PRESIDENT IS ON HIS WAY TO A. & M. COLLEGE

By United Press
HOUSTON, May 11.—President Roosevelt, smiling and tanned after an 11-day fishing vacation, said a 10-minute visit to Houston today.

He spoke briefly from the rear of his 11-car special train to thousands of persons when he arrived from Galveston. The train then left for College Station, where he will inspect Texas A. & M. College and review the school's R. O. T. C. cadets.

He appeared on the rear platform of the train on the arm of his son, Elliott, of Fort Worth, in whose home he will visit tonight and tomorrow.

Gov. Alfred introduced the president.

"I am very glad to come back to Houston and say how much I enjoyed the fishing in Texas," hospitable words, Mr. Roosevelt said. "I might even say that the fish in your waters are as hospitable as your people."

The president had two tarpon, six kingfish and a nine-inch catfish to show for his vacation.

Mrs. Turner explained the different branches of our government, which are the legislative, executive and judicial. The constitution in itself is a rather short and simple document, yet it is the "backbone" of the most complex system of government today, it was explained.

A civil suit between Miss Minter's mother and sister, estranged, brought sensational charges of the diaries bearing on the Taylor murder and reopened the case.

University classes will not meet Wednesday while students pay respects to one they affectionately referred to as Benny. His body will lie in state in the gymnasium two hours Wednesday. ## Ticket Sale For Musical Show Is Unusually Large

BY J. N. CRAWFORD
Tickets for the "Ranger Casa Manana" show for Friday night have been selling faster than was expected, and many of the best seats have already been reserved. Every seat in the Recreation building is a reserved seat, and the price of each seat is 25 cents, whether on the main floor or in the balcony, or whether for child or adult. Parents are requested to not to bring their small children.

Beautiful and especially designed costumes in gay colors will add splendor to the production. The musical and dance numbers add an unusual embellishment to the main part of the evening's entertainment, the unique two-act farce comedy, "Mr. Bob." This comedy is a full evening of entertainment, but it lends itself to be expanded in a most interesting way to a musical extravaganza.

The cast of the entire production was chosen from the most proficient and artistic talent that could be found. Beautiful girls were chosen by the student vote of the high school and junior college. These class beauties will have an outstanding part in one of the musical revues.

EDITION WILL ADVERTISE BIG RODEO EVENTS

A big motoreade, advertising the opening of the rodeo season in Ranger and advertising in particular the rodeo to be staged Wednesday night, May 19, will leave Ranger Monday night, visiting a number of towns in this part of the state. It is expected that this motoreade will be the largest and best of its kind ever attempted locally.

The Ranger Times is preparing a special Rodeo Edition for the motoreade and to advertise the rodeo. The motoreade will be given in a large number of these papers, to be distributed along the route, and in addition a large number will be mailed out with the Sunday morning edition of the paper.

There will be a number of feature attractions on the program that will usher in the rodeo season here. Shorty Ricker, world champion steer bulldogger, will bulldog two steers and other famous rodeo performers will be on hand to take part in other events.

Ten wild Brahma steers have been secured for the steer riding contests, and this part of the program promises to be one of the most exciting features. It will also be the first time the local lighted rodeo field will be put in use in a regular performance. The pens and chutes have been especially designed to eliminate all wasted time between events, so it will be a fast-moving show that should please everyone.

Merchants have been urged to prepare their copy for advertising in the Rodeo Edition as early as possible so that the edition can come out on time and help to draw large crowds to Ranger for Wednesday.

The regular trades day events will be staged in the afternoon in addition to the rodeo that night.

S. Court.

As soon as Mrs. Warfield's divorce became final, it was understood, the royal family decided to be represented at the marriage and the Duke and Duchess of Kent were designated. The government was dismayed at the publicity given her reunion with the duke, though the press had received official hints to "play down" the romance during the coronation.

Attacks Upon State Ports of Entry Are Convention Topic

DALLAS, Tex.—Spirited attacks upon the establishment of state ports of entry will be made by leaders in the Broadway of America Highway Association annual convention in Memphis, Tenn., May 18 and 19.

Action of the Chicago Motor Club and the Automobile Club of Southern California in advising eastern and mid-western traffic to avoid the highway of New Mexico and Arizona because of ports of entry in those states has caused a widespread determination to make this issue one of the principal topics before the Broadway convention.

"If this tendency to throttle traffic with state ports of entry continues, it will make a cow trail out of the western division of Broadway of America," said Henry W. Stanley of Dallas, president of the Broadway Association.

