NEGRO COOPER FACING STILL MORE TROUBLE

Charley Cooper, negro, who last week attempted suicide by jumping in Eastland city jail after being charged with shoplifting, was arrested Thursday. Cooper was arrested Wednesday afternoon by Fort Worth officers upon request of Police Chief J. Peters of Eastland. He was released Tuesday morning from the Eastland city jail, to leave Eastland. Although officers there he was leaving for Fort Worth that night, it is charged, he robbed Frank Jones, negro operator in Eastland, of a large amount of money from Jones' cash register. Then, it is charged, Cooper went to Jones' residence where he stole his fox coat and dress, a pistol and gold watch. Jones returned to his place of business and went to town seeking Cooper, as he had been described as seen in the colored section of Eastland. Cooper was at the Connellee hotel, making preparations to leave for Fort Worth by bus. When Jones attempted to recover his items allegedly taken by Cooper, which he had in a box, Cooper drew the gun upon Jones, escaped from the hotel. Police Chief Peters later learned Cooper boarded a freight train Wednesday morning at Ranger and then notified the Fort Worth officers. Cooper still was on the night and, it is charged, had one of the items he allegedly stole. Expecting Cooper's return here Sunday, Chief Peters said that agents would be filed against the negro for two burglaries and one carrying a pistol.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH WHEN HOME IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

By United Press
FORT WORTH, Apr. 8.—Flaming gasoline that spewed on two small children when a gasoline stove exploded today, burned the babies to death and burned their parents severely. The dead were: Wilma Joe Brackett, 3. William Brackett, 14 months. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Brackett, were rushed to a hospital where they were reported in a critical condition. Brackett, a 31-year-old electric appliance salesman, told of the tragedy as doctors prepared to operate on him. "The baby was crying when I got up at 7:30," he said. "I went into the kitchen and fixed the bottle and went to the bedroom and gave it to him and started to light a heater. I turned the cap a little too far and there was an explosion. Gasoline sprayed everywhere."

As the gasoline showered on him, Brackett ran into the kitchen. There he managed to put out his flaming clothes. His wife leaped through a window. "Then I turned to go back into the bedroom," Brackett continued, "but it was a mass of flames. I ran to the back door. My wife was on the back steps crying for the babies and tried to run back into the house. I forced her to stay out. It would not have done any good then, the whole house was a roaring furnace." After firemen extinguished the blaze the bodies of the two children were found, the youngest still with his bottle in his mouth, his sister under bricks of a fallen chimney, clutching a doll she took to bed with her the night before.

Cisco Is Declared Winner of County Meet by 4 Points

W. T. Walton, superintendent of the Ranger public schools and director-general of the Eastland County Interscholastic league meet, held in Ranger last week-end, announced today that Cisco had been declared the all-round winner of the meet, with a total of 115 points. Eastland was second with a total of 111 points. The winner of the meet was determined after a meeting of principals of the participating schools, at which the results were checked and re-checked because of the closeness of the score. In winning the all-round meet, Cisco becomes possessor of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce trophy, which must be won three years in succession before it becomes the permanent property of the school. Rising Star, as winner of the track and field events in the Class A division, became possessor of the circulating trophy offered by the Carl Barnes post of the American Legion.

Receive Opinion In R. Henry Case

Reversal and remandment of the case in which Raymond Henry was given a 50-year sentence was the result of the trial court to charge the law of circumstantial evidence in its instruction to jurors, according to a copy of the opinion received by attorneys for the defendant from the Court of Criminal Appeals at Austin. Henry was tried upon the charge of murder in the death of H. L. McFee at Rising Star, May 1935. The high tribunal also emphasized in its opinion that no witness of the state testified having witnessed the alleged actual stabbing or having examined the wound allegedly inflicted upon McFee. The state had 15 days from March 31, date of the opinion, to file motion for rehearing. If the state does not file a motion for a rehearing then the clerk of the trial court at Eastland will be sent a mandate instructing the case be assigned for trial, it was explained. Attorney for Henry were Frank Sparks, Eastland; R. E. Grantham, Cisco, and L. H. Flew-ellen, Ranger.

