Wagner Act Can Avert Strikes, Save Millions

As if to emphasize the dollars-and-cents value which the Supreme Court's Wagner act decisions can have for this country, a statistically-minded reporter for the United Press has just tabulated the net cost of the years' big automobile strikes in Michigan.

Altogether, this reporter figured, the four major auto strikes had a total cost of $477,000,000.

Autos worth some $267,000,000 were scheduled to be produced but were not produced because of the strike. Wages in the sum of $45,000,000 were scheduled to be paid but were not paid. Industries supplying wheels, glass, instrument boards, and other equipment to the auto makers lost business worth slightly less than $137,000,000.

But that does not tell the entire story. The strikes cost the state of Michigan $1,629,000 in added relief costs, national guard maintenance, and lost sales taxes. The federal government lost $4,200,000 in excise taxes. Michigan merchants and storekeepers lost something like $18,800,000 in sales during the strike period.

Altogether, this tabulation tells us what we already knew—that the strikes were fearfully expensive all the way down the line.

What makes it interesting is its relation to the Wagner act decisions.

The Wagner act does not compel any employer to sign a union contract. It does not force him to accept any terms that the union may place before him. All it does is legalize the workers' right to form unions without interference and to bargain with their employers once the unions are formed. In cases of doubt, it sets up machinery to determine whether a majority of men in a given plant want a union to bargain for them.

Measured against the demands of some confident labor leaders, that is too much. Measured against the background of the auto strikes, it is a great deal. More important, it is the sort of thing that can avert the terrific expense of a wave of strikes such as the ones the auto industry has just had.

For these auto strikes were primarily organizational. Demands were made in respect to wages, hours, seniority, and so on, and in some cases concessions were made along these lines; but what really stirred the strikers was a decide that their right to organize and to bargain collectively be formally recognized. The auto industry was the citadel of the no-union tradition; the workers set out to crack it.

It is precisely that sort of thing from which the Wagner act should save us. Half-billion dollar strikes to legitimize union organizations ought never to appear again.

Much remains to be done, of course. A good deal of wise statesmanship is going to be necessary—at union headquarters, among other places. But one very big reason for expensive labor fights has been removed.

Ran 2 Record-Smashing 440 Yd. Dashes in One Day

RAY ELLINWOOD, sensational track star of the University of Chicago, clipped .3 second off the world's indoor 440-yard dash record in his first college meet.

HE DUPLICATED the feat 20 minutes later as anchor man on the relay team. Ray's start enables him to jump into the lead at the crack of the gun.

IN THE FIRST FEW STRIDES, Ray unleashes almost explosive power. And keeps driving!

JUST IMAGINE breaking the world's record twice the same day! That takes stamina and endurance of high order.