A motoreade originating in San Diego, California, with five cars and gathering other recruits in all the intervening states, will carry most of the delegates to the Memphis convention. The motoreade is scheduled to pass through here on May 15.

W. A. Little, acting director, said the checks for the May payments are ready for mailing but are being delayed until the federal grant is received.

"Our understanding is that the Social Security Board is waiting for a deficiency appropriation from Congress and all states are in the same position," Little said.

Traffic Hazard Grows— at a Killing Pace

We have had something like 20 years now to get used to the auto as the means of mass transportation. In those years we have widened and straightened our roads, studied innumerable traffic systems, built cars that are strong and easily controlled and experimented with all kinds of state license and insurance laws.

Sole result of all this education and experience is that we are killing more people with our cars now than ever before.

The National Safety Council finds that in the first three months of this year some 8500 people were killed by autos. This, alarmingly enough, is a rise of 26 per cent over the rate for 1935.

Why are we doing it? Why is our traffic getting constantly more dangerous instead of getting—as it should, after all these years—steadily safer?

There is no one reason, obviously. But it does not take much thought to figure out several contributory causes.

First and foremost, perhaps, is the fact that we have tried to fit the auto into our traditional system of democratic individualism. We have assumed that it is every man's "right" to drive a car if he can get one. We have hardly begun to tackle the job of ruling dangerous drivers and dangerous cars off the road.

We insist on having cars that will go much faster than nine out of ten people can drive them safely. We shuttle these cars out into crowded roads, let everybody push the accelerator down according to his own sweet will—and then wonder why there are crack-ups.

And there are the cars themselves. They have strong bodies and fine brakes—but this new streamline vogue has produced cars with woefully big blind spots. Instead of giving the driver a wider field of vision they give him a small one. Inevitably, the price is a certain number of accidents.

To top it all, we have hardly any more officers patrolling our roads than we had in the day when there was not half the amount of traffic. The situation calls for far more supervision—hard-boiled, expert supervision—than we have ever dreamed of giving it.

Altogether it adds up to a very tough problem. So far, we simply haven't begun to solve it. Are we going to go on killing ourselves for another 20 years before we get busy on it?

"Ape Runs Amuck in Chicago Zoo." It was rather callous of that Indianapolis clergyman to revive discussion of the Darwin theory.

The Hercules with a sledge hammer, symbolizing labor, seems rather out of date now, and perhaps should be replaced by Rodin's sitdowner.

The Los Angeles Drive-In theatre has one disadvantage. You can't tell the sight-seeing bus in front to take off its hat.

Sue-er in Court, but Not Garbo

Claiming no loaned film star Greta Garbo $10,500 in 1924, before she became a celebrity, D. Schratter, former European film director, brought suit to recover his money. Schratter is shown above with Mrs. Schratter as they appeared in a Los Angeles court on trial day. The case was continued when Garbo, busy on a movie, was excused.

"SUFFERED SIX YEARS WITH CONSTIPATION"

"For six years I suffered with constipation, and I decided to try ALL-BRAN. I have been eating it once a day for about four years, and it has certainly done the work." —Mrs. Herman Futrell, 905 W. Oak Ave., Jonesboro, Ark. Tests prove that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is safe and effective for correcting common constipation. Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water, and gently exercises and cleanses the intestines. It also furnishes vitamin B to tone the intestines, and iron for the blood. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as a cereal with milk or cream, or in cooked dishes. Three times daily in severe cases. You'll find this food far better than habit-forming pills and drugs. ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Roots Crossed to Curb Peach Foes

WASHINGTON — Through a triumph of tree budding and grafting, the Department of Agriculture has developed a peach tree said to be immune from root-knot. Root-knot, a disease which causes extensive damage to trees in the light sandy soils of the South and Southwest, is caused by the celform, which lives in the soil and attacks the roots of the trees. Two rootstocks for peaches, both so resistant to root-knot that they are virtually immune, have been introduced and tested by the department. Both promote vigorous growth of peach trees budded on them—also normal bloom and fruit. Seedlings of the Shall peach, a variety grown in the extreme northwestern part of India, were reported resistant in 1934. Further tests have confirmed its desirability, the department said. The second rootstock, a hybrid, is from a cross between the Quetta nectarine and the Bolivian cling peach. The Shall may be propagated from seed. The Hybrid propagates readily from root cuttings.