Frail Girl Holds a Place With Men as Trucker of Pulp

By United Press
BIG BAY, Mich.—Unto Makela is used to hoisting square-shouldered, tobacco chewing "road monkeys" who truck pulpwood to a railroad station. Consequently his eyes widened with amazement when a slender corseted girl tripped into his lumber camp office, tossed her suitcase into a corner and her movie magazine on a chair as she announced: "I'm B. Lang, and I'm ready to go to work." "Not the B. Lang I hired as a road monkey?" Makela asked. "Sure, I'm your new truck driver, Beatrice Lang," the girl replied. That night she helped straighten a connecting rod, grind a couple of valves, and repair a transmission. At daybreak she was first in the line of trucks that ply the rutty roads into the forests of the Huron mountains. That was six months ago, and she's been first in line ever since, Makela admits. Beatrice is 23, weighs 119 pounds and has been a "road monkey" for two years. A typical "road monkey" is big, rough, injured to harsh weather. Three times a day through rain, snow, and sleet Beatrice races her truck loaded with two tons of spruce logs down the mountain to the railroad station. She averages more than 100 miles daily over a road corrugated with chack-holes. "Some of the boys say she always stops to powder her nose before pulling into camp," Makela said, "but she's as good a driver as any man and a lot better than most."

Work is Started On W. P. A. Project

Reconstruction of seven miles of road through the Dothan-Cottonwood vicinity was in progress Thursday after approval of a $27,000.54 project by the works progress administration. The road will serve as a connecting link between highways 1 and 23 in the Dothan and Cottonwood area, and as a farm-to-market road. Plans for the road project, employing 140 men and to require four months for completion, include widening of right of way to 60 feet, construction of rock bridges with concrete tops and graveling surfacing. The WPA's portion of the cost is $18,579.75, the county as sponsor is spending $8,427.79. County Engineer A. F. Taylor said T. M. Gordon is acting as supervisor for the WPA and Joe Black is serving as supervisor under Commissioner Arch Bitt for the county.

Agiculture Workers At Brownwood Meet

County Agricultural Association Chairman Dick Weeks, County Committeeman W. A. Williams, Assistant County Agent Hugh F. Barnhart and Adjustment Assistant L. N. Miller were scheduled Thursday to attend an agricultural workers' meeting at Brownwood. The meeting is being conducted by the extension service with explanation of the 1937 conservator program by C. E. Bowles, district 7 agent, of College Station. Beatrice worked as a file clerk in Chicago to earn the money to buy a truck. Her parents live near Blancy Park, Mich. She lives in a bunk house with two other women. She likes to fish, knit, golf, and dance—but she would rather tinker with a motor.

TENSION HAS GROWN OVER SPANISH WAR

By United Press
Tension among the European powers over the Spanish civil war increased markedly today. Italy again refused even to discuss withdrawal of her volunteers from Spain. Under the guns of a cruiser and a destroyer in the Balearic Islands Great Britain forced a rebel apology for the bombing of a British destroyer in the Mediterranean by rebel airplanes, which some unofficial London sources suspected might have been Italian. The Italian feeling against Britain and France was such that the government cancelled an Italian-French football game scheduled for Sunday in Paris. In Spain the rebels were dominant in the north, but almost completely routed in the southern Cordoba sector.

Undertakers Think More Than Eight Were In Wreck

By United Press
McNARY, Ariz., April 8.—Possibility that one or two additional persons may have been aboard the Douglas luxury transport when it crashed and burned Saturday, with eight known passengers, was expressed today by undertakers trying to identify the dead. Lee Taylor of the Douglas Aircraft Company, however, said it was definitely known only eight were aboard. Undertakers based their theory on the tangle of bodies found inside the wrecked cabin of the 21-passenger plane. The bodies were so mangled and burned that not more than one can be identified.

