Both are now in Washington, Garrett as congressman from the 17th district and Cockrill as his secretary. Motion for quashing had been made April 20.
Complications involved in serving a citation in the District of Columbia were pointed out as reasons for the motion to quash.

The government order officially banned for sale or distribution all British newspapers except the London Daily Mail, the Evening News and the Sunday Observer, all pro-fascist.
The action against the British press was taken because of alleged anti-fascist campaigns in recent months.

He stated that his place would be filled by H. C. Wilkinson, employe of the Commercial State Bank, and that Miss Jessie Deavenport, registrar of the Ranger High School and Ranger Junior College, would assume the duties formerly performed by Mrs. Hunt. She will take over the work as soon as Mrs. Hunt leaves, it was stated.

LEGISLATORS TO GET LOWER PAY TUESDAY

By United Press
AUSTIN, May 8.—The Texas legislature will operate on borrowed time next week. The 120 days allotted to a regular session will expire Tuesday at midnight, but the end is not in sight.
How long members will remain at work on half-pay of $5 a day later Tuesday cannot be determined.
By adjourning without passing appropriations to operate the government, legislators can force Gov. Allred to call a special session. This would restore members at $10 a day pay for 30 days.
If appropriations are made senate leaders announced they would take up the house-passed tax bills and levy taxes for appropriations.
Gov. Allred's sudden week-end "rest" was believed by some to forecast a final message to the legislature early next week. His position was strengthened by the senate refusal to override his veto of the private carrier truck bill, that weakened in respect to repeal of the race track betting law.
Sustaining the veto gave senators a chance to answer the charge a "stubborn minority" was blocking the will of the majority.
The senate also forced a decision between the East Texas and a West Texas insane asylum on the governor. A bill provide both was passed, each a separate item, so he can veto one and leave the other. House acceptance of the conference bill will be asked Monday.

Eubanks Begins Duties With City Here On Saturday

Ed T. Eubanks, who has been named city secretary to replace R. A. Jameson, who has resigned, began working in the city office Saturday morning, although he will not assume the full responsibilities of his position for about 30 days.
Eubanks was chosen as city secretary by the city commissioners because of his past experience and record, and because he has been a long-time resident of Ranger.
The newly-elected city secretary has been a resident of the city for 16 years, 14 years of which have been spent with the Thurber Earthen Products Company. He started his duties with the company as a clerk, later being promoted to the position of manager and later was made general superintendent, a position he held until the company was sold on May 1, 1935.
Since May, 1935, he has been with the Texas Railway Equipment Company as representative and superintendent, supervising the salvaging of the rock crusher and brick plant at Thurber and operating the company's mines. His work would be completed in the Ranger area in between four to six months, after which he would be transferred to some other territory. By electing him to the city position one more family is retained in the city and a capable employe is obtained to handle the city's books.
The Texas Railway Equipment Company officials have stated that Eubanks could continue with the company indefinitely, but he decided that he had rather accept the city secretary position in order that he could remain in Ranger, where he and his home and where he has a large number of friends, as continuing with the company would necessitate his moving as soon as the salvage work at Thurber is completed.

The game marked the end of the spring training season, with spring basketball training starting Monday and continuing for one week.

NAVAL BOARD STARTS PROBE INTO TRAGEDY

By United Press
LAKEHURST, N. J., May 8.—A naval board began its own inquiry into the burning of the German dirigible Hindenburg, as the death toll of the disaster increased to 35.
The naval investigation preceded two other investigations of the crash. The department of commerce will open hearings Monday and a group of German aviation experts, headed by Dr. Hugo Eckener, will investigate later.
All will make a thorough study of every possible cause, including the suggestion of sabotage.
William Speck, chief radio operator of the Hindenburg, and Eric Knoecher of Germany, a passenger, died today, bringing the total dead to 35. At least two others were near death.
Sailors under Commander Chas. Rosendahl of the Lakehurst base studied the wreckage of the ship to preserve it for investigation.
While crew members mourned the death of their leader, Capt. Ernst Lehmann, former commander of the airship, Kurt Bauer, senior surviving officer, was called before the navy board to give his version of the accident. It was feared that with the death of Lehmann, valuable information about the brief moments from the time the ship caught fire until it exploded, might hamper clearing up the mystery.
Bodies of members of the crew will be returned to Germany.

The guild claims 5,600 members including 1,200 seniors who earn more than $250 a week. The guild holds its annual meeting on Sunday night. An already authorized strike resolution will be presented then.
The secretary warned that "not a studio will open Monday unless producers comply with the demands."

Modern Girls Can Take Care of Themselves

After years of agitation, state legislatures in various parts of the country finally woke up and outlawed breach of promise suits. Recognizing that such suits are, in most cases, merely a polite form of blackmail, and that money is no balm for a genuinely wounded heart, they ruled that failure to go through with a promise of marriage is not a valid cause of action.

So far, so good. But a magazine writer pointed out the other day that only half of the job has been done.