ARMING HIM FOR DUTY

No arm gets more tender treatment or attention than the million dollar wing belonging to Master Robert Feller, sensational young strikeout artist of the Cleveland Indians. Trainer Lefty Weisman applies hot towels to the speedball pitcher's arm to bake out the soreness. Feller strained his arm in his first start of the campaign. The Iowa farm boy struck out 11 St. Louis Browns in six innings.

Rail Board at Strike Inquiry

The special presidential emergency board investigating conditions which threaten a strike of 25,000 railway freight handlers in the New York area is shown above in its first session. Left to right, Leo Shurman, chairman of the division of economics, University of Michigan; Frank M. Swacker, former assistant attorney general; William H. Davis, former NRA compliance director. The dispute involves union jurisdiction over railway freight handlers.

Alimony Sitter Warming Up

Chill winds and rain sent Mrs. Genevieve Johnson, Longmoor, Colo., alimony sifter, huddling into warm blankets, sniffling and shivering, as the above photo shows. However, she was determined to stay in her husband's front yard until he paid back the money, she said. Sympathizers, like this truck driver with bougie, brought her food. Meanwhile Longmoor tourist business boomed.

CHAPTER XVIII

Philip sat in a tiny ice cream parlor opposite the Eastman High School and sipped hot chocolate. He wished the ice cream parlor were a cafe, and the hot chocolate a highball, but at least he was on the right track, he felt, that was something.

His eyes were glued on the lake and the school. As yet, however, he was not in an appearance.

In the five minutes' conversation Philip had enjoyed with the secretary to the principal of Eastman High, he had learned three things about Miss Baldwin. First, that she had been working for the prominent Miss Greeley for less than six months; second, that she disliked her almost as much as she did; and third, that she usually left the school at 3 o'clock daily.

Since early afternoon, therefore, Philip had hunted the Eastman grounds and the little soda parlor in the hope of a chance encounter with Miss Baldwin. But Miss Baldwin had not appeared. Neither had he seen her leaving the school in the afternoon, although he managed to be on hand promptly at 3 o'clock.

In his pocket was a frantic note from Sybil. Bob, so the note said, was marrying the girl very shortly. Philip must discover something immediately! There was less than two weeks before then.

MISS BALDWIN, he felt sure, was his only chance. She had access to the record cards; she could tell him, at least, why Joan Barrett had left school, and where she had lived previously.

That is, if he ever got hold of her again. But a half hour later Miss Baldwin stepped into the ice cream parlor and Philip was quick to seize his opportunity. Soon he was seated opposite Miss Baldwin consuming another hot chocolate.

"And you really have been watching for me every day?" Miss Baldwin asked Philip again.

"Every day," Philip assured her. "Miss Baldwin smiled. "What a line you have! Do you expect me to believe that?" "I want you to," Philip forced an emotional tremor into his voice and gazed across the table soulfully. She's a silly little fool, he thought, and I'll never regret leaving her. . . .

"Will you have dinner with me tonight?" he suggested presently. "Tonight?" Miss Baldwin giggled. "Gee, you work fast."

"Isn't that the way? When you see what you want, isn't it best to go right after it—before some other fellow gets it first?"

Miss Baldwin blushed under the intensity of his gaze. "Oh, I bet you've said that to lots of girls."

"How about dinner?" "All right."

"Will you meet me in the lobby of my hotel?"—he named it—quite the best in Seattle—and Miss Baldwin raised an eyebrow appreciatively. "I'm apt to get lost in this strange city. . . . That is, if you don't mind?"

"Oh, no, I don't mind. What'll I wear?" She asked it anxiously. "Wear? Oh, anything. What's the matter with what you have on—that's a pretty dress. . . ."

"Oh, this rag? I mean, shall I come formal?" "Formal?"

"Yes. Don't you wear a tuxedo to dinner in the hotel?" "Suppose we don't dress tonight. . . . I've only been here a few days, you see, and my trunk hasn't arrived."

"Oh, Miss Baldwin was a trifle disappointed. "What time shall I come?"

"Seven o'clock?" "All right. I'd better run along now and get a manicure. . . ."

SHE arrived promptly on the dot of seven, formally informal in a long black satin dress with glittering accessories.

"Am I late?" she asked coyly. "No, indeed. And you look lovelier every time I see you. He led the way into the dining room. "I've reserved this table over in the corner. It's a nice quiet spot."