DUST STORMS FORCE DOWN FLYING CADETS

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO, April 8.—Nineteen of 21 cadet fliers, forced down by a dust storm during a night training flight, reported back to their base at Kelly Field today. Two of the planes cracked up in forced landings at emergency fields. F. J. Black, Jr., 23, of Florida, suffered a broken arm when his ship nosed over as he attempted to land in a pasture near Caldwell, Texas. His injuries were not serious. Ronald F. Fallows 23, escaped injury when forced to land in a plowed field near Schulenburg.

A dust storm that blew into Texas at El Paso Wednesday was moving toward the Gulf of Mexico Thursday.

Fort Arthur was the only government weather station that reported "dense" dust early Thursday, but Houston and Galveston reported visibility limited to two miles. The duster was whipped along by a wind that reached 42 miles an hour at Dallas Wednesday night and one flurry sent the meter at Amarillo to 70 miles an hour. Amarillo had a temperature of 30 degrees at 7 a. m., lowest in the state.

STRIKES MAY SPREAD INTO CANADA PLANT

By United Press
John L. Lewis' committee for Industrial Organization spread its strike threat into Canada today by calling out 3,700 General Motors workers in Oshawa, Ont., with demands for union recognition and a 40-hour week. Possibility of repercussions in the United States was seen when Hugh Thompson, organizer of the United Automobile Workers, declared that if General Motors of Canada brings "even one car" across the border during the strike, the union will call another walkout in all General Motors plants in the United States. United Automobile Workers moved cautiously against the Ford Motor company in the wake of Henry Ford's announced intention never to recognize the union. In Hershey, Pa., the Hershey Chocolate corporation resumed purchasing milk from farmers who evicted 300 sit-down CIO strikers from its factories. In Baytown, Texas, a majority of 3,500 employees of the Humble Oil and Refining company approved proposed wage increases averaging 10 per cent offered by the company. Four of the six divisions of the refinery workers voted approval today and the remainder will decide in voting this afternoon. The wage increase would add approximately $700,000 to the annual payroll and would be retroactive to March 16.

Taboo on Third Terms Safeguards Democracy

If the editors of Fortune Magazine have taken the public pulse correctly, the good people of the United States are rapidly losing their traditional opposition to a third term for American presidents.

Fortune's quarterly survey, which last fall achieved the distinction (are among surveys) of telling which way the election was going to go, undertook recently to find out how people felt about the following question:

"If there should be agitation for President Roosevelt to run for a third term, what would be your attitude?"

Seven per cent of the people questioned said they would oppose the plan because they just don't like Mr. Roosevelt. Twenty-six per cent would oppose it on principle, although they like Mr. Roosevelt. Slightly more than 10 per cent would oppose it for a combination of both reasons.

On the other hand, 22 per cent would be in favor of a third term. Twenty-six per cent would be for it if Mr. Roosevelt's second term turned out successfully. And 8 per cent didn't know just where they'd stand.

When you examine these findings, you may learn some interesting things about the public's regard for Mr. Roosevelt; but the really interesting thing is that for the overwhelming majority of the question of a third term is a matter of personality rather than of principle.

If Fortune's survey represents the nation as a whole, only a small segment of the populace—something like one-third of the total number—is opposed to the idea of a third term as such. The remainder would be for it or against it, depending on who was seeking it.

So it looks as if the unwritten law laid down by Washington, indorsed by Jefferson, subscribed to by a long succession of great presidents, and enforced by the general public on the misguided Grant, had lost most of its appeal. The people seem to be ready to throw it overboard if they are asked in the right way.

Now it is worth remembering that this unwritten law has become a very important part of our scheme of government.

We give our President greater powers than are given to an elective officer by any other democracy on earth; and one of the chief reasons why we can do it without undermining our democracy is the fact that we know in advance that he isn't in there for keeps. He gets eight years, at the most. No matter what his popularity, no matter how effective his political machine, tradition calls on him to step down at the end of his second term.

Suppose, now, that this tradition has become ineffective. Overnight one of our democracy's chief safeguards is lost. We have tacitly invited the first able and popular leader who comes along to give us his services for life.

We could do a great deal worse, during the next year or so, than to examine this third term tradition thoughtfully and decide anew whether it is not a tradition worth keeping.