In most states, for instance, it is still a criminal offense for a gentleman to beguile a lady into submission with false promises of marriage. If she cares to go into court and plead tearfully that she surrendered her virtue under the impression that she was about to become a bride, a deceived lady can have a man sent to prison.

And so, since one threat is about as good as another for gold-digging purposes, the old shakedown goes on under another guise.

Now the shakedown part of it is not really so very important, since the man who sets up as a Don Juan is just asking for trouble, anyway. But, when you stop to think about it, a law of this kind bespeaks about as odd and insulting an idea of American womanhood as could possibly be devised.

For when we provide prison terms for men who accomplish seduction with promises of marriage, we simply say that the average woman is a weak and witless creature who cannot look out for herself. We assume, in the most uncomplimentary fashion possible, that she loses her grip the moment a soft-spoken and plausible chap cares to talk glibly about engagement rings and orange blossoms. We write into law the theory that she can say anything but "no."

A tremendous amount of bunk has been written with this theory as a base. Witness the novels, short stories, and movies which ring the change on the theme of the poor, helpless woman and the heartless and deceiving man. Sometimes the villain is the stenographer's boss, sometimes he is a gay young man of wealth, and sometimes he is just an ordinary heel, but the basic plot is always the same... luckless woman, at the mercy of the first unprincipled wretch who comes along.

Could anything be further from the facts? The ordinary American girl is abundantly able to take care of herself, thank you. She can say "no" in six languages and make it stick. She no more needs the criminal code to save her from the gray deceiver than she needs a government bureau to tell her how to powder her nose. She stopped believing in Santa Claus at the age of and she has had her eyes open ever since.

All this is not frightfully important, probably. But since the modern woman has so clearly shown that she can remain a pretty swell sort of person, mightn't we get our laws into line with the facts?

A visiting English comedienne is said to be higher paid than Mae West. Offhand, one would say it would be hard to beat Mae's figure.

Be-whiskered Bernard Shaw, named by a movie blond as one of the world's handsomest men, seems to have been hiding his light under a bush.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson THE FORBEARANCE OF ISAAC

Text: Genesis 26:12-25

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

AS men and women have read the Bible in former days, the tendency has been to think of it as a book of the past. A lesson such as this one about Isaac was considered simply a story about a man who lived long ago and at some place in the early life of the Jewish people.

Isaac's removal to the valley of Gerar, however, did not bring him peace. When the wells were opened, the herdsmen of Gerar claimed them, and there was strife about a well which Isaac's servants had found. Isaac still was resourceful, and apparently peacefully disposed. He dug another well, and there was a fight about that also.

But the next well that he dug caused no strife, and he called it "Rehoboth." His justification of the name is interesting. "Jehovah hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land."

AFTER all, in spite of all the strife about pastures and wells, and the conflict of groups throughout the ages, one may well consider how much room there really is in the universe, and how much the earth can produce for all, if men would really attempt to realize how much room God has made, and how bountifully he has established the fruitfulness of nature.

THERE is here an instructive and suggestive statement that throws considerable light upon the narrative. We are told that the Philistines had stopped these wells; just why, it is not stated. Possibly they had done so as a hostile act against the Jewish immigrants. One might reflect that if the Philistines had been more concerned about opening wells than about stopping them up, they might have had more of the prosperity that they envied and feared in Isaac.

said, will not be an easy job. They will be wrapped in rolls of 50 and packed in cartons of 10 rolls each. The cartons will be sold to merchants at $1 each and no carton will be split.

It will cost the state $1.86 a thousand to manufacture the tokens, Fink said, and they will be sold at face value, $2 a thousand. The tax commission said that an estimated half-million tokens will disappear monthly from circulation, which will mean an annual loss of approximately $10,000.

"At this rate," he said, "the state must manufacture about 6,000,000 new tokens every year to replace those lost and carried out of the state by travelers."

The Kansas sales tax law states that all merchants shall collect 2 per cent on every sale.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. How long have women been serving as notaries in Texas?

A. The first were appointed to this position by the legislature in 1887, there being two women among 5,000 appointments at that session.

A. It is said that Sam Houston had the "duelist oath" inserted because of his forced participation in a duel, to which method of settling differences he was strongly averse.

Q. May a person hold more than one office of emolument in Texas at the same time?

A. It has frequently been ruled that he may not, even if the offices be appointive, and the remuneration of either or both of them be in fees of office rather than salaries.

A. Dr. H. Y. Benedict, president of the University of Texas, and Dr. H. F. Estill, president of Sam Houston State Teachers' College, both of whom were among the first students of their schools. Dr. Estill, who is retiring from the presidency of the Huntsville College, has been president of that school for 29 years and a teacher in it for more than 50 years.

