One State Can't Profit at Expense of Others

One reason why it is an advantage to have our republic split into 48 states is that individual states can make experiments in government which the nation as a whole could hardly dare to make.

Nebraska, for instance, can test out the one-house legislature, and Massachusetts can experiment with savings bank life insurance, and the rest of the country has a chance to see how these experiments work in actual prac-

Now it happens that some of the most instructive experiments of all are laws that never actually get passed. The legislators of a sovereign state occasionally get a brainstorm and bring in a bill that is simply fantastic. The bill may die, but the discussion it provokes and the prospects it opens can do all the other states a great deal of good.

Florida seems to be engaging in that kind of experiment right now, with a "state recovery act" which one candid Florida editor promptly rechristened "the Florida ruination bill."

This bill sets out to bar chain stores, but it goes several miles beyond the limit which binds most opponents of chain stores. It would not only prevent any retail merchant from operating more than one store anywhere in the state; it would bar the operation of any retail establishthe state; it would bar the operation of any retail establishment whose common stock was not wholly owned by per- BASEBALL KING CROWNER Eastland Woman's manent residents of Florida. This bill would wipe out chain stores all right, and do CALENDAR the job thoroughly enough to suit the most rabid of individualists. It would also drive some millions of dollars of "outside capital" straight out of Florida, put out of business some thriving concerns-which buy Florida matrials, hire considerable numbers of Florida citizens, and pay substantial taxes to the Floriad exchequer-and pro voke some of the leading buyers of typical Florida prod ucts, such as citrus fruits, to do their buying in some other

Considering the earnest way in which Florida bid for outside capital, it is extremely doubtful that this bil will ever become a law. But the mere fact that it is bein considered is instructive.

A good many of us often forget that all the states in the union hang together, economically. We get the idea that if we can just "keep money in the state" we shall prosper we; delude ourselves into thinking that we can in some way boost our state's prosperity at the expense of other states.

That line of thought leads directly to a bill such as this one proposed in Florida. If that 'sort of economics is sound, then the Florida bill is perfectly logical. And the next step after that would be to put up state tariff walls and insist that "foreigners" from the next state have passpors when they come to visit.

This country grew great and rich because its economy is not bound by any state laws. The fantastic Floridal proposal is a good example of the mess we could get into by forgetting that basic fact.

"Four old women robbed federal treasury." That DeGrassi speculated as to the reason for the weekly letter. It might be the man is lonesome, he said, or more probably he writes to remind himself of appoint-

After checking, DeGrassi dis covered that the person who mailed the letter left the address off the envelope.

ONCE upon a time "ham and eggs and coffee" was the American definition of breakfast. But today, no self-respecting egg would show its face without some kind of juice. The latest craze is fresh pear juice. There's also a run on pomegranate juice put up in small or large bottles, and

NEA Service Sports Writer IT is reported that Mr. Burleigh (I'd Just as Soon Leave, Anyway)

Grimes is keeping score on the number of base hits that bounce off the right field screen in Ebbets Field.

Under the present ground rules at the Flatbush Sanitarium, any drive striking said screen entitles the batter only to the number of bases he can make safely. Mr. Grimes would change that.

He has the notion that this screen is going to be quite an easy target for his topheavy left-hand batting order and for the first few weeks he is going to count the number of drives his bow bounce of the fance in comparison to the greener's totals.

off the fence in comparison to the enemies' totals.

And if the Dodgers dent the series oftener Mr. Grimes is going to notify the league that henceforth, hereafter, and until further notice any drive hitting the screen shall be and is hereby a home run.

THIS used to be the old ground rule at Flatbush until Casey Stengel found that in 1935 the visiting firemen practically tore the net-

"Of course," says Mr. Grimes, "my boys have got to show me beyond any doubt that they can hit the screen more often than the other guys. I think Heinie Manush will do it enough, all right, but I'll need more than just Heinie. If Winsett, Lavagetto, Brack, Bucher, and Phelps can bang balls off the netting, then I'll change the rule and make those drives home runs."

Mr. Grimes isn't by any manner of means the first baseball man to arrange his park for the benefit of his ball players. Why, only a few years ago when Al Simmons was sold to Chicago by Connie Mack, Mr. Louis Comiskey went to the trouble of digging up the home plate and moving it a little closer to the left field wall, hoping and thinking that the Poling Pole would belt out a flock of home

OLD Connie Mack, himself, wasn't above fixing up his park to aid

When long and lean Lefty Grove was rearing back and firing them in for the Athletics a few years back, Mr. Mack had his ground-keeper build up the Shibe Park pitching mound to the maximum. height of 15 inches above the home plate Indignant rival managers, sick of seeing Grove's fireball sweeping down on the batter from the clouds, claimed that Mr. Mack really had the mound higher than permitted by law.

Mr. Clark Griffith had different ideas when his speedball king, Walter Johnson, was reigning.

Sir Walter, you see, was so superior to his American League contemporaries that he needed no geological help, but, on the other hand, the Washington hitters, as ever, were rather weak. So Griff had the Washington pitching mound shaved down to the level of the rest of the infield, thus enabling the local boys to find the rival pitchers easier to hit. And that reminds me . . . I wonder if the Boston Red Sox ground they did last year so that it wouldn't be too fast for Mr. Joe Cronin, the shortstop?