Don't Look Now, but Something Just Fell Out

Sport Glances.By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON Sports Editor, NEA Service ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Vince, second member of the San Francisco family made famous by Yankee Joe, unmistakably is a DiMaggio.

Vince stands with his hand on his hip and with his body slanted toward the left just like last season's American League freshman star. He has the same loping stride.

There is vastly more life in Vince's face. His eyes light up when he talks. Joe has a poker physiognomy. Vince shows more animation. It doesn't appear to make much difference to Joe whether he triples or strikes out, and the chances are that it doesn't.

Therein, perhaps, lies the big difference between the brothers. Vince worries. Joe doesn't.

Vince reported to the Boston Bees with the reputation of being unable to hit a curved ball with a canoe paddle, but can't be as bad a hitter as he has looked in exhibition games, although 293 isn't much of a mark for an outfielder to bring from the Pacific Coast League of these years. Vince wouldn't hit .193 for Zanesville the way he is going now.

Unlike Joe, who hits the ball where it is pitched with a natural stroke, Vince crouches over the plate. Vince is swinging above the ball, and to date has appeared to have a blind spot the width of the letters on his shirt. You can see daylight between his shillalah

Swimming Alone In University Pool Is On the 'Don't' List

AUSTIN.—You can't swim alone in the University of Texas pool, even if you are a world and Olympic champion.

Adolph Kiefer of Chicago, holder of the world backstroke title, discovered that when he took a practice swim without anybody in sight. The rule is enforced rigidly because of its importance in safeguarding a lone swimmer from getting cramps or knocking himself out while diving.

Austin sports fans got a laugh, and another surprise, when they found that Dana X ($15,000-a-year) Bible was a much better planner of football plays than of houses. That came out when Mrs. Bible came to Austin from their former home at Lincoln, Neb., to look at her husband's conception of what a house should be.

TRAILER ADVENTURE

By Nard Jones

© 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN WITH TODAY
 MARTHA BITTAIN and BETTY HAYNES begin a trip up the coast to demonstrate the joys of the trailer. They pick up RICH NEAL, handsome young hunter. Neal tells them he is meeting a friend, JACK SIMMONS, at Long Beach. As they appear from the trailer and down the road, Betty, after repeated efforts to find out what Neal is up to, finally convinces him to go with her. She does not know whether she can trust him. In San Francisco, Martha finds that neither she nor Betty are really interested in the trip. Instead, Martha acts as a presumably innocent bystander, but she is really interested in everything that is going on.

Martha is more and more convinced that Neal is up to something. She wants to know what Neal is up to, but she is afraid to ask. She tells Betty about her suspicions. Betty, who is a police officer, tells her that she is going to investigate. She tells her that she is going to investigate. She tells her that she is going to investigate.

Neal told her quietly, "You're not going to report to the police. You're going to do my advice." "What makes you so certain of that?" "Because," Neal said, "you're in love with me. Why don't you stop loving me, Martha, as I have?" "The color rose furiously in Martha's cheeks. "Don't be absurd!"

Neal shrugged. "All right. You're not in love with me. But suppose we get started?" "Still flushing angrily, Martha ate the breakfast dishes into the galleys sink, and took down her leather jacket from its hook. She slipped on her shoes, and then she looked at her watch. She was late. She looked at her watch. She was late. She looked at her watch. She was late.

"Hop in," he invited casually. Her lips compressed in a tight line. She got out of the trailer and looked at her watch. She was late. She looked at her watch. She was late. She looked at her watch. She was late.

After a mile they drove in silence through the busy streets of Oakland and Berkeley, through Vallejo, then always through north along the coast toward Eureka. The country grew wilder, with broad rolling hills scattered oaks. Then wilder still, more ominous yet as they passed the great redwoods, serene in their strength and their years, making even the coupe and trailer look like the puny toys of a child. Once Neal said, "Whenever you get hungry, I'll be glad to stop." Martha did not answer. She had resolved to give Neal no quarter, no encouragement, now that he had dared to assume she was in love with him. She was angry, too, at his high-handedness, at his cocksure certainty. And as the car raced northward, the Airspeed Trailer swaying easily behind, she resolved to carry out what she had planned days before. She would suggest they stop for lunch, and over the table she would pretend to resign herself to his program. In every way she would attempt to put him off his guard—and then, at the first opportunity, she would turn him over to the police and make a full report about Speddun and the disappearance of Betty Haynes. She hoped fervently that the chance would come that evening, at Eureka.