Q. When was Mary Hardin-Baylor College moved to Belton and what schools did it succeed?

A. Baylor Female College became the name of the first girl's school established in Texas when it was moved to Belton in 1886 from Independence where it was started by a Miss Trask, from Boston, in 1834-35, that place then being known as Cole's settlement. In appreciation of a large gift the name was changed a few years ago to Mary Hardin-Baylor College, to include the name of one of the donors.

CHICAGO—Spring football is drawing to a close in the midwest, where they go into it more thoroughly than elsewhere.

Spring football in various sections varies from two weeks of calisthenics and light drill to six weeks of intensive workouts, including scrimmage and a regular intrasquad game once a week.

Most coaches find the spring drill as vitally necessary as fall practice.

Spring training is not as intensive in the east and on the Pacific coast as it is in Big Ten territory and the south. This is due to the fact that spring sports are big stuff on the eastern and western seaboard.

Most of the schools conclude spring training with an annual clinic. Visiting coaches drop in to learn something. The Pittsburgh and other clinics have become famous.

In spring practice, coaches as a rule work with new men—upcoming freshmen and the reserves of the previous campaign. Many regulars play baseball, are out for track and field, golf, etc.

COACHES experiment with new plays and formations, realizing that experimentation in the fall is liable to prove disastrous. They must acquaint their men with new stuff in the spring because there is so little time to do so in late September, October, and November, when the great majority of teams must point for every game on the schedule.

Coaches also seek to develop key men to fill spots vacated by graduation or ineligibility.

Minnesota again appears tops in the Big Ten and perhaps in the country. Bernie Bierman worries only because so many Gophers. The toughest moment on the Minnesota program is Notre Dame, where Eimerden probably will have to lead.

Ohio State looks exceptional good, even though Francis complains about being with single good end.

Michigan should start its iron renaissance in 1937.

Northwestern lost heavy graduation, and will have time sticking in the Big Ten race it won last autumn.

NEBRASKA, under Max Jones, again should be Big Six, although Kansas had 50 juniors and sophomore uniforms as it enjoyed a season last fall. Missouri is upgrade.

In the south, Alabama is formidable, or more so, than ever, and Louisiana already has announced it will be hard to head off other championship array peered at Duke.

On the west coast, California should be strong at any time since 1931.

Washington again should power on the coast.

Harvard is coming on and won't be any weaker. Penn never can be counted on. Warner has his system well stalled at Temple. Fordham forward to big things, and Pennsylvania wants to stay on.

Pittsburgh ranks number one in the spring and summer in the national title.

Spring practice is drawing close, but coaching schools in June to continue until fall out in the fall.

Football now comes closing an all year 'round sport.

Indian Session to Open On July 29

SPOKANE, Wash.—More than 300 Indian tribesmen from all parts of the United States will assemble here July 29, 30, and 31, for the fourth annual convention of the American Indian Federation. This convention, the only one of its kind sponsored by the U. S. government, will not consist of tribal powwows, but will be patterned somewhat more like the convention of any national group. According to Sam Kash Kash, Cayuse Indian of Pendleton, Ore., president of District No. 2 of the National Indian Federation, the theme of the three-day gathering here will be "The Indian, A Citizen of the United States." Stress will be placed on the treatment of Indian problems on a citizenship basis. Kash Kash said the convention

He said that little if any war paint, eagle feathers, headgear, etc., would be brought to the convention by the tribal chiefs. When in Spokane, Kash Kash was attired like any American business man except that he wore a ten-gallon faun colored hat. Presidents from seven Indian districts of the United States will attend. # Spotlight Focused on Stage Wedding at Arcadia Tonight

Many Guests Expected to Attend Stage Wedding at Arcadia Theatre Tonight

The stage wedding which takes place tonight at 9:30 o'clock at the Arcadia theatre unites in marriage Miss Katherine Stewart, daughter of Mrs. H. L. Stewart, Sr., and Mr. Bert Coffin, formerly of Dallas.

The stage upon which the couple are to recite their vows will offer a fitting scene with decorations under the supervision of W. C. Wall of the Ranger Floral company.

The wedding plan has met with a cordial response from Ranger merchants who have generously contributed attractive and useful gifts.

At 12:30 today a rehearsal of the wedding party was held, with Mrs. Weldon Webb, noted organist, offering the nuptial music.

It is remembered on the evening of April 24, 1935, the present assistant manager, Ted Waggoner, and his bride, were married on the stage, and proved one of the unique social happenings to have been recorded or written in society annals. Over one thousand persons were present for the wedding.

The marriage ties in with the showing of the feature picture, "Waikiki Wedding," presenting a cast of such popular screen personalities as Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye and Shirley Ross.

Rancher Rests In Self-Made Coffin After Long Wait

AKRON, Colo. — Frederick Jesse's body rested today in the casket that he made himself and kept beside his bed for 18 years.

His first wife, who immigrated with him from Russia in 1884, died more than 30 years ago. After that, Jesse began contemplating death. But the residents of this pioneer settlement did not learn of his strange obsessions until after he died.