"Quiet?" Miss Baldwin repeated in dismay. "Isn't there dancing?" "You don't really want to dance, do you?"

"Well—I thought—" "Suppose we have our dinner first, then we can think of dancing later. Or would you rather see a show?"

Miss Baldwin smiled coquettishly. "I just love to dance," she murmured.

"Dancing it shall be, then." And it was not until they were dancing in the grill, four hours later, that Philip managed to reach the matter uppermost in his mind. "I can't imagine a girl like you," he said, "wearing herself out as secretary to that fierce old tyrant."

Miss Baldwin laughed. "Oh, it isn't so bad," she replied. "I get paid well, and the hours are short."

"But that Miss Greeley—when?" "You have to have a pull with her."

"So I imagine. I guess my friend Miss Barrett was on the wrong side."

"Why?" "Oh, the poor kid's in a jam."

"And Greeley wouldn't help?" "Not a bit." He shook his head sadly. "Well, I've done all I could."

Miss Baldwin was sympathetic. "What's it all about?" she asked.

THE dance ended, and they wove their way through the other couples back to their own table. When they were seated again, Philip resumed the sad story of Miss Barrett.

"This Joan Barrett is in line to inherit some money," he said. Then, lest Miss Baldwin think him a two-timing scoundrel, he hastened to explain: "Incidentally, she's engaged to marry my best friend."

Miss Baldwin smiled happily. "My uncle is her attorney," Philip went on. "A grandfather in California left quite an estate—and believe me, Joan could use a little of it right now. It so happens that her mother was disowned when she married—you know the old story—and now we have the job of proving that Joan really is the old man's grandchild. The only way we can do it, of course, is to trace her history back, and school records help."

"And Greeley wouldn't give it to you?" "Nope. She told me her marks in mathematics and how many times she was late in the first term, but what we need is some sort of transfer date from Eastman High to the previous school she attended. You see, we have to trace her back to the town where her grandfather lived."

"Of course. I don't see why Miss Greeley couldn't have told you. I tell you, I'll get the information for you."

"Can you?" "Of course. I have her record card on my desk now. Suppose I phone you tomorrow—at noon."

"Will you do that? Boy, you're a swell kid!" He patted her hand appreciatively.

BROOKLYN.—Ran into Burleigh Grimes the other day. He was standing, of course, outside the Brooklyn ball park. This is where you'll find Mr. Grimes most any day—outside the ball park, even though as manager he ought to be in there with his Dodgers.

But, you know, Mr. Grimes, who created something of a record in the American Association by being evicted from parks 27 times by insulter umpires last season, is carrying on as usual in the National League now. The campaign was only a week old before Mr. Grimes had been chased twice on successive days.

However, Mr. Grimes doesn't want people to be getting the idea that he is feuding with the umpires. . . . "I only got one feud in this league," said Mr. Grimes, considerably spluttering his tobacco juice so that it was gone with the wind, "and that's with Drensen."

As you perhaps know, Mr. Grimes and Mr. Charley Drensen, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, exchanged some hot words during an exhibition game down south after two of Mr. Grimes' infielders had been cut down by wild-running Reds.

"HES a little fool, that Drensen guy is," said Mr. Grimes. "Why, after he hurt that second man of mine, I say to him, 'Gee, Charley, what're you doing out there?' It's just an exhibition game. And he says, 'Tell your guys to watch us. I'm teaching my men to slide just as if it was the regular season. We are playing to win the game all the time.'"

"Imagine! Why, it sounded like a schoolboy, didn't it, huh?" "Well, two can play that sort of game, but I'm not going to do it. I'm not going to tell my players to go out and cut down their basemen. When we meet that gang of clumsy rowdies it won't be leg for leg, spike for spike, or gash for gash. That's not the way to get even with Drensen."

"You see, he's got a guy out there playing for him who's one of my best friends—Charley Gelbert. Charley's playing now with only a leg and a half. He had a terrible time for a couple of years after he near blew his leg off with a shotgun."

"Well, as I was saying, Charley's one of my best friends. A swell guy. And do you think for one minute that I'd send one of my strong young bucks out to cut Charley down—maybe break his leg, ruin him for life?"

"Wouldn't that be a helluva trick? There Charley would be, broken down, unable to play, and forced to go back to a farm to make his living. And there that Drensen guy would be, hollering like a cheerleader, still safe on his job, gathering in the checks, and laying other fellows open to unnecessary injuries."