It was well after 1 o'clock when Martha, keeping a sullen note in her voice, suggested that they stop for something to eat. "Right!" Neal answered non-committally. "I'll be back in the next likely-looking place." It turned out to be a lonely hamburger shack on the edge of the road. There were a couple of slatternly women, but both Neal and Martha were hungry—and the food did belie the woman's appearance. As Martha ate, she searched the little room for signs of a telephone, hoping that the woman's husband would enter—showing sufficient height and breadth to cope with Neal. But no man appeared.

"Look here," Neal said at last, "you can't act like this indefinitely, Martha. Why not be human again?" Martha looked into her coffee cup absently. Then she made a little gesture of casual defeat. "I suppose we may as well be congenial traveling companions—since you insist that we do travel together." "That's the way to talk!" he held out his cigarette to her, then a light from his pocket torch. "Whatever you think of me, I'm insisting upon accompanying you because—well, because I don't want anything to happen to you."

"Thank you," Martha said quickly. "Shall we go on now?" Carefully she was taking care not to overdo the role of a woman ready to forgive. She could tell by Neal's lighter manner, by the soft glow in his eyes, that he believed she had, woman-like, on a stairway leading to the noted "White Elephant" gambling house. He was an authority on sporting matters and for several years was a partner of Jim Brown of Brenham, in race track operations.

Q. How many Texans served in the United States-Mexican war of 1846-48 and under whose leadership?
 A. The number is not definitely known, but was about 8,000 with Gov. J. P. Henderson as major general of volunteers. Others in command included Albert Sidney Johnson, Edward Burlison, Ben McCulloch, Jack Hays and George T. Wood.

Q. I am interested in knowing something of the life of King Fisher.
 A. In 1873, J. King Fisher, then sixteen, killed a man in Goliad County and fled to Dimmitt County where he acquired a small ranch, which became headquarters for a gang of cattle smugglers. Before he was twenty, he and his gang were charged with killing seventeen men, tough border characters and placed changed with the day. He was sure now in an ever before that what he had said in the trailer was true. And this, she told herself triumphantly, would put him even more completely off his guard. That afternoon as they proceeded on their way, Martha talked more freely—taking it slowly at first, pretending that she was unenthusiastically warming under his charm. But something cold and hard within her breast kept her to her purpose. "It's my turn now," she told herself grimly, and all the while played into Neal's conversation.

Once he stretched his arms at the wheel, turned his head as if his neck were growing stiff, and Martha leaped at the chance she had been waiting for, leading up to gradually. "You must be tired," she told him solicitously. "Let me drive a while." The coupe and trailer slowed down. "I'm ready to have you take over. Beating this pavement with all the curves of the Redwood Highway has been tiresome, all right." But he did not get out of the car to give her the wheel. Instead, he slid beneath her, literally lifted her in strong arms to the wheel. "There you are. I might even snooze a while. I was up pretty early this morning to get over to Oakland. I was afraid I might miss you."

Martha pressed the coupe on. With every nerve of her body taut, Martha stepped on the accelerator even harder, anxious to reach Eureka before he awakened. Soon she began to see road signs indicating the distance to the northern California lumber town—22 miles, 17 miles, 11 miles. With every nerve of her body taut, Martha rushed the coupe onward, fearing every moment that Neal would awaken and notice the speedometer reading. Eight miles. Three miles. And then, at the edge of the town, Martha slowed down, let the engine of the coupe purr softly as she swerved into a big modern service station. Quick as she stopped the outfit, leaped out and ran to the burly attendant inside the glass enclosure.