Jesse was born in Gornies, Poland, in 1841. Later he moved to Ousfka, Russia. Then, at the age of 43, Jesse came to America with his wife.

After landing at Baltimore, Jesse and his wife crossed the plains and filed a homestead in Washington County, Colo., 22 miles south of Akron.

Together they fought and won the battles of frontier life. When she died three decades ago, Jesse delayed her burial until he completed with his own hands a beautiful, hand-carved casket.

Jesse was past 70 then. He contemplated his own death, selected a burial place beside his first wife, and carefully tended the measured plot. He talked of dying frequently and said that then he would again be happy.

His children married and left. Beautiful ballet Friday night. All seats reserved for 25 cents.

Fanny Ward, who has been the perennial flapper more years than most persons can remember, is pictured above as she stepped off the boat in England, swathed in furs and bound for London and the coronation. Her three grandchildren accompanied her.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOAN BARRETT, heroine, secretary to John Hendry.
JOHN HENDRY, mining investment bank.
BOB ANDREWS, Hendry's junior partner and Joan's fiancé.
SYBIL HENDRY, socialite, John Hendry's niece and Joan's rival in love.
PHILIP HENDRY, Sybil's brother.
DOROTHY STARKE, Joan's childhood friend.
CHARLES NOITON, California mining promoter.

Yesterday John Hendry tells Bob that he has provided for Joan in his will after the two discuss old mining days in California and the murder of Jeremiah Jordan.

CHAPTER XVI

NORTON was in the office again on Wednesday. Joan shuddered now every time she saw the man. Bob was right; he was a horrible person. But his presence was even more terrifying to her. He was another link to the past, and she could not breathe easily again until he was on his way back to California.

Shortly before noon, Mr. Hendry brought the man over to her desk. "Mr. Norton wants to make a few changes in some of the terms of that agreement," he said to Joan. "Think you can go over it with him?"

"Of course," she said. "Good. I've a luncheon appointment with my lawyer, Charles. So I'll have to run along. Miss Barrett will take good care of you."

Norton looked down at Joan, a slight smile twisting his lip. His eyes were expressionless. "I'm sure she will," he said.

He drew up a chair alongside of her desk and took out his copy of the Bella Terra sales agreement. Mr. Hendry went back for his hat and coat. A moment later, he stopped on his way out.

"By the way," he said to Joan, "I don't expect to be back this afternoon. If you want a few hours to go shopping . . ."

Joan smiled. "Thank you, Mr. Hendry. I do."

Norton smiled again. For some inexplicable reason, Joan wished that Mr. Hendry had not left her alone with him. He looked like Dracula, she told herself, and half expected him to stand up, spread out his long arms, and turn into a vampire bat. For the first time in all the years she had been working, she felt uncomfortable for being alone with a man. She hoped his work would get taking long.

He went through the apartment slowly, thoughtfully.

sionally he dictated a paragraph to be added, or changed. As she took down the notes, she could feel his eyes burning into her.

After ten or fifteen minutes, he laid the papers aside, deliberately. He noticed that the tiny clock on her desk marked the hour of noon.

"It's twelve o'clock," he remarked. "I'm keeping you from your lunch."

"That's quite all right," Joan assured him, her tone crisp and businesslike.

"I think it would be very much nicer," he suggested, "if I look you to lunch. We could return later and finish this."

Joan started, uncomprehendingly. "I'm very sorry," she stammered. "I can't—not today."

Norton smiled again. "I distinctly heard Mr. Hendry tell you to take the afternoon off. Why can't we spend it together?"

"I—I have an engagement," she said. "Don't tell me that!" He laughed at her, waving aside her excuses. "How can you have an engagement when you just learned a moment ago that you would be free?"

He rose carefully, walked over to the window and pointed outdoors. "It's too perfect an afternoon to waste in an office," he commented. "And I'm a stranger in your city. Surely you could show me a little hospitality . . ."

HE returned to his chair, and as he passed in back of Joan, he too dropped his hand to pat her shoulder. But in his manner of doing it there was none of the fatherly kindness which Mr. Hendry's similar action had denoted. Norton's touch on her shoulder was deliberate, purposeful, and unpleasant. Joan writhed under it.

"I do have a luncheon engagement," she insisted. "Do you mind if we finish this as quickly as possible? I should not like to be late."

"You can break the appointment," he said.

"It's quite impossible," she retorted sharply. "There is no way in which I can reach the friend I am to meet."

"A lady friend, I suppose?" he asked impudently.

"Yes."

"Then suppose I take you both to lunch, and you and I can enjoy ourselves alone, later on."

"I'm sorry, Mr. Norton. Your invitation really is a little—embarrassing."

She laid her left hand on the desk, where the sunlight picked up the brilliant sparkle of the diamond in her ring. The gesture was not lost on Norton. He laughed, brazenly.

"So that's the reason!" he remarked. "The boy friend's jealous, eh?"

