was a bucks-office success, but Maxie's contract for another film was bought up by the company. Apparently they were convinced that the public would not buy Baer another picture.

Babe Ruth, Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey all appeared in one or two films, but after that the movie-goers started asking for Greta Garbo again and the boys went back to their professions.

Women athletes have been even less successful than the men in the movies. Only a few have tried the cinema, as we saw by the gas house, and those few were far from successes, probably because most of the girls have athletes' feet and legs.

Sonja, however, seems to be headed for a happy movie career. Not only can she skate. She can act. And likes to. And she's pretty and dainty. Her first picture, according to reports, grossed $6,000,000. It cost $2,500,000 to film. Which, no matter how you balance the books, appears to be a tidy profit.

"OUT OUR WAY" ————— By Williams

SWEET MEATS AND SWEET SLEEP J.R. WILLIAMS 3-31

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The dangers of price inflation, which many government and private economists believe is moving us right along toward the next big depression, have now been recognized officially in a public statement by Federal Reserve Board Governor Marriner S. Eccles.

Hardly anyone seems to dispute the dangers of the present price trend. But there is disagreement here as to:

1—Whether the next crash, if it comes, is most likely to hit in 1938, 1939, or 1940.

2—Whether business (using wage increases to charge consumers for much more than the costs of such increases).

3—Whether the government can formulate any industrial policy adequate to head off the next depression, or cope with it, when and if it comes. There is no such policy now.

Leon Henderson, former chief of research and planning at NEA, and now economic adviser to Harry Hopkins, was warning of price inflation a year ago. He has persistently urged a national economic council and a pooling of industrial-financial information. He has succeeded in getting other New Dealers alarmed, but so far that's all.

NEVERTHELESS, Henderson and others among the best government and private economists have been trying to isolate the main causes of the last depression, and a substantial group agrees that the following sketch of economic history is very much to the point in considering the present dangers:

Man-hour productivity increased 30 per cent between 1923 and 1929. Unless this was passed on in the form of higher wages and lower prices it meant lower labor costs.

Labor income was increased eight per cent in that period and the net reduction in labor cost for industry was 14 per cent.

The wholesale price level dropped from 97.6 points in 1921 to only 95.3 in 1929. Profits increased 87 per cent and production 37 per cent. Consumers, laborers and farmers failed to benefit appreciably from lower costs. Some of the new profits went into speculation, some into overbuilding of the nation's productive capacity.

The price level dropped to 85 in 1932, was back at 80 in 1935 and stayed there until last October. Then the prices of steel, copper, building materials, hides and leather and various basic and semi-finished commodities began to go up.

Big profits were made in 1935 and 1936, but they were made on production volume. Ten of 33 groups of industries made bigger profits in 1936 than in 1929. The price level is now about 87. Economists say it is going out of bounds.

Assuming that 3,500,000 workers have received or soon will receive wage increases, theoretically they're compensated. But there are 32,000,000 other persons at work, 12,000,000 farmers and 9,000,000 unemployed for whom price increases mean reduced purchasing power. Falling purchasing power means reduced demand for goods. Reduced demand means unemployment, which means still less purchasing power. And there you have that spiral again.

The Alexander Hamilton's Bureau of Business Conditions says: "Past experience suggests that the major collapse toward which we are inevitably headed, is not to be expected before 1939 or 1940."

This is more optimistic than some guesses. But you might like to ponder on that word "inevitably" for a while.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

POTATOES may be one of man's best friends. But we all tire of even our best friends at times. Then try something different.

Rice Spoon Bread
(4 to 6 servings, with enough over for tomorrow's luncheon for 2)
One cup cooked rice, 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup milk, 1 cup boiling water, 3 tablespoons white cornmeal, 1-4 cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder.

Four boiling water over cornmeal and mix well. Sift flour, salt and sugar into the wet cornmeal. Mix and cook over hot water until it thickens. Stir in rice and butter. Separate yolks from whites of eggs. Beat yolks and add to mixture, then baking powder and milk. Beat egg whites until stiff, then fold into mixture. Pour into carefully greased baking dish. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 40 minutes. This spoon bread has a longing for meat and gravy.

Eggplant and Rice
(4 to 6 servings)
One large eggplant, 6 tablespoons butter, 1 pint tomato juice, 1 onion, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup raw rice, 1 quart boiling water.

Wash rice carefully, then boil and drain. It must be flaky. Heat 2 tablespoons butter in frying pan and fry onions. Cut eggplant in fairly thick slices, sprinkle with salt and stand 10 minutes. Drain and cut into wedge-shaped pieces. Remove onion from pan, add 4 tablespoons butter, fry eggplant. Combine eggplant, rice, onion, add tomato juice. Arrange in greased baking dish. Dust with grated cheese. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 25 minutes.

Chicken Hominy
(4 to 6 servings)
One-half cup fine hominy, 1 cup boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup clear chicken stock, 2 tablespoons butter.

Add hominy slowly to boiling water, add salt, and cook until hominy absorbs all the water. Then add the chicken stock. Cook over hot water another 1-2 hours. At last moment, add butter. Serve piled up on a platter and surrounded with pork tenderloins and fried apple rings.

Truck and Tractor Salesmen Attend Meeting In Dallas

Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Conn of Kennedy Truck and Tractor has just returned from Dallas where he was guest at a big dealer meeting of the International Harvester motor truck organization.

Mr. Kennedy is most enthusiastic about various improvements incorporated in the new International. The complete, new line consists of twenty-six models in seventy-seven wheelbase, with gross vehicle weights ranging from 4,400 to 62,000 pounds.

Staging a dip into a pond in an automobile, requires histrionic determination on the part of the players involved, as well as a multiplicity of complications for studio engineers.

The new picture, which Richard Thorpe directed, is a comedy romance dealing with the marriage of a young business man to a vaudeville actress. They fail to understand each other, there are countless comical quarrels, an odd marital mix-up hinging on California's three-day marriage license law, an odd comedy denouement in which the husband gives the recalcitrant bride the soluble dress, drives her into the pool in a polluted taxiab, and thus tames her rebellious spirit.

Friday troop meeting night, members of troop 16 have decided to meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 to 7 p. m. for special study on merit badge subjects.

Stuart Painter, Tommie Hendrick and Larkin Elliott took first, second and third places in scouters shoot.

Bobby Joe Pridgen, Bill Doran and Ralph Roberts took first, second and third places, respectively in Class A.

Justin Greenock, C. F. Murray and Woodrow Lindsey took first, second and third places, respectively in Class B.

Jimmy Cummins, Ralph Roberts and Bobby Joe Pridgen won first, second and third places, respectively in Flight A.

Woodrow Lindsey, Charles McDowell and Justin Greenock took first, second and third, respectively, in flight B.

In a recent practice in San Saba Bobby Joe Pridgen passed his merit badges in archery and scored the highest mark yet reported in the council, making 199 points at thirty yards.