"The man in that car must be arrested," she whispered quickly. "And be careful—he's got a gun and he's dangerous!" (To Be Continued)

Legend Rises Over Psychic of Feats of Dog Now Dead, Whose Mental Power Was Puzzle

BY PAUL THOMAS DIX
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 SEDALIA, Mo.—Jim, Sam Van Arsdale English setter, is dead, but the mystery of his uncanny psychic powers remains unsolved. The dog died while on a fishing trip with Van Arsdale near Warsaw, Mo. For 7 of his 12 years, Jim astounded those who came in contact with him by his apparent ability to read print and even the mind of his master. No one could explain his powers, although many tried. Not even Van Arsdale. Here are some of the things Jim could do: He could walk up to a group of men and single out the one wearing a gray hat or a suit of a certain color. From a group of parked automobiles he could select any one his master told him to choose. He could pick out a license number from a group of cars, select tags of various states or of any color designated. On being shown a slip of paper on which a name had been written, he could find the writer, placing a paw on the person, in his manner of identifying all things. Only two conditions were necessary for Jim to perform. Van Arsdale had to be near, and he had to be standing and facing the object Jim was to select. These requirements often led to the charge that the dog had been trained to respond to signals, or that he merely selected the object at which his master was looking. However, Van Arsdale denies ever having used signals of any sort, and among the thousands who saw Jim perform not one ever came forward with the charge that he had detected Van Arsdale flashing a signal. Van Arsdale contends that no trainer could devise enough signals to use in all the acts Jim performed with ease. And then, too, if the dog had been directed by his master's glance at an object, observers say, for him to pick out a certain object from a group of objects would be performing a feat of which most human beings are incapable. "People were always asking me to explain Jim's tricks," Van Arsdale said, "as if I were a magician pulling rabbits out of a hat. All I can say is that there was no trick, and I can't explain Jim. I'd like to have some one explain him to me. "I never believed Jim could read, and as to telepathic or psychic powers, I'm not prepared to offer any opinion as I don't know anything about those things. But I do know that Jim seemed to know what I was thinking. He would never work for anyone else, not even Mrs. Van Arsdale. But he would obey commands of other people if I said, 'Jim, do what the man wants you to do.' Those familiar with Jim's habits declare he seldom barked; seldom showed interest in other dogs, always preferring human companionship; was fastidious about his food; never attacked or killed any animal; never showed anger and never, under any circumstances, engaged in a fight with other dogs, even to protect himself. Van Arsdale never was able to teach Jim the ordinary tricks that other dogs perform. "I'm not an animal trainer," Van Arsdale said, "and Jim was not a trick dog. He never performed the tricks other dogs com-

 SCANDINAVIAN countries have high reputations for both their civilization and their excellent eating. Good food seems to make good citizens. For that and other reasons try these Scandinavian recipes. The Norwegian flaky pudding of fish is a first rate Friday gesture.

Fish Pudding
 (4 to 6 servings)
 Two pounds haddock, 2 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-3 cup cream, 1-8 teaspoon nutmeg, buttered breadcrumbs, salt. Carefully remove bones from fish. Run fish through meat chopper two or three times until finely minced. Place in bowl and mash with potato masher until it forms a smooth paste. Then stir in the unseasoned egg yolks, the butter, melted, and the cream. The result should be a smooth batter. Add salt and nutmeg. Use a pudding mold or baking dish. Butter carefully. Pour in the fish batter. Sprinkle top liberally with breadcrumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 3-4 hour. It should be light and delicate. Ten years ago, Ruth A. Gottfried revealed in her amusing miscellany of foreign wisdom called "The Queening Cook" the wonders of Cream Monks with raspberry jam. If they are good enough for the Swedish epicures, surely they should be good enough for us.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, poached eggs on creamed codfish, toast, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Toasted deviled ham sandwiches, spring salad, cream monks, raspberry jam, tea, milk.
DINNER: Clam juice cocktail, Norwegian fish pudding, baked stuffed tomatoes, new potatoes in parsley butter, romaine and green pepper salad, sour cream spice pie, coffee, milk.