"No—not exactly—"

Still laughing, he patted the hand that wore the ring. Joan pulled it away quickly.

"Don't be so old-fashioned, my dear," Norton advised. "What the boy friend doesn't know will never matter. While he's working hard this lovely afternoon, you and I can steal a march—"

"Please understand, Mr. Norton. It's quite impossible. I'm engaged to marry Mr. Andrews, of this office. You know him, of course. I don't think Mr. Hendry would like—"

Norton looked up in surprise. "Young Andrews, eh? Well, that does complicate matters. John Hendry would never have me cutting in on Andrews' territory . . . the lucky devil!"

He leaned closer, and once again his dark eyes looked into her very soul.

"You know you are quite the loveliest girl!" he murmured. "Your face has haunted me, ever since I met you."

Joan squirmed.

"There's something about you that reminds me of someone . . ."

Norton persisted. "Someone I knew . . . did you ever live in California?"

"No!" Joan almost shouted the denial, drawing away from his nearness. Quickly, however, she gathered her wits. "That is," she amended, less violently, "not since I was a baby. I was born in Sacramento, but my family left California when I was still an infant." Dorothy's spirit hovered over, prompting, strengthening.

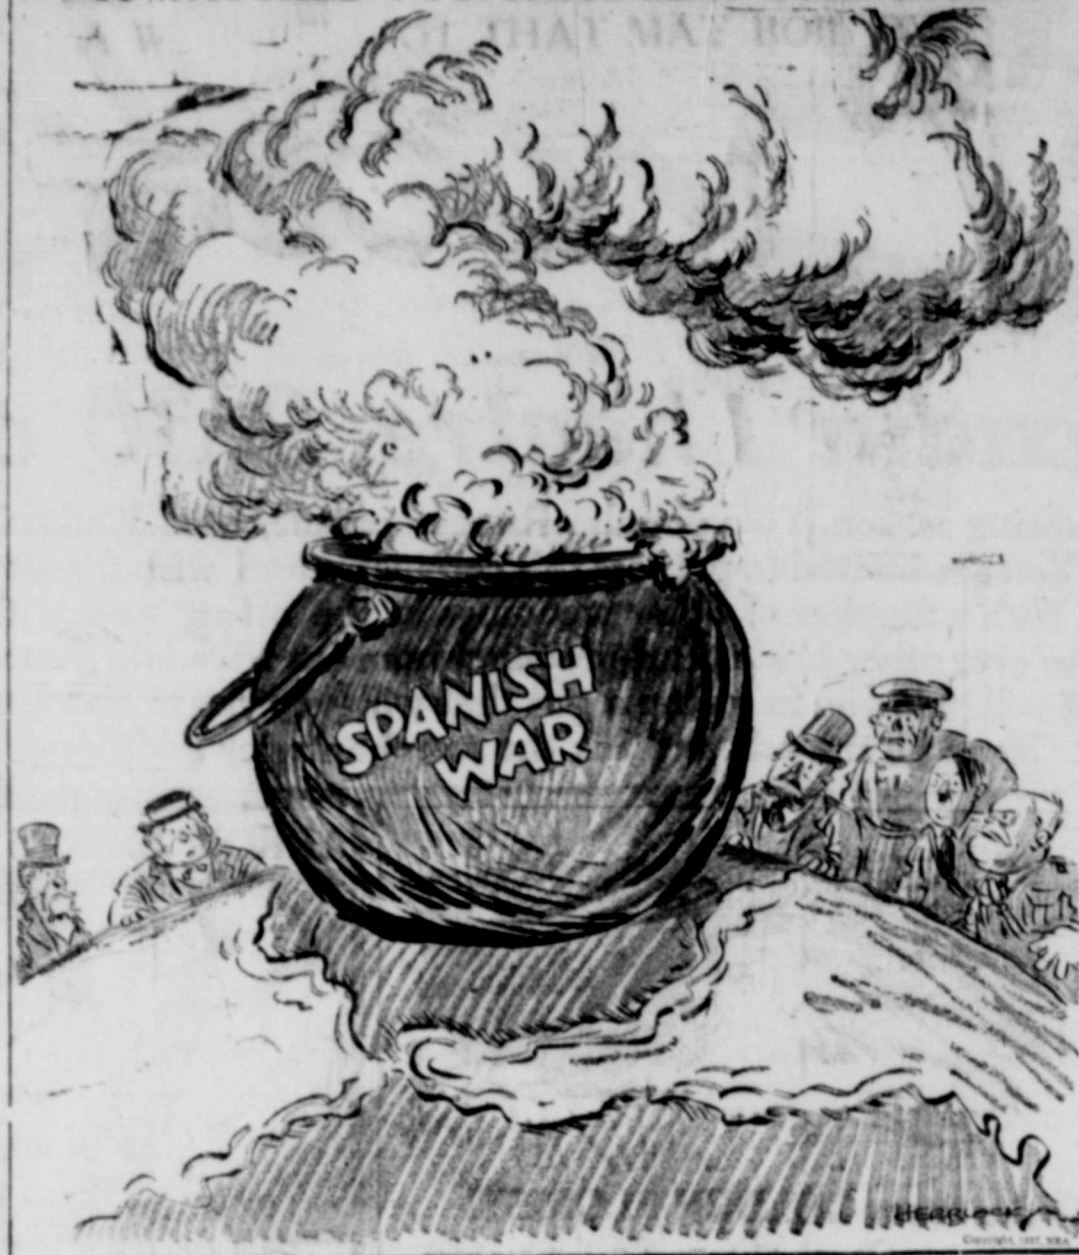

Norton smiled. "But you did come from California! I knew it. You always tell a Sunshine girl . . . Who was your father? I might have known him. I lived in Sacramento for years . . ."

Joan's nerves were quivering. She couldn't feel this man. His eyes saw too much. Even now they were probing, seeking, wondering what caused her hesitation. Was he tormenting her, knowing full well who her father was?

With all the strength of will she possessed, she forced herself to smile, and to answer lightly. "I imagine my father stayed in Sacramento just long enough for me to join his family . . . I really come from a long line of gypsies. California was just one more stopping-off place."

As Film Industry Faced Paralyzing Strike

Hollywood's highest paid actors had to pass through picket lines, and the paralysis of the entire $25,000,000 motion picture industry was threatened when 11 technicians' unions went on strike, demanding a "closed shop." Typical scenes as the strike spread are shown here. Pickets have massed before the entrance to the Perfect Picture Studio, where films are being made in the street, in front of the studio and unmindful of the strike.

WASHINGTON.—The men in charge of the Republican machinery are far busier behind the scenes than the audience imagines.

Concerted effort to establish a party policy and a definite party record in Congress is being combined with unannounced efforts to line up Republican and conservative Democratic members in an unofficial, loosely working alliance against measures supported by the administration.

Although it is too early as yet to foresee a new political realignment of parties along liberal and conservative lines, recent events in both Senate and House have at least indicated that there exist the makings of it.

REPUBLICAN senators and representatives meet every week-end with National Chairman John Hamilton and experts in the field of political and governmental problems available for such secret conferences.

With them sit Hamilton's keen-minded assistant, former Under Secretary of State William R. Castle, William Hard, Publicity Director Leo J. Casey, and Research Director Olin Glenn Saxon. Saxon is supposed to have been the man behind Senator Vandenberg's recent assertion that he believed New Deal estimates of unemployment were about 5,000,000 too high. A new money-raising campaign has collected more than a hundred thousand Republican dollars in the last two months, and $50,000 more in promises, according to the Republican record.