"No, sir," said he, "that's not my game. If I'm doing any fighting, I'll do it myself. I won't have nine other guys with spikes in their shoes doing it for me. We'll play baseball—and we'll play our heads off against his club."

"You know," he went on gleefully, "that guy'll wind up behind the eight ball. He's got the whole league down on his neck talking the way he's been and they're all going to be out after him. Just watch. He's heading for a fall. They'll beat his ears back."

KINDLY advice to women who live alone and don't like to learn how to make a strawberry blitz torte. It tastes as sweet as wedding bells in June.

Strawberry Blitz Torte (6 servings)
 One and one-third cups sifted cake flour, 1-4 teaspoon combination baking powder, 1-2 cup butter, 1-2 cup sugar, 4 egg yolks, unbeaten, 5 tablespoons milk—4 egg whites, 1 cup sugar, 1 quart perfect May strawberries, crushed and sweetened.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating very thoroughly after adding each. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Spread in two 9-inch greased layer pans.

Beat egg whites until foamy throughout. Add sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating after each addition until sugar is thoroughly blended. After all sugar is added, continue beating until mixture will stand in peaks. Spread in equal amounts on top of each layer. Bake layers in slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 25 minutes, then increase the heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake 30 minutes longer. When cool, spread with crushed sweetened strawberries. Cut in wedges for servings.

Gather ye rosebuds while ye may and make jelly while strawberries are cheap in the market. Summer will fade but breakfast loast goes on forever.

Strawberry Jelly (12 6-ounce glasses)
 Four cups strawberry juice, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 8 cups sugar, 1 bottle fruit pectin. Use fully ripe strawberries. Grind or crush about 3 quarts berries thoroughly. Place fruit in jelly bag and squeeze out juice. Measure. Add lemon juice. Measure sugar and fruit juice into large saucepan. Mix. Bring to boil over hottest fire and immediately add pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for 1-2 minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly into glasses. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

Children's Spring Recital Offered in Beautiful Garden Setting

The stage at the Recreation auditorium has never offered a prettier picture than was reflected Monday evening when Mrs. L. E. White presented her expression class in a spring recital at 8 o'clock.

The beauty of springtime was accentuated through the gorgeous setting forming a background of greenery clinging softly to trellis and doorways. Roses, a profusion of them, together with other blossoms, dotted the graceful runners casting their pastel colors against the more sombre tones. To complete this setting garden chairs in red, green and yellow were cozily arranged about the stage.

Programs in red and white were given guests by Mrs. Roy Jameson, frocked in a red formal, and Mrs. T. J. Powell, wearing a pale pink taffeta.

Mrs. L. E. White was attractively attired in a Copenhagen blue, with head-dress fashioned from red blossoms. Misses Marguerite Adamson and Francine Hatley, pianists, and Miss Muri Deane Murrell, violinist, wore lovely formal.

The girls on program also wore wearing pretty pastel frocks, blending in with the garden's rainbow of harmonizing hues.

The audience, made up of persons who enjoy and appreciate talent, was generous with rounds of applause. The entertainment is said by many to be the most beautiful and well-balanced of any theatre program to have been attempted by children of this respective branch.

for WOMEN only

CARDUI is a special medicine for the relief of some of the suffering which results from a woman's weakened condition. It has been found to make monthly periods less disagreeable, and, when its use has been kept up awhile, has helped many poorly nourished women to get more strength from their food. This medicine (pronounced "Card-u-i") has been used and recommended by women for many years. Find out whether it will help you by giving it a fair trial. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

Plans For Ranger Kid Movie Draw Interest of Many

B. E. Garner, manager of the Arcadia theatre, said this morning that a great deal of interest is being shown in the "Kid Movie" to be made here soon, using a cast of about 75 local children. This entire picture will be made in Ranger, using the parks and other beauty spots of the city.

Melton Barker, movie producer who discovered Spunky McFarland, now starring in Hal Roach's Our Gang productions, will direct the picture.

Children between the ages of 3 to 12 years who have not registered and wish to try out for a part must register at the Arcadia theatre at once. When the casting director arrives Thursday he will get in touch with those who have registered and have them come to the theatre for an interview.

Six 4-H Club boys of Eastland county will grow six acres of Dwarf Yellow Milo in 1937. E. E. Blackwell grew this Dwarf Yellow Milo last year from registered seed secured from the Experiment Station. These grain sorghums are located in the following communities: Flatwood, Mangum, Romney, Colony and Kokomo.