Swedish Cream Monks

(4 to 5 servings)
 Six eggs, 1-2 cup flour, 2-3 cup thick sour cream, 1 tablespoon granulated sugar, 2 cardamom seeds ground fine, pinch salt. Beat yolks separately until light, add sour cream and beat again. Add flour, granulated sugar and the ground cardamom seeds. Beat the egg whites very stiff with the salt. Fold beaten whites into the batter. Butter a corrugated mold, or otherwise use a plain pan. Turn in the batter and let it spread about 1 inch thick. Bake on top of the stove with a cover over the pan. When the batter is cooked through—in about half an hour—whistle the raspberry jam down off the kitchen shelf. You'll have a souffle cake. Fun ahead.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt has been seriously thinking of calling for an international peace and disarmament conference, but he hasn't made up his mind. Lately it has appeared to those closely in touch with the President that he was not likely to take that step in the near future, if at all. The man in the White House has been mulling the idea over for at least some weeks, however. There is the possibility that such a move might conceivably change world history by avoiding the most disastrous of all wars. William C. Bullitt, U. S. ambassador to France and Roosevelt's fair-haired boy among the diplomats, has been urging Roosevelt on Bullitt's influence in major State Department policies has been obvious for four years. France, to which Bullitt is assigned, favors the international conference idea. The extent to which other major powers have been sounded out is still a close secret. There is reason to believe that one important factor in the President's hesitation is the question whether certain outstanding figures in the world scene could be trusted to co-operate or to keep pledges. The failure of "non-intervention" agreements as to Spain has not gone unnoticed here. The President is forced to weigh the hopes for actual achievement against the possible disaster to his prestige at home in case the peace conference project became a fiasco. He is not forgetting what happened to Wilson. Nor the lessons of the post-war Washington naval arms conference. . . .

WHATEVER happens with respect to the conference proposal, developments in our foreign policy may often have to be interpreted in light of the fact monly performed; he would not learn them. He'd merely wish when I tried to teach him. Scientists examined him, but were just as baffled as everyone else. "But I don't expect anybody to believe the tales told about Jim," Van Arsdale added. "I wouldn't believe them myself if I'd only heard them. Why should anyone else?"

proved interesting and plainly proved much has been attained by the organization and in turn was well demonstrated through the reports and recognition won at the district one Texas Congress of Parent-Teacher Association meeting which convened at Brown-wood, March 29, 30 and 31. At this time Ranger was complimented individually for being the only association represented who had organized a P-T. A., namely the present active branch at Alameda.

As attention returned to local reports, it was too announced the City Council, sponsored the school of instruction, or the procedure course of study, invaluable to those who serve as officers. The early fall brought a well planned entertainment paying honor to the school faculty and other guests marking an attendance of one hundred and twenty-five. The annual Founders Birthday tea, was observed in a colorful fashion. The concluding high point at the convention met came when the local association pledged the Life membership. Young school P-T. A. yesterday pledged their membership, and Cooper and Hodges Oak Park P-T. A.'s, tied in the contest for 100 per cent presence of members at all meetings. The award for the honor was given Cooper, since Hodges Oak Park had formerly enjoyed the privilege.

the council will be struck on the evening of May 6th, when a banquet will be the mode of entertainment. A fitting program arrangement will come under the personal efforts of Mrs. H. D. Bishop, and Mrs. E. R. Green. Foods committee, Mrs. Carl Heinlin and Mrs. J. E. Jacobs. Decoration, Mrs. J. B. Houghton. As the busy hour reached its climax, a dainty refreshment plate named a gay color note, further sounded in room decorations primarily fragrant clusters of spring blossoms.

Summarized reports announced 45 visits were made to absentees during the month of March, seven cards mailed and 14 telephone calls placed. The home of the guardian, Mrs. Williams, will be opened to members for a covered dish luncheon on Wednesday of the week coming. Time 12:30 o'clock.

The customary prize went to Miss Ruth Strong.

HELP 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

To Flush out Acids and Other Poisonous Waste

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes of tissue which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Each single tube about 1/16 of an inch in diameter. If these tubes become clogged with acids and poisons, they prevent or delay passage with resulting and burning aches which may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids in your blood, which due to functional kidney disorders, may be the beginning of kidney trouble, when motor power, burning, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up each morning, feeling tired, backache, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, and successfully by using for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of safety tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