THE Republican record is a new and interesting four-page publication of the committee, which is sent to key party officials, workers and members as part of the new activity of party leaders, who watch hawk-like for the first chance to start on the way toward overturning the huge Democratic victory of last November. It attempts to trace the general line of G. O. P. policy, strategy and accomplishment. Hamilton started it off with a message assuring the faithful that many Roosevelt supporters, "hurt and disappointed" by the President's Supreme Court plan, "are pondering a new political allegiance." He said that he would have the Republican party fight "unfair employers just as earnestly as it fights the lawlessness of the sitdown."

The record boasts of Republican unity behind the present Supreme Court. It explains on noble grounds the effort of Republican leaders to keep silent on the court issue, while egging on the opposition Democrats. It doesn't admit the Republicans saw that strong, united and articulate Republican opposition might help Roosevelt. It says "the Republican party has chosen, with its attitude toward the proposal clearly understood by all, to put aside any political advantage."

GREAT stress is laid on recent voting coalitions of Republicans and Democrats. Unity of the Republican Party is a substantial Democratic group is cited in the vote on the Byrnes amendment to the Guffey coal bill, which would have condemned the sitdown strike without mentioning any provocative tactics of employers. The record also points with pride to Republican votes against the Guffey coal bill and Vandenberg's proposals for social security reform; also to Republican support of crop insurance, Vandenberg's child labor amendment, Republican demands for an investigation of the radio industry and other proposals by Republican members.

Aluminum Company. He prosecuted the Mellon tax case. IN time past, during that long period when Andrew W. Mellon was secretary of the treasury, the Aluminum Company received various consents for its practice from the Department of Justice. And there were no prosecutions. There was an embarrassing moment more than 10 years ago when Atty. Gen. Harlan Fiske Stone, a newcomer here, decided the Aluminum Company should be prosecuted. Andrew Mellon showed enthusiasm over Stone's availability for the Supreme Court and President Coolidge appointed Stone to a seat on that bench, where he still functions vigorously. After attempting to appoint a lawyer whose connection with another trust led to public outcry, Coolidge named to succeed Stone an old friend from Vermont. He developed the sit-down technique in official position to a new high point and regaled newspaper correspondents with fishing stories. Senator Tom Walsh was named attorney general by Roosevelt. He promised one of his first acts would be to bring suit against the aluminum trust. But he died before he had the chance. Atty. Gen. Homer S. Cummings never got around to it until just the other day. But Cummings has always been politically-minded and completely loyal to the White House, so it is fair to assume that the president never pushed him on it very hard. It is also fair to assume that one big reason the Aluminum Company hasn't heard from the Department of Justice before is that Roosevelt favored instead the NRA idea and its provisions for suspension of anti-trust laws. And it does take a lot of time to prepare an anti-trust case.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The $174,000,000 Aluminum Company of America, sued for dissolution in an anti-trust suit by the Department of Justice, is "at a loss to understand" why it is being prosecuted.

All, however, eventually will be made clear. Perhaps no one will ever quite explain why Roosevelt waited four years before having his attorney general take some such action against the "aluminum trust." But here is a bit of confidential tipoff for the Mellons and their associates:

1.—The suit is a vital test case for the anti-trust laws. The government isn't certain that the Supreme Court hasn't so devitalized those laws as to make them ineffective. But it believes that if there is any business group which can be successfully prosecuted under the monopoly laws, it is the Aluminum Company's organization.

2.—The administration, as previously reported in these dispatches, is worried about price inflation. It thinks the threat of a crash resulting from price inflation comes chiefly from industries in which prices are controlled. It says that after Aluminum Company's stock increased from $9,571,900 in 1935 to $20,866,000 in 1936, and looked certain to increase in 1937, the corporation still went ahead and raised prices a few weeks ago.

3.—Most important of all, for the first time since anyone can remember, the assistant attorney general in charge of the department's anti-trust law division is a man who means business. Assist. Atty. Gen. Robert H. Jackson will be no stranger to the owners of

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox
NEA Service Staff Writer

A LARGE wedding in a small house is often anything but merry. If you like crowds, then plan to celebrate the big day under the equipped and spacious care of a good hotel. In the end your bills will probably be no higher and everyone will be happier.

Make your plans far in advance. Discuss them with the banquet department of the hotel you have chosen.

"Here's what I'd suggest," says Oscar of the Waldorf, an old hand at making wedding parties outstandingly pleasant. "If canapés and cocktails or sherry are served first, then the first course for the wedding breakfast should be soup. If no cocktails are served, then begin with a fruit cup.

Main Course Must Be Delicate. "After the soup comes a fish or egg entrée, then the main course. It may be squab, guinea hen or breast of chicken with dainty vegetables such as asparagus tips or small fine peas. Remember, this noted host warns, "that the main course at the wedding breakfast, served between noon and 1 p. m., must be something light and delicate; certainly never beef, pork or lamb."

From his long experience with large weddings, Oscar adds these valuable hints: the bride and bridegroom stand in the reception room with the parents of both. Often, however, the father of the groom is considered just a "guest" and the father of the bride more so a "host," while the young couple and the two mothers receive.

Cards Pair Off Guests. When the gentlemen guests check their coats, they are presented with cards bearing the name of the lady they are to escort to breakfast. When breakfast is announced, the orchestra plays the wedding march and the guests enter the room, the bride and groom and wedding party last to enter. At one large table, the bride and groom are seated at the head of it, the wedding party next to them, and the parents next and then the guests. Or there may be several tables. The bride and groom and party sit at one, the parents and close friends at another, and the guests at other tables.

The bride and groom frequently leave first after the breakfast. The bride's parents are the last to leave and not until they have seen the last guests off. All expenses and arrangements for the wedding breakfast are the responsibility of the bride's mother.

British Arming Rockets the H.C.L.

LONDON.—Great Britain's rearmament program is bringing a rapid rise in the cost of living, a survey reveals.

Food prices are rising rapidly, and boots, shoes, furniture, clothes and most of the necessities of life are expected to go up, in some cases by as much as a third, as present stocks are exhausted.

There will be a sharp rise in many prices toward the end of May. The cost of living index will make an upward curve. Everything metal, from pins to frying pans, and even wireless arials, is already dearer.

Clothing and equipment for the army, metal and other raw material for guns, planes and tanks, have formed a heavy drain on supplies. As the arms program is carried out, the drain will increase, and prices will continue to leap upward. The full effect has not yet been realized, for buyers for large stores, and middlemen, were instructed to give heavy orders for certain classes of goods as soon as the arms program was announced.

Tobacco, cigarettes, cinemas and other luxuries will become dearer as their prices are forced upward in sympathy with those of basic commodities.

Briefly, the rearmament will mean a return during peace to almost wartime price levels, with consequent hardship for millions of families.

Of the 11,187,000 insured persons in work, and the thousands of others outside the scope of the insurance acts, only between 1,250,000 and 1,500,000 wage earners, representing, with their families, 4,000,000 persons, have wages governed by collective agreements or orders under the trade board acts, which fluctuate with the cost of living index. And their wage variations lag behind the rise in prices.

Since 1936 the wholesale price of food in Britain has risen 12 per cent. The pound is now worth to the housewife only 17 shillings and sixpence, by the standards of a year ago. Here are the percentage increase in retail prices in two years only, of some of the staple commodities of life: flour, 16, bread 21, tea 9, sugar 7, milk 1-2, butter 5, cheese 9, margarine 19, eggs 28, potatoes 36.

As a result of the arms demand on metals, aluminum wear—pots, pans and kettles — has already been increased in price to the public by 10 per cent. Tinned and iron wares are up by 33 per cent, and enamel by 20 per cent. Further increases in the prices of these articles will soon be made.

For a few woolen articles, such as sports shirts, prices to the public are up by 5 per cent, but the real increase is admittedly in yet to come. Wholesale prices are now asking 10 to 12 per cent more for dyed cotton goods, and 5 per cent more for rough cotton goods, such as mops. The increased price will be passed on to the public next month.

Cutlery is 5 per cent dearer owing to the shortage of raw material. Even pins have gone up in price; brass by 10 per cent, and steel by 5. Laundries, dressmakers and tailors, who use enormous quantities each year, and eventually the public, will be affected.

Leather rose in price by 25 per cent last October, following the Chapel

Maybe we aren't all in Mr. Riehm's classes, but evidently the word has been passed around that he thinks something should be done about our singing in chapel, because "Old Black Joe" "rang out" Wednesday morning. Rev. Gray delivered a very interesting address and if we would stop and think and then try some of his suggestions we would live in a pretty good old world. What do you think?

Dramatics Club

Wednesday evening at 6:30 the Masquers and their guests went out to Seenic Point on a picnic. After running themselves to a frazzle in a treasure hunt everyone enjoyed the generous supply of sandwiches, pickles, olives, potato chips, bananas, oranges, apples and cookies. Then the boys and girls kept the little wild animals awake with their serenading that could have used not a little harmony. When the "picnicers" came to town Mrs. Hunter, the sponsor, took the group to the Oil City Pharmacy for drinks. Every effort was put forth to make Wednesday evening an enjoyable evening for it was the last Masquers social of the year.

College Day

Last Friday, April 30, was college day and we college students went to Cisco Dam for an all-day picnic. I mean an all day outing. It could have been an all day picnic, too, for we certainly had enough food. Most of the students got to Cisco between 10 and 11 and made for the skating rink. The owner of the rink let us skate all for 25c, and we were permitted to take off the skates and put them back on whenever we pleased. Before lunch there were hot 42 games going on and I'm sure that many of the skaters had hot-I mean that the skating rink was hot.

Mr. Riehm and Mr. Walton came over for lunch, but had to be back in Ranger before two o'clock. After lunch many made a long run for the skating rink but most of us sat around for a while wondering why in the world we ate so much and regretting that our ice cream went to waste.

The swimming pool proved a grand attraction around two and three but by four o'clock there was quite a chorus of ah-h-h-h's because of blistered backs, faces and arms. But in spite of the sunburns and split slacks everyone had a delightful time.

Here and There Mary Ramsey spent last weekend with Druclilla Perry in Parks. Mary Rose O'Neal has the mumps and we hope she soon recovers. See a $2 show for 25 cents.

covers, because we certainly miss her constant chatter in the reading room.

Mrs. Hunter received a letter from Buena Berry this past week and due to ill health Buena won't be able to come back to school. We are very sorry and wish Buena a speedy recovery. We will miss you Buena.

Yours truly can't think of anything any more grand than for our own dear Mr. Walton to be invited to be an "We the People." Don't forget to listen in folks on the radio at the National Broadcasting Company at 3:00 o'clock Sunday, May 15. Don't forget Mr. Walton has a surprise in store for us.

On college day we were very happy to see a few of the ex-students of dear old R. J. C. Yours truly managed to engage the attention of Miss Frances Harrell and Paul Hodge and J. W. Brown for a few moments. Miss Harrell and Mr. Hodge are graduates of 1936.

Bruce Murphy, a graduate of R. J. C., has applied for a position in a bank in Snyder, Texas. Good luck, Bruce.

Miss Vesthia Gree, better known as "Betty" has some sound advice to give girls on embarrassing moments. Just dep around any time.

You Can Do Fast Work with the McCORMICK-DEERING 10-ft. Tractor Binder

THIS binder, designed for use with McCormick-Deering Tractors, brings real speed to the harvest. It is operated through the power take-off of the tractor and has double the daily capacity of an 8-ft. grain binder. In this roller-bearing binder the sickle, reel, canvases, packers, and binding mechanism take their power direct from the engine of the tractor-the binder main wheel simply supports the binder. If the grain clogs, the operator halts the tractor while the binder clears itself. In lodged or very heavy grain, the forward speed of the tractor can be reduced while the normal speed of the binder mechanism is maintained, assuring uninterrupted operation.

Come in and let us tell you more about the McCormick-Deering Tractor Binder.
